THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

Ribbons.

The illustration is from a set of ribbons and bows specially arranged by E. H. Hunt, Chicago, Ill., who makes a specialty of fine ribbons suitable for use in florists' stores. Mr. Hunt's educational examples of bows will be appreciated by many hundreds of florists. Many a man, and woman, too, often has considerable trouble in arranging out of the ordinary bows. There is, we may say, an endless variety of them. The present set will suffice for many designs made in almost all stores and in the homes of country florists.

The most of these are what are known as star and rosette bows; 1, 2 and 3 are more generally used for basket side bows; 3, 4, 10, 11, 13, 19 can be used on basket, wreath or almost any design where pendant effects are best; 6 is more suitable for bouquets; 20, 15, 14, 8, 7 are very good for box lids and short effects.

In New York here we have different methods of arranging bows. The "high bow" is very popular; instead of having the ribbon flat we make it stand up or out among the flowers, and in almost every case now a small silk tassel is introduced to give a finish to the bows. Usually the card is attached to these tassels, but we have recently gotten up a separate silk cord for the card.

The small ribbons up to 9 are used for various purposes, such as tying boxes, trimming plants with, etc.; from No. 12 to 22 are mostly used for general work; from 30 up to 60 and still higher are in general use in first class eastern stores. One very broad ribbon, even if the bow be short, is more effective than a screen of narrow ones. Of course, great care needs be exercised in what size ribbon is used and how to use it.

Ribbons have come to be a recognized factor in modern decorative work and when properly arranged, that is, in flowing heraldic bow and streamer, it is finely effective. Many a time a dash of color is wanted and flowers are often too expensive to use; that's where a modest use of ribbon is very valuable. Some florists have what we can only term ribbon fever; they are like the girl who decorates the coal scuttle; it is they who injure the ribbon trade, because people become disgusted with its inappropriate usage.

There will be plenty of berry red ribbon used this Christmas on wreath, bunch, plant and box; it adds to the festiveness of all that pertains to the season. Most certain it is that the plant basket trade will be larger than ever this Christmas, and almost every bow here shown can be used for trimming handles, etc. We hope to be able to again refer to and illustrate trimmings shortly; in the meantime be careful of colors, avoid fancy combinations and don't be afraid to buy. Color is more important than quality; it is the effect that most people want. IVERA.

ROSE NOTES.

Meteors.

The culture of this rose is so radically different from most other roses that it deserves a separate article. While quite hardy when planted outside, its proper treatment under glass more nearly approaches that of a hothouse plant than any other rose. While tea roses, such as Brides and Bridesmaids, can be made to produce in paying quantities at a temperature of 56 degrees, this rose requires a temperature of 68 to 70 degrees, rising in bright weather to 82 degrees. This high temperature calls for increased supplies of water and if the drainage be perfect it seldom suffers from overwatering.

Red spider is the worst enemy of this rose, not that it is any more a favorite than other roses, but because the high temperature is conducive to their rapid reproduction, the cuppy form of the older leaves affording a shelter which is difficult to reach with the syringe. Every bright day the house should be thoroughly syringed so that the under surfaces of the leaves be reached.

When in a healthful condition it is a vigorous grower with good root action and a gross feeder, requiring frequent and rich mulching and can use with advantage more liquid food and of greater strength than any other rose. During the winter months the strong canes which it makes from the bottom frequently fail to properly develop the bud. This is caused by strong feeding and an absence of sunlight; by pinching off the crown bud and allowing the lateral bud to develop it will, with a small loss of time, produce a good bloom. By the beginning of March this defect will entirely disappear.

In cutting the bloom it is best to cut low enough to leave at most two well developed leaves on the stem as this allows the eyes to break much stronger than if more are left, thus keeping clear of much of that small blind wood, or wood which will produce only short stems. To keep clear of black spot (to which this rose is rather susceptible) they should have plenty of ventilation and if possible a little left on all night, this seems a waste of fuel but it is the only way to keep the plants in good condition and produce good blooms. The house should be kept scrupulously clean; all ripe and decaying leaves gathered and burned; stems and branches tied neatly up so that the air can circulate freely among the leaves, making it easier to reach them with the syringe. A slight fumigating, and painting sulphur on the pipes once a week will hold greenfly and mildew in check. RIBES.

IN THE ADIRONDACKS.

[Dedicated to Edwin Lonsdale, E. G. Hill and other mighty Nimrods.]

It is reported in today's papers that not less than 6,000 deer have fallen prey to the hunter's gun in the "North Woods" of New York state during the past two months, and all this without the aid of hounds or "jack shooting," but even at this seemingly heavy rate of slaughter the deer are on the increase and this is not surprising to one who has been in the heart of the wilderness, for the Adirondack mountains, valleys, lakes and swamps cover an area of 1,500 square miles, piereed here and there by the iron road. There are many little towns and villages, many more mountain hotels for the accommodation of hunters, and near the picturesque lakes there are palatial hotels where the New York millionaire goes to fish or shoot or breathe pure air at prices ranging from $5 to $20 a day.

Rich men are buying up immense tracts of land. We camped on the borders of William Rockefeller's estate of 60,000 acres. The more such purchases the better for the state and the Adirondacks, for these men will preserve the timber and game. Already, too much destruction has gone on with the timber. First the noble hemlock was felled for its bark alone; the spruce, to make pulp for paper; the birch, to be converted into any kind of hardwood you choose, for it is susceptible of being stained into mahogany or anything else, and so what were once majestic forests are in too many places dismal wastes. There appears to be several species of spruce, very little pine, and of hardwoods, beech, maple and birch are the principal ones.

One hundred and eighty miles north of Utica you have to get out of a comfortable sleeper and go another thirty-two miles on a road called the New York & Ottawa. You might as well call it the Ottawa & Omaha, for all it has to do with the great city, but it does reach Ottawa, Ont., occasionally. At Spring Cove is a shanty which answers for station, village store, post office and lounging place for charcoal burners. On buckboards and wagons of various designs you begin a mountain climb of five miles, but don't think for a moment that the horses are not all right. With the exception of the hind wheel of the heaviest wagon dropping into a hole eighteen inches deep and throwing the youngest member onto his head in the ditch the journey was uneventful.

The log house hotel and its frame annex across the road are on a plateau several hundred feet above the railroad, and within half a mile to the west rises abruptly Blue Mountain. I suspect there are a good many blue mountains in this region but this one rises 1,100 feet above our hotel. The proprietor gives you a hearty welcome in his own peculiar style. To the stranger it is only a vigorous shake of the hand and a slap on the shoulder; to old acquaintances it is a one minute "catch as catch can" bout. But it's all meant as a hearty welcome and you can see through it all that good business is raising his animal spirits and when you pay your bill the hilarity has somewhat subsided. A tall and rather delicate looking woman is his wife, a good wife and mother without doubt, and at breakfast you are asked by a pretty brunette of fifteen, tall and graceful, a woman in stature, what you will have, "pork chops, mutton chops, venison steak," with slight variations at other meals.

As we saw some fine sheep nibbling among the boulders in a clearing just before we reached the hotel we knew that the mutton would be a safe proposition. Just let me say, and I have had considerable experience in rural villages, that you are generally safe with mutton and more particularly pork. Farmer's pork is a treat because pigs are mostly raised to be eaten, but save us from the village beef. Man by nature is not a vegetarian or he would not be given canine teeth; but the native beef of many of our villages would drive us to live on bread alone. The board was good, so were the rooms. You breathe fresh air all day, you walk sufficiently to be dead tired, you sleep like a baby and eat like a parish minister when invited to your house.

The guides who drive the deer "your way" or accompany you in a still hunt have nothing of the picturesque wild west about them. They are tame, civil fellows who wear clothes that can't be spoiled. Tobacco is their constant solace, and the deer they shot and the deer they didn't shoot, is the everlasting topic.

A small (about 20x14) log school house was planted a little off the road about a quarter of a mile from the hotel. The school master had one eye and one scholar, and she was the pretty girl who waited on table, the landlord's daughter. School didn't keep that week because the professor acted as one of the guides. Now, you will say I have introduced some fiction—not a line. The state of New York pays that young man to teach that one scholar; why there are no more is simply because there are no more children within five miles. This young principal I found a most intelligent young man, pleasant and cultivated in conversation. I have frequently noticed that people living in the rural districts of our state, and doubtless other states, though lacking the flippant manners of our city boys and girls and perhaps considered hayseeds by them, are invariably better read and informed. They have the long winter evenings to read and they get the weekly papers and "read, mark, and inwardly digest," while the average city boys or girls read the red letter headlines of the yellow journals and think they have absorbed it all. Don't make fun of the log school houses, they have produced presidents of the United States and the leading men of our great cities have nearly all been country born boys.

Blue Mountain, Spring Cove, Franklin Co., N. Y., is a good place, boys, if you want deer; there are lots of them. There were thirteen of us in the party and every man brought home a deer, but the killing was not evenly divided, some killed three and others none. Your humble servant was among the latter simply because they did not run his way; he never saw one alive although within 300 yards of the first big buck when he was killed.

There are three requisites required to shoot deer—endurance, patience and a good eye. You must not get lazy. You must sit on a log or stand on a rock for three hours and scarcely wink, you must not smoke and it is even worse to eat onions for breakfast for the deer have wonderful noses. This is when the guides are driving the woods and you expect the deer to pass you. Still hunting is when you walk softly through the woods on the track of a deer or expect to find them dozing. It is called still hunting because in the majority of cases at sunset you are still hunting. The sagacity of this agile, timid creature is remarkable; of the scores of deer that the guides started the great majority ran almost over several German brewers in our party who could not hit the side of a barn, but they avoided the good shots, hence none fell to my rifle.

Sitting on a moss covered log for three hours (by the bye, always take water proof pants) gives you cold feet and a nummy spine, and if it was not that you were straining your eye all the time you would get very weary and lonesome. You have a splendid opportunity to think of your past and future sins. The silence is dismal; a wee, small ground mouse runs along a log; a red squirrel hunts for the beech nuts, but all in silence. The only sound is a pretty little woodpecker tapping on some hollow tree, and so still is nature here that his little bill makes a report like a cooper at a barrel, and you are glad of it. The harsh screech of a blue jay only makes things more dismal for they are the denizens of the deep woods. I thought of the immortal lines many times as the shadows deepened:

Now fades the glimmering landscape on the sight,
And all the world a solemn stillness holds,
Save where yon beetle drones his weary flight
And drowsy tinkling lulls the distant folds.

The fold was too distant. How I did wish that a large black bear had come to interview me. It would have given me exercise either in shooting, sprinting or climbing, but no such luck, I was too plainly dressed. The game went up to the fellows who had hunting caps, wonderful jackets, corduroy pants, woollen socks up to their knees and remarkable boots. They were picturesque and attractive; I had simply an old Pan-American suit and rubber shoes.

There was one thing in the outfit of each that all agreed was essential; no one showed it openly to his neighbor but in the morning start you could see a small flask being stored away in some convenient pocket. I remarked to several, "You take a little with you?" and received always the same reply, "Yes, I don't care for it but it's best to take a little along in case of accident or chill." I don't blame anyone under the circumstances and I found the chill came on pretty regularly, about every twenty minutes.

Deer hunting or the ardor for it must be acquired; feathered game or even rabbits, if plenty, will suit me better, but I can understand that when a noble buck falls to your gun you feel rewarded for days of travel, chills and fatigue. I am not sure but what I shall try again, but in five days I was glad to get back to the city of Utica and the genial company of Peter Crowe and his roses.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CARNATION NOTES.

Propagating.

It is not too early to begin propagating some varieties, and many growers put in their main batch of cuttings during the first half of December. It certainly pays to propagate early if you are willing to shift the young plants as needed and if necessary plant them out of 3½ or 4-inch pots. That is, of course, taking it for granted that you believe in housing your carnations early in July or at least before August 15, but if you do not care to plant until after September 1st you had better wait until in January or early February with most varieties. Such varieties as Mrs. Bradt and any other slow grower, however, should be made up and gotten started at once so as to have good plants to start with.

Remember always, that it pays to have the plant make its growth before it is time to house it, so that it can go right to blooming after being planted inside instead of having first to make its growth. If you have only a few plants of some new variety that is proving itself to be a good one for you to grow in quantity you can put in all the spare cuttings now and thus save a good many cuttings that may have to be picked with the blooms anyway. If the variety grows rapidly you can take the tip out of the young plant by the middle of January and root it and it will make an excellent plant for next season, but you must be careful that it does not shoot up to bloom before you take it off.

If you have no propagating house built especially for that purpose you need not worry, as a light north bench in a carnation house is an ideal place to root carnation cuttings. Clear off the bench of all rubbish or dirt and wash the boards clean. After allowing them to dry for a few hours give a good coat of hot lime wash and put it on thick. That will kill whatever fungus may be in the boards, especially if they are not new, and incidentally it will kill whatever insects may be lurking in the cracks between the boards. Allow that to dry thoroughly before putting on any sand.

About four inches of sand is enough when loose as it should be, about three inches after being packed solid. We like to use a sharp gray sand in which you can see the grains distinctly much better than that fine dust-like sand commonly used along the lake and rivers. It allows the water to drain away much better and keeps sweet much longer, frequently being fit to use for two or three batches of cuttings if care is taken to leave no litter when taking out cuttings. It should be allowed to dry thoroughly each time, though, before being used over again, and it should not be used over if there was the least sign of fungus among the cuttings it contained the last time it was used. The coarse grades of lake or river sand and a clean gray bank sand are equally good but we do not like to use a yellow bank sand as fungus will start quicker in it. Many growers or propagators are not near particular enough about the sand they use and when the cuttings rot by the thousands they wonder what caused it and many a case of stemrot in the summer or fall could easily be traced back to fungus in the cutting bench.

Hang a curtain of muslin in front of the bench, tacked to the roof and reaching to the top of the bench, to keep off not only the sun but also draughts which are as harmful on bright warm days as the sunshine. The old-fashioned way of laying newspapers on the cuttings has many disadvantages and should not be practiced unless absolutely necessary. If the hot sun is allowed to shine on the paper it will get quite warm underneath it, and the paper laying close to the sand will keep the cuttings too dark. The cuttings will be much healthier and stronger if they can have the full daylight right along while they are rooting, merely being careful to keep off the sunshine and draughts of air.

A. F. J. BAUR.

KINDLY insert my classified advs. for another month and add the two enclosed. I was very much pleased with results.—A. SCHMITT, Glenville, O.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Chrysanthemums.

Chrysanthemums are often much neglected as soon as the flowers are gone—that is the provision for future stock. If grown in pots they can be stood in some cool light house, cool as you like until end of February, when they can be given more heat and will give you lots of cuttings. If all your plants have been grown on benches you will want to get them out of the way at once. A flat of three or four inches of soil holding a dozen roots will give you lots of cuttings. If in a still larger way and you want to have cuttings to sell you can plant out a few rows of each kind on a bench similar to the one they have flowered on.

Still another plan followed by some of the principal specialists is to root a few of the earliest and strongest cuttings or suckers in October and November and when rooted plant them out on a good light bench in four or five inches of rich soil. These young plants grow vigorously and if you have given them room, 7 or 8 inches apart, you can get any amount of the best cuttings from them, and as late as you like in the season.

Pot Roses for Easter.

When speaking of Easter plants last week I forgot a very important one, the hybrid perpetual rose in pots. Thousands of these are now sold at Easter. There is no doubt that a rose that has been summered over in pots outside and made a good growth is the ideal plant to force at any time during winter, but they should be worth a good deal more than the plants lifted from the field this fall, and the latter are good enough for Easter. You have most likely received and potted them two or three weeks ago. If not, it is not too late now.

I do not think it much of an advantage to pot these before you bring them into the house, but a good deal does depend on how you treat them before you begin to give them any heat. If you potted them the middle of this month you would most likely plunge them in a cold-frame—a good place. They are better not cut down, or only just the long tops taken off, till you bring them in.

A little frost does not in the least hurt but it is well not to let it be too severe, and above all don't let them freeze hard while the roots are dry. This is a mistake too often made with other plants and trees besides roses. In hard winters our fruit and ornamental trees always suffer most when it is a dry fall. Trees want to go to rest with their roots wet. You can see swamps all round us where the beech and maple stand in two feet of water all winter. If this happened in June it would quickly kill them, so don't subject your potted roses to hard frost if the soil is dry.

If not potted I would just as soon heel them in in deep boxes in a cold-frame till New Year's, when it will be time to start them going in a night temperature of 40 degrees. When you prune them don't cut them down too low—say six inches, or even eight inches of a good cane, should be left. Some recent experiences with hardy roses, which I believe were the finest ever seen on this side of the Atlantic (excuse the apparent conceit, but I know it's a fact), proved to me that where the plants had made a splendid growth the previous year you could cut them down to within two eyes or two inches of the ground. The tremendous vigor of the roots pushed out eyes where no eyes were seen, but with these pot-grown plants that have not active roots to begin with, there is little to push out the eyes and growth. The best buds must be left and they are not always so near the base of the plant.

Hydrangeas.

It is time now to put your hydrangeas on the bench for Easter. They should have been as well ripened as possible and a little frost will have done them no harm. If they were shifted late out of doors they can do without a larger pot but if cramped for room give them a 2 inch larger pot. The first month or up to New Year's a house about 45 to 50 degrees at night will do very well and after that you can raise the temperature.

Fuchsias.

If you still grow that good old plant the fuchsia, you should start the plants that you summered over out of doors. If they have been resting beneath the bench all the better. Shake off most of the soil, repot, cutting back to ripe healthy growth and put into a warm house. Syringe often and you will soon have them bristling with young tender growth that roots like a verbena, and make the only fuchsia plants. The ends of the flowering shoots you often see propagated are an abomination and will never make a plant. William Scott.

FEEDING CARNATIONS.

I have a bench of Scotts that were benched September 10th, using two parts garden soil and one part well rotted manure, with a liberal application of bone meal and wood ashes half and half.

I gave them bone meal and wood ashes again about October 15th and now the bench looks fine with a good crop of buds coming along. The roots are showing above the surface all through the bed.

Would this be a good time to give a mulch, or what should be done? Is it advisable to stir up the surface when the bed is in this condition? W. B.

If W. B.'s carnation soil contains over 30 percent of manure with a liberal addition of bone meal and wood ashes, and if the plants are growing nicely now I would advise him to let well enough alone. A very surprising thing is that they are looking well at all as such a mixture of soil is entirely too strong for carnations. When I read the first part of his letter I said to myself, "A clear case of over-feeding," and I certainly would expect such results from such a mixture.

I would advise W. B. to be very careful during the next three months with the watering, because although the plants have made a good growth it has been made in favorable weather conditions and it is quite possible that during the dark winter months when the plants do not require so much food it may be too strong for them. A soil with so much manure in it will sour very quickly and cause the plants to suffer from what may be termed a sour stomach. Therefore, I would advise running them just a little on the dry side so as to keep good control over the moisture at all times. Let them get well on the dry side before watering and then water so that it will go clear through to the bottom. Give plenty of air on all favorable occasions but maintain a rather high temperature, about 55 degrees at night and 65 to 70 in the daytime for Scott.

I certainly would not think of stirring the soil when the surface is filled with small rootlets as that would considerably check the plants and the greatest danger W. B.'s plants are in right now is getting a severe check in some way and as a result a sour stomach.

Would advise W. B. to screen a lot of good potting soil through a half-inch mesh and cover the bench about one-quarter of an inch thick, which will be sufficient covering for the small rootlets, and during the winter sprinkle a little air slaked lime between the plants every couple of weeks to help keep the soil sweet and the growth solid. The blooms will have more substance, too.

If the proportion of manure had been one part manure to four parts of soil, as it should have been, then a light mulch would be the proper thing, but to add extra food to a soil which is already too rich would most certainly cause failure. A. F. J. BAUR.

[Was not the mixing of wood ashes with the bone meal an error, though it was probably fortunate that it was done in this case, seeing the bone meal was used at all? As we understand it, the wood ashes, when in direct contact with the bone, tend to liberate the ammonia in the latter, which escapes into the air instead of being utilized by the plants.—Ed.]

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

New York, Nov. 23d.—A. C. Schroeter & Son, Bayonne, N. J., exhibited Golden Nugget, a light bronze variety which scored commercial scale 69 points.

The chrysanthemum exhibited by Robert G. Carey, Chestnut Hill, before the Philadelphia committee, on November 9th, should be Bentley, instead of Bentley as published.

The announcement has already been made that November 30th would be the last day that the various committees at the different centers would be on hand to examine seedlings and sports. To judge late seedlings it has been the custom for the committees to meet on following Saturdays when requested. Arrangements can be made for those having late blooms to show if a letter to that effect be addressed to any of the chairmen of the different committees in good time to give them an opportunity to get their committees together.

Edward Jones, gardener to Mrs. J. W. M. Cardeza, Germantown, Pa., registers a Japanese seedling chrysanthemum, named T. D. M. Cardeza; color, yellow; shape and habit of flower, the same as Golden Wedding.

POT CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Fair profit was made this year on pot mums and to be without them would be unfortunate. Varieties needing little or no staking and of easy culture were: Yellow—Golden Trophy and October Sunshine. White—Midge, May Foster and Ivory. Pink—Pink Ivory and Mispah. Red—John Schrimpton. These can be grown and well done without artificial support. I understand that N. Smith & Son are now working up a set in all colors, early and late varieties, strong enough to carry their flowers well and be symmetrical and profitably grown unstaked.

The soil should be a good porous loam, enriched a year previous to using. And by leaving room at the top of the pot for a dressing of fine bone flour and soil after or just before buds are set, the labor of feeding is avoided. A mixture composed of well rotted manure, bone flour and a little lime, and turned for a week, I have found excellent.

Strong, sturdy April or May struck cuttings, three around a 4-inch pot, and frequently pinched up to July 4 or a little later, potting only when the plants are well rooted, growing the plants in a frame, or plunged out of doors in a well drained situation, give good results. A frame with sash ready to put on at a moment's notice in case of heavy rains is best. ART.

BULBS FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING.

BY HENRY F. MICHELL.

[Read before the Germantown Hort. Society.]

"Bulbs For Outdoor Planting" is the subject your honorable committee has asked me to say a few words about to the members and friends of the Germantown Horticultural Society.

Now (about Nov. 10) is a most excellent time to start planting bulbs outdoors, and if severe weather does not come upon us until Dec. 10, bulb planting can be done for this whole month. It is not advisable to plant bulbs out of doors much before this, as too much growth may be produced during open and warm autumn weather, which will injure the bloom next spring.

The Philadelphia City Forester, Mr. Lewis, has for the past five years planted the beds in Independence Square and other parks after November 15, and all who have seen the gorgeous displays at the above mentioned places concede that the sixty thousand bulbs which the city purchases and plants every year cannot be improved upon.

Most bulbs do best if planted about 5 inches deep. The soil for hyacinths and tulips should be rather rich, and if possible rather a sandy loam; however, bulbs seem to flourish in almost any soil, excepting where it is exceptionally full of clay. Narcissus are somewhat different; they thrive, bloom and increase in poor soil better than in rich manured soils.

For planting of beds of bulbs I am rather inclined to recommend close planting. Not from an increased sale standpoint, but for the reason that if hyacinths are planted 4 inches apart, and tulips 3 to 3½ inches apart, narcissus 4 inches apart, they will produce a massive effect, show a spirit of liberality of the planter, and when they are in their full bloom of beauty the winds will not snap off the flower stalks, but merely waft them slightly to and fro. I do not wish, however, to say that this is the only way, as a beautiful effect is also obtained by 6-inch apart planting, and, of course, a hundred or a thousand bulbs will go much farther.

To illustrate the popularity of bulbs the City of Baltimore ordered and planted this autumn 190,000 bulbs in all their different parks. Philadelphians who may chance to be in Baltimore the latter part of next April should not fail to visit the grand display which this large number of bulbs is sure to produce, as the varieties of hyacinths, tulips, etc., were of the choicest selection.

At the approach of severe weather cover up the bulbs with long manure about 3 inches deep; this covering must not be removed next spring until nearly all the danger of heavy frost is over, as injury would result to the tender growth if allowed to become frozen after being wrapped up and sheltered all winter.

I shall not attempt to go into a full list of the varieties which produce good results, but will confine myself, owing to a lack of time, to a few specials which always have and always will give satisfaction for outdoor planting:

Best Hyacinths.

Deep red, Robert Steiger.
Deep pink, Gertrude.
Light pink, Gigantea.
Pure white, Alba Superbissima.
Rose white, Grandeur a Merveille.
Light blue, Chas. Dickens.
Rich blue, Grand Maitre.
Deep blue, King of Blues.

Best Tulips.

Yellow, Chrysolora and Pottebakker.
Scarlet, Belle Alliance and Vermillion Brilliant.
White, La Reine and Pottebakker.
Pink, Rosa Mundi and Cottage Maid.
Red with gold border, Kaiserskroon.

Very handsome and showy beds of tulips are produced if planted in a superfine mixture; hardly two alike in color and shadings.

Hyacinth beds are also attractive in a good mixture, or in separate shades, which are usually much lower in price than named varieties, although the quality can be good as well.

Narcissus, the most satisfactory varieties are the Double Von Sion daffodil, also the Trumpet Major single daffodil. The Poeticus or Pheasant's Eye should not be omitted when planting either in beds or in clusters.

Much more could be said about bulbs, but, as I remarked before, lack of time in preparing these few remarks unfortunately will compel me to close.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business in cut flowers is brisk with a tendency towards higher prices, some lines of stock being rather scarce. Beauties are very fine. A few have brought $5 a dozen; $3 and $4 are the ordinary prices on selected long-stemmed flowers. Brides and Maids are bringing $5 and $6 a hundred; $8 has been obtained for a few fine blooms; seconds bring $3 and $4. The other tea roses are bringing about the same prices for the same grades. Liberty has brought as high as $1.50 a dozen. Valley brings $3, $4 and $5 a hundred. Carnations continue scarce; $1.50 to $2.00 a hundred buys good ordinary stock, while fancy blooms command $3 and $4 a hundred. Violets are also scarce, perhaps scarcer would better convey the idea. Doubles are worth $1 to $1.25 a hundred, singles about 50 cents a hundred; $1.00 a hundred was paid for some very fine singles. Smilax brings 12 to 15 cents a string. Asparagus plumosus is in demand at 50 cents a string or bunch of sprays.

Chrysanthemums are selling well. Choice medium sized blooms range from $1.00 to $2.00 a dozen. Edward Reid obtained the latter price for one hundred white Bonnaffons on Monday. Chadwick brings $3 a dozen. Gold Mine and Eaton bring that figure and more when extra fine.

The Philadelphia Market. View in Edward Reid's.

Various Notes.

Leo Niessen has received some nice sweet peas and expects to have a good supply of these dainty flowers for Christmas.

Roman hyacinths are another addition to the cut flower list; they were a trifle short in stem at first but are now longer with flowers of good quality.

Fred Ehret is receiving some fine Brides and Maids, good flowers on stout stems, clothed with luxuriant foliage.

A show problem: Where was William Munro?

Geo. M. Moss has been handling a fine grade of carnations all fall. Flora Hill and Ethel Crocker are two of his best varieties.

Sunrise is making quite a name for itself as a new rose. The flowers are about the size of Perle, resembling Sunset in color with the addition of a tinge of pink which adds a wonderful amount of life to the effect, especially under artificial light.

The big guns said Sunrise was a good rose spoiled by a single defect, a crook in the stem just under the bud. So they decided not to push it. Fortunately the rose is having a further trial. It has been planted on side benches in several places and the stuff coming in now is excellent and ought to be even better by New Year's.

The American Rose Company sent some nice blooms of their new rose Ivory to Henry F. Michell this week. They ornament the show window, together with that wonderful bed of red and white hyacinths in bloom. Speaking of the latter Mr. Michell laughingly said a New York seedsman had congratulated him on getting them in bloom so early.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions for Nov. 18-23.

Quite a bit of change during the above mentioned week but, unfortunately, not too much of the kind you carry in your pocket because collections are surely very hard.

Chrysanthemums gradually decrease in numbers but are holding out better than I really expected. Surely Thanksgiving will knock the stuffing out of the chrysanthemum crop as well as out of the turkey's crop! Red roses have fallen off a bit as well as the pink and white ones, but there is no evidence of a scarcity of either, except of red ones for the Yale-Harvard game for which red mums were plentiful if you had the price. From $2 to $3 per doz. was the selling price on fairly good ones. But I presume Boston buyers think they got their money's worth, the help of the frowsy boys in crimson. Violets bobbed up to $1.25 and $1.50 during the week and although Saturday's supply was enormous, still more could have been sold, showing Yale had many "true-blue" followers. Carnations hardly held their ground during the week but prices did not break. They are really not over plentiful and prices must advance on everything, practically, with the decrease of chrysanthemums. Buyers can feel quite sure of lilies and paper white narcissus, and hyacinths are waking up.

Various Notes.

The week in question records the birth of the most important change in the retail arrangement of the city that has ever taken place, probably, in the same length of time. James McMulkin, for years one of T. F. Galvin's strongest men and the general manager of the Back Bay store ever since its establishment, has severed his connection with Mr. Galvin and is to begin for himself in the large store near Park square, formerly occupied by James Delay & Sons. He makes the store very much larger, however, by annexing the store on Park square formerly occupied by the Crawford Shoe Co., the removal of a partition being all that was necessary. All this makes a bold move which under wrong management would make a gigantic failure. But Mr. McMulkin does not believe in wrong management and I hear of no one predicting anything but success.

An old gentleman upon hearing of the burning of a certain barn, remarked, "No doubt done by some one chawing tobacker," which was the strangest result of that bad habit on record until last week, when Al Hutson from the oblique greenhouses on the hills of Brighton, went downtown to get a load of tobacco stems. While in the store some one lifted his imported overcoat, silk muffler, gloves, etc., not even stopping to leave for Hutson the four or five dollars he had just placed in the little pocket. In a great hurry to teach him a lesson of humility, forbearance and endurance, as well as to call his attention to the evils of pride and the use of tobacco. The "no money" down clothiers would be my salvation in such a case.

BUFFALO.

Business, except for the funerals of some prominent citizens, has been rather quiet on the whole. Teas and dinners are becoming more frequent and weddings of the third and fourth magnitude are daily occurring. Of course I speak of them relative to their importance to the florist; to the contracting parties they are always of the first magnitude.

We were very glad indeed to see our friend, Andy Adams, hustling last week with some great big designs. He needed a step ladder to put in the words "Will See You Later," in some of the largest pieces so that will give you an idea of their immensity.

I said last week that the local supply of violets was poor. I find that Harmon & Burr, of Darien, Genesee Co., are on top again with a fine lot and we are rejoiced to know it for they are worthy men and continually industrious. Like others they have had their trouble for two or three years and the little black fly has been the cause. That little black fly is the cause of much profanity and scarcity of violets. It needs a lot of fighting.

Every day I live the truth impresses itself more that nearly the greatest part of what we call gardening is a continual persistent and courageous fight against the hundred and one insects and fungi that want to live on our cultivated plants. How and when to plant, to tie, to syringe and water, the temperature for night and day, is all simple, you can learn it by heart in a few days, but the energy to keep down mildew, aphis, spider, mice, rats and moles requires an all round man.

Buffalo, alas, can not have a chrysanthemum show. We tried it three years ago for the last time and it cost a few of us one dollar apiece and a bad cold, so now we sit calmly down and read of the shows in other cities. In place of a united or public exhibition where all could if they would join in, our florists have been giving shows of their own. We have not heard that it needed any extra car service to accommodate the public on these days but no doubt they were all attractive and brought a good many deadheads to the respective stores. Zimmerman started in at his Chippewa street place, giving a flower and a Wiener to all callers. Rebstock was next with a posy and a smile. Anderson fell in line with a blossom and a text from the Bible, and W. J. Palmer & Son made a fine show and gave the callers some sweet music.

You can't say anything against these shows, or alleged shows, because many other classes of business have their openings. Yet I like the public exhibition better and wherever it is held in any city all should join in to the best of their ability. It is selfish and small not to do it. It is simply that you think more of your own advancement and gain than you do of the general good and welfare of the profession, which we all ought to be proud to call our business.

THURSDAY.

On Thursday came the first of the competitions in table decorations, chrysanthemums to be used. The first prize of $100 was taken by W. L. Rock, the second prize of $50 went to Aug. S. Swanson (St. Paul), the third of $35 to Samuel Murray, and the fourth of $15 to Arthur Newell.

Messrs. Smith & Son also exhibited a brilliant yellow which has been named Mrs. Frank J. Taggart, after the wife of the director of the exhibition, and a splendid bronze, which has been named Edgar Sanders, after the dean of the Chicago florists.

In the general classes the competitors were J. C. Vaughan, Chicago, and Wm. Schray & Son, St. Louis.

SATURDAY.

In the second and final competition in table decorations the first prize of $100 was won by Wm. L. Rock with an arrangement of orchids and adiantum. The second prize of $50 went to Samuel Murray, for an arrangement of orchids and Farleyense ferns. The third prize of $30 was awarded to Aug. Swanson, who used orchids, cosmos and ferns. Fourth, $15, went to Arthur Newell, for an arrangement of American Beauty roses and ferns.

Best vase of chrysanthemums arranged for effect, 1st, $50, Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich.; 2nd, $35, Samuel Murray; 3rd, $15, W. L. Rock.

NOTES.

The prizes were all paid in full Saturday night, and it took a lot of money to do it. Sam Murray heads the list with nearly $700, and the others range from $500 down. Notwithstanding the unusual expenses of the exhibition and the liberal prizes the week ends with a big balance in the treasury and next year there will be larger prizes and a show that will make this one look like the "infant" it really is—for this was Kansas City's first flower show.

The city was "flower mad" all the week. Every store of any account was decorated.

The florists offered liberal prizes for the five best and 500 must have competed. It was a great scheme; it filled the pockets of the local florists, while it made the city a vast flower garden. Some of the exhibits were very elaborate. Novelty, public interest and business ambition, these were the foundation stones of this successful show.

The fish pond and the jokers was a very interesting feature of the big show. E. K. Bruce of Thornburg, Iowa, supplied the finny visitors and his mimic "lake" was constantly surrounded. He must have had shoals of all kinds of fish for he was still catching them on Monday afternoon, and began to empty the waters on Sunday evening. Mr. Lindsay, of Thorpe & Co., one of the "practical jokers" was paying "George Washington" "haf a dollah" to carefully return the fish to the pond about as fast as they were removed. Bruce may be fishing yet, for at 2 o'clock Monday he had more fish to catch than he had at 10 in the morning.

In the center of the pond was a "wooded island" where Buckbee, the severest practical joker of the lot, stranded the representative of the South Park Floral Co., Mr. Heller, and forced him to swim to land.

It would take a book to record all the jokes played upon Uncle John and Edgar Sanders and some others, but the most dangerous of these artists were Buckbee, Lindsay and Elmer Smith, and what they didn't do it would be hard to tell.

Good nature prevailed, however, and everybody stayed happy till the closing ceremonies.

Many a bumper was drained to the healths of the Kansas Cityans, and at the farewell banquet the final ceremonies were moistened with champagne.

The American Beauties sent by Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, retained their color to the very end of the show. Mr. Wilcox did not intend to exhibit forty-eight hours before the show began, and telegraphed his entries at the last moment, so he had no special stock ready. Next year he proposes to be ready for business and take more first prizes. With his magnificent plant of over half a million square feet of glass, he is very apt to do it.

Over 50,000 people attended the show, a result unequaled in the history of similar exhibitions. No small part of this success is due to the fact that Kansas City has a loyal, liberal daily press that is not afraid to boom local enterprises and maintain public interest in them.

A gold medal was awarded the American Rose Co., Washington, D. C., for its display of the new rose, Ivory or White Golden Gate.

The exhibition of 1902 will be held the first week in November.

E. G. Uihlein, of Chicago, sent a cake of ice in which a collection of orchid flowers had been frozen.

Samuel Murray gave a complimentary banquet to a few of the visiting florists who remained in the city for the closing ceremonies of the flower show at the Baltimore, the guest list including Uncle John Thorpe, Edgar Sanders, of Chicago; Elmer Smith, of Michigan, and J. Austin Shaw, of New York. The spread was an elaborate one. Mr. Sanders sang his perennial song, "The Little Brown Jug," and Mr. Shaw read an original poem, written for the occasion.

On Friday a tallyho ride was given the visitors by Samuel Murray and Arthur Newell, and they were shown the city and the local greenhouses until darkness intervened. The florists visited were Humfeld, who has 14,000 square feet devoted mainly to carnations; Brown, who grows a general line of stock in 25,000 square feet of glass, doing also quite a shipping trade; Barbe, whose 35,000 square feet are devoted to cut flowers; Murray, where the fine prize-winning plants at the show were grown and where palms, lilies, azaleas and other plants fill the 15,000 square feet of glass; Barnes and Ducre, who grow general stocks. The visitors are indebted to Messrs. Murray and Newell for this very pleasant memory of the hilly city, as well as for many other courtesies.

On Thursday a dozen or more of the visiting florists accepted the hospitality of Mr. Kellogg, and visited his immense plant at Pleasant Hill, some thirty-five miles out of the city. Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, was the only lady visitor and chaperoned the party admirably. An hour's trip by train and a mile drive brought us to the 200,000 square feet of glass that cover the hillside and produce a daily output of over 5,000 roses for the K. C. and St. L. markets. Half of Mr. Kellogg's product is used by his large retail business in Kansas City. His first houses, built eleven years ago, still stand as mementoes of what a Missourian can show of rapid progress. Next year 50,000 more square feet will be added. Forty hands are constantly employed, and the growth of Mr. Kellogg's business is constant and steady.

He ships cut flowers to Texas and Colorado daily and is reaching out for a share of the wholesale business of the south and west. His new houses are all 250 by 31, and are models, having all the latest improvements. The water question is the only serious one he has to encounter, and artesian wells do not touch the spot. Artificial ponds have to be depended on. Many of the roses are planted in solid beds and are giving good results, as are his carnations planted in the same way. Mr. Kellogg has 100 acres of land under cultivation, is proprietor of the new opera house at Pleasant Hill, and one of the best citizens, taking constant interest in public improvements. The visitors were welcomed by Mrs. Kellogg and her daughters, and after an elaborate spread they came back to the flower show, in ample time for the evening session.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower market has been much livelier the past week and prices are beginning to look up. With fair weather a good trade is anticipated for Thanksgiving Day. During the past ten days there has been an unusual demand for wedding and reception decorations and funeral designs. The West End florists seem to have the bulk of this kind of work. The downtown stores report a good counter trade and a fair demand for funeral work. The wholesale men report a good shipping trade and from the number of advance orders for Thanksgiving Day expect a very busy week.

The Grand avenue stores have their show windows filled with fine blooming plants. Mr. George Waldbart has a great display in his fine store, as have Mrs. Ayers and Mary Ostertag. Ellison & Tesson, who have opened their store on the same street, are also making a bid with a fine display for the West End trade. In the extreme West End Fred Weber, Theo. Miller, C. C. Sanders and Miss Newman say that trade is increasing each week and that the outlook for good business this winter is excellent. Among the downtown florists C. Young & Sons Co., Ostertag Bros., Miss Theresa, Fred Foster, North Floral Co., Ellison & Tesson, Riessen Floral Co. and, not forgetting myself, are all pleased with the fall trade and expect a good profitable Thanksgiving business. The South and North End florists, who are mostly growers, also say that trade has been very good with them this fall.

Thanksgiving Day prices will look about like this: Beauties, extra select, $4 to $5 per doz.; seconds, $1.50 to $2.50; Meteors, Brides, Maids and Gates from $5 to $8; Perles and Woottons, $3 to $4 per 100. Carnations, fancy, $3 to $4; seconds, $1.50 to $2. Valley, $4 to $5. Romans and paper whites, $3 and $4. Chrysanthemums from $5 to $20. Violets, California, 75 cents to $1; small single, 25 to 50 cents. Adiantum, $1. Smilax, $12.50 and $15 per 100.

Should flowers be plentiful, prices will be somewhat lower, but in all probability the above prices will stick as we are due for cold and cloudy weather, so the weather man reports today.

The Shaw Banquet.

Invitations are out for the twelfth annual banquet to gardeners, florists and nurserymen, as provided for in the will of Henry Shaw. The banquet will be given at the Mercantile Club, Saturday evening, December 7 at 7 o'clock.

World's Fair.

Mr. George E. Kessler, the landscape architect for the World's Fair, arrived in the city today from his home in Kansas City, bringing with him plans of the landscape effects for the World's Fair site. Director Taylor reports that December 20 will be ground-breaking day with suitable ceremonies.

Personal Items.

John W. King, with Frank M. Ellis, has been sick the past week and is not able to attend to business, but from latest reports he will be on deck for Thanksgiving Day.

Mr. James Gurney of Tower Grove Park has returned from Kansas City, where he acted as judge at the flower show in that city.

Henry Berning and wife, who attended the Kansas City flower show, have returned, much pleased with their trip.

Herbert Heller of New Castle, Ind., passed through St. Louis Saturday night on his way home from the Kansas City show. Herbert, with a broad smile on his face, reported eight prizes out of eight entries. "They can't beat us."

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The shipping demand for Thanksgiving was decidedly strong and as the preceding week of dark weather had reduced the cut there was a greater scarcity than anticipated, especially in carnations and Beauties. Prices therefore held well up to quotations and all stock was well cleaned up at these figures. Chrysanthemums helped out considerably and there were a good many in the market, though not enough of white and pink sorts. First class flowers brought $3 a dozen readily, which price has not been easily obtained before since the very early part of the season. At the same time prices were hardly up to those of the same time last year.

Taken altogether conditions have been very satisfactory with the single exception that more good stock could have been sold if to be had.

Up to Tuesday afternoon the local retailers had bought little or nothing for their Thanksgiving trade, and they were evidently holding off waiting for a slump at the last moment.

Various Items.

McKellar & Winterson find that orders for holiday supplies are coming in earlier than usual. They are already working overtime on orders and the season promises to break all records on these goods.

Wietor Bros. are much impressed with Norway and believe it to be the coming white carnation. Their opinion of Prosperity has also gone away up as a result of their experience with it so far this season.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says: "Please read the sign." Ask Scott.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. has purchased 30 acres of land at Edgebrook on the St. Paul road and intends to soon erect a range of glass on same. It will be used to grow stock to feed their present place, at which room is now at a premium on account of their rapidly expanding business.

The dark weather has considerably reduced the cut of roses generally but Peter Reinberg sees no diminution in the cut of Liberty and Golden Gate. He finds these two roses remarkably steady bloomers and that Liberty is almost if not quite as prolific as Meteor on the average with much less inclination to crop.

Fred C. Ottenbacher, with the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove for the last seven years, will be married Dec. 15 to Miss Minnie Jones, of Niles.

George Reinberg has placed an order for 1,000 boxes of glass and will soon start to build a new block of houses covering a space of 150x300. This block will be devoted to Beauties, Brides and Maids. Otto Frese, manager of his city salesroom, reports a phenomenal Thanksgiving trade much ahead of former seasons.

John Schneider, of Kansas City, was in town early this week buying stock for Thanksgiving. He made J. A. Budlong's his headquarters as usual.

Bert C. Coles, of Quincy, Mich., is in the city visiting C. S. Stewart, with Frank Garland.

The bowlers "passed up" the usual games Tuesday of this week on account of its being so near to Thanksgiving and every one in the trade busy.

George Collins, foreman for Peter Reinberg, says that though their roses are largely off crop now they expect to have a large crop of Beauties for the holidays. He has found it a very good season for Beauties.

John Walker, of Walker & McLean, Youngstown, O., was a welcome visitor this week. He has a fine color, probably derived from the iron in the atmosphere of the thriving city of metal workers from which he now hails.

Larry Kelly, with John Muno, has been confined to his home by illness and it is said, is threatened with pneumonia.

QUACK GRASS.

Can you tell me how to destroy quack grass? I understand that salt will do it, but how much should be used per acre, and would it be best to plow it in?

New York. M. C. B.

Quack or couch grass (Triticum repens) is a pestiferous weed, very hard to eradicate. In England it is one of the worst weed pests the farmer has to contend with.

In hard walks it can be killed by frequent applications of salt, sprinkled just after a rain or after a watering. By frequent is meant as often as the grass appears and before it has a chance to make growth. Salt, however, should never be applied when its washings from rain storms will run over turf.

In arable land it is not practicable to kill couch grass by salting. Plow or dig the ground over and keep under clean cultivation until the grass roots are dead, for the grass will die provided the hoe is run through the ground once a week, or as often as the point of a spear of grass appears. A crop may be grown, say corn, to help the expense account; but faithful vigilance for one season is the price of ridding a piece of ground of couch grass. J. A. PETTIGREW.

CLEVELAND.

Various Items.

Business has been slowly improving the past week or so. We have had a hard killing frost, just what was needed to stimulate the demand for cut flowers. Mums, of course, take the lead, with roses and carnations striving hard for second place in the race for popularity.

It has been my experience this season, and I think the majority of the growers here will bear me out, that the better quality of chrysanthemums, and of course the larger sizes, have sold better and brought more money than they ever did before, most of the buyers preferring to pay the price asked for a large flower rather than take a smaller one. The fad for large mums is not dying out here but is rather on the increase.

On Saturday was held the annual mum show at Sheriff street market house. The display was very fine, but the day being stormy the sales were poor. There were no prizes given this year, but the competition for arrangement, variety and size of blooms was just as great as heretofore. The best displays were made in the following order: S. N. Pentecost, G. M. Naumann, Casper Aul, A. Steyn, A. Schmitt, H. Hart, Mrs. Utzinger and J. Mollenkopf. G. M. Naumann had some very fine Golden Wedding, Timothy Eaton and Pennsylvania; Casper Aul was strong on Col. Appleton, and S. N. Pentecost displayed Golden Wedding, pink and white Deans and white and yellow Jerome Jones.

The J. M. Gasser Co. gave their annual chrysanthemum show last week and had mums in great quantity, but they made a specialty of table decorations, two of the tables being exceptionally fine. One table was of orchids and maidenhair ferns in a birch log, the whole surrounded by violets, tied in bunches with violet ribbons, to be used as favors. The other a centerpiece of lily of the valley, surrounded by a garland of rosebuds. There was also a bridal canopy of palms and ferns.

This week, Tuesday (the 19th), Smith & Fetters have their annual opening, of which I will speak in my next week's notes.

A Visit to Mentor and Painesville.

I visited Mentor and Painesville last week, stopping at C. Hagenberger's, where I found Carl, as he is familiarly called, packing ferns and palms preparatory to shipping. But he had time to take me around and dwell on the new carnations. He gives all the new ones a trial. His mums were very good.

I next called on C. Merkel & Son. Here I found everything in the pink of condition, their roses showing a fine growth and a great many ready to cut. Their carnations are not showing very many buds or blooms yet, they having picked off all the blooming shoots when planting them in. Their one house of violets looked very fine, indeed. Here is where you can see the mum in all its glory. While they do not raise very many, their one house was a sight. Their soil seems to be especially adapted for them.

I next visited Painesville, where the Storrs & Harrison Co. are located. I was taken in hand by Mr. Robert George who, by the way, was elected vice president and general manager at the last meeting of the stockholders, and was taken around through the different departments. They grow roses in small pots by the thousands for mail trade, having about 400,000 H. P. and Crimson Ramblers. They have handled this year over a carload of bulbs and 7,000 azaleas, and they shipped during October ninety-eight carloads of ornamental trees and nursery stock. Their packing, shipping and storing rooms cover about two acres and are the best equipped in America. Ornamental trees and shrubs of all kinds have sold well this year. Their shipping trade in hardy shrubs and trees was about 40 per cent greater in October than any previous month and November gives promise of beating last month. TENEP.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The past week was a gala one for this lively town and a most gratifying one for those who assumed the financial responsibilities of the great show. The weather was all that could be desired, both for the presentation of cut blooms and for the comfort of the people. The increasing attendance, even up to a late hour on Saturday, showed how anxious the masses were to see the wonderful display, and the management decided to continue the show over Sunday. There was no less than fifty thousand paid admissions to Convention Hall last week at the popular price of 25c. In potted plants there were few outside of the chrysanthemums because none were prepared for the exhibition.

The quality of cut blooms was par excellence and with plenty of floor space enabled the exhibitors to display them to the best advantage. It was a great show of choice blooms and floral decora-

To Mr. Taggart and his untiring efforts we are indebted for our first great horticultural exhibition, which has helped to make Kansas City famous and the florists will hereafter tip their hats to that enterprising man.

NEW ORLEANS.

The annual fall flower show of the New Orleans Hort. Society was one of the best ever given by the society and the attendance compared favorably with that at previous exhibitions, though still short of what might be hoped.

The J. Steckler Seed Co., was the largest exhibitor and took the largest number of premiums, winning 21 firsts and 5 seconds. Harry Papworth took 4 firsts and 7 seconds; J. St. Mard, 2 seconds; Abele Bros., 6 firsts and 3 seconds; E. Valdejo, 4 firsts and 5 seconds; C. W. Eichling, 1 second; D. Newsham, 2 firsts and 1 second; Chas. Eble, 2 firsts; J. H. Menard, 2 seconds. Special mention for meritorious exhibits were given Chas. Eble, D. Newsham, C. W. Eichling, H. de Limon and B. Flasdick.

ENNIS, TEX.—The annual fair and flower show was very successful. The exhibitors were almost wholly amateurs but the display was good and many premiums were awarded.

DETROIT.

The flower show of the Detroit Florists' Club was, as one of the daily papers puts it, "A carnival of color and fragrance." It was a very creditable exhibition and the local florists to whose efforts its success was due are entitled to much praise.

In the chrysanthemum plant classes the leading exhibitors were F. Holznagle, Detroit Floral Co., Geo. A. Rackham, J. K. Stock, Harry J. Smith, H. G. Fruck and T. F. Brown, and the prizes were divided between them.

In chrysanthemum cut blooms the prize winners were E. G. Hill & Co., J. F. Sullivan, J. K. Stock, John E. Carey, J. Breitmeyer & Sons, F. Holznagle, Herman Knope, Asman & Dunn and H. J. Smith.

In miscellaneous plants the winners of prizes were J. K. Stock, Geo. A. Rackham, J. F. Sullivan, B. Schroeter, Asman & Dunn, Detroit Floral Co., H. C. Fruck (gardener to J. H. Berry), Henry G. Flammer, G. H. Taepke and Chas. Warncke.

Klagge, James Taylor and Beard Bros. In violets Robt. Klagge made a clean sweep of the firsts, Geo. Reynolds taking two seconds. Breitmeyer & Sons were first on bridal bouquet and on basket.

The judges were Adam Graham, Cleveland; Geo. Bayer, Toledo, and W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.

McKELLAR & WINTERSON

CINCINNATI.

Cold, dark and foggy weather is having a marked effect upon the market. Stock of every description is scarce and prices are going skyward. With this shortage of stock and Thanksgiving right upon us there is no telling where the rise in the market will stop.

Chrysanthemums are about on their last legs. Most of the growers hereabouts are cleaning up what few are left, though a few growers still have good late ones coming on. Small mums put up in bunches of twenty-five sell at 35 cents to $1 per bunch. Medium grades are selling for $1 to $2 per dozen, and fancies from $2 to $3. There were very few blooms that sold for more than $3 per dozen in this market this season.

Roses of all kinds are very short in supply. Brides and Bridesmaids are now quoted at from 3 to 6 cents; Meteors, 3 to 8 cents; Beauties, 75 cents to $5 per dozen. Some fine Liberties are to be seen with good long stems. Price quoted is 4 to 8 cents. Some Marquise Litta are in evidence but it is not taken up very readily by the storemen. Golden Gate is showing up in larger quantities and of better quality than seen in this market before. There is a place for this rose if well grown, and the fact that retailers are calling for it shows that the public like it; 4 to 8 cents is the price at present.

The demand for violets is growing heavier every day and it seems that the supply is shortening. Good ones will bring from 75 cents to $1.50 per 100, both in single and double.

Romans and narcissus are meeting with steady demand at from 3 to 4 cents. Valley is also selling well at 4 cents for extra good stock. Smilax is in better supply at 12½ and 15 cents per string. Asparagus, 60 cents; Eastern ferns, $1.50 per 1,000; Galax leaves, green and bronze, $1 per 1,000; Leucothe sprays, 50 to 75 cents per 100. Adiantum, $1 to $1.50 per 100. The foregoing prices being those in effect Nov 25.

Last Saturday the weather was cold and a light rain fell most of the day. This put a damper on business in the Jabez Elliott flower market, and if it had not been for a brisk wholesale trade many a grower would have carried home most of his stock.

J. A. Peterson has just returned from a business trip and reports satisfactory sales.

I greatly regret to report the death of the wife of J. W. Rodgers, which occurred on Sunday last. The funeral will take place Nov. 28. Interment at Spring Grove cemetery. The sympathy of the craft is extended to Mr. Rodgers.

One chrysanthemum from N. Smith & Son, Adrian, was before the committee this week. Cross between Golden Wedding and Goldmine; resembles both varieties; planted June 20; height 5 ft.; terminal bud taken Sept. 20; cut Nov. 21. This is the best seedling of a commercial variety sent here this season. It has a beautiful yellow color, with a soft velvety glow which I have never seen equaled. Good stem and foliage with medium-sized flower and one that will sell well, and for a commercial grower it appears to be a fine thing.

Mr. Eschner, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, and Mrs. Eschner, were in the city Saturday.

MILWAUKEE.

C. C. Pollworth returned from the north and reports that green picking has ceased, owing to heavy snow in some localities. This will undoubtedly cause a rise in the price of green.

Mr. Pollworth also put in several days deer hunting and succeeded in killing two fine bucks weighing over 200 pounds each.

It is reported that H. V. Hunkel will be married shortly.

John Evans, of Richmond, Ind., and A. C. Brown, of Brown & Canfield, Springfield, Ill., were recent visitors.

The past week was one of continued darkness and the outlook for good supply of stock for Thanksgiving is not very bright. The principal shortage will be in carnations and violets. Some good Bonnaffon are still coming in and there are still enough mums of inferior grade to go around. In roses, Bridesmaid shows the effect of dark weather, being light in color and soft. Shipping demand is brisk and prices firm.

A noticeable feature in the trade this fall was the light demand and low prices on mum plants, which was very discouraging to the growers. There is some talk of trying to hold a mum show next fall to stimulate demand.

W. G. Schucht, representing C. C. Pollworth Co., writes from Delaware stating that choice holly is not overplentiful and in many sections it is poorly berried.

H. Macherey has opened a store on Third street. This makes four stores within a few blocks in this locality.

DUTY ON METAL DESIGNS.

Under a decision of the United States General Appraisers at New York, delivered Nov. 19, "Memorial designs, consisting of wreaths or garlands composed of metal, or of metal and porcelain, painted to imitate the natural growths and designed for use in the ornamentation of vaults and graves, are dutiable as artificial leaves and flowers, under paragraph 425, act of July 24, 1897.—G. A. 647 and G. A. 2444 followed."

The duty in this class is 50 per cent ad valorem. The importers claimed they were dutiable at 45 per cent under paragraph 193, or at 20 per cent under section 6. Their protest was overruled.

REMOVING SHADING.

Will some one tell me how to most economically clean glass of shading that was composed of whiting and kerosene?

S. P.

Burlington, Vt.—The annual flower show at the Armory was very successful. The principal exhibitors from other cities were the Waban Rose Conservatories, of Natick, Mass.; the Cottage Gardens, of Queens, L. I.; the Florham Farms, of Madison, N. J.; E. W. Pierce & Co., of Waltham, Mass.; Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., and Mrs. Billings, of Woodstock. Lager & Hurrell showed a collection of orchids that surpassed anything of the kind ever seen here before.

Erie, Pa.—S. Alfred Baur made a special display of chrysanthemums at his store last week that attracted many visitors and which was greatly praised by the local press.

THE presented illustration is that of a model florist's establishment, situated in a town of 6 000 inhabitants, which supports two public schools, a high school, a military school and a ladies' conservatory of music, these two latter having an attendance of 250 each. Receptions calling for an extensive use of cut flowers are frequent. Although having increased his greenhouse capacity from three to six thousand square feet during the last four years, the owner is a frequent buyer in the St. Louis and Chicago markets. Having established a fine trade in a dozen nearby towns, it will be necessary to build another range of houses, in anticipation of which the owner bought last year three more acres of land for this purpose. The establishment is located on principal street and only three blocks from court house; it consists of three greenhouses, a fine office and several other buildings; also a new seven-room cottage. A driveway leads direct to office: there is also a fine fountain, city water, etc. Business in the last few years has increased 65 per cent., as can be shown by owner's books.

Owing to reasons, which will be given to a prospective buyer, the owner has decided to sell this very promising business, and any one looking for a well established and prosperous stand at a moderate figure will make no mistake in entering into correspondence with

NEW FORCING ROSE HELEN GOULD.

(INTRODUCED BY THE DINGEE & CONARD CO.)

READ WHAT OTHERS SAY:

"Has no Hybrid Tea faults and never goes dormant. A very rapid grower, an excessive bloomer, as free as Golden Gate, a beautiful deep pink color, almost cherry red; flower full double to the center: plentiful foliage. An ideal rose for the grower who retails. We have a house of it 240 feet long, making a most wonderful growth. The commercial grower who buys Balduin for Helen Gould will be badly 'done.'"—AMERICAN ROSE COMPANY.

"Freely tested by us last winter and proved to be a gem. Remarkable for vigor, color, size, form, fragrance and keeping qualities. The demand for it will be large."—WABAN ROSE CONSERVATORIES.

BUY IT DIRECT FROM THE INTRODUCERS.

We have 40,000 plants of this superb new Rose ready for delivery. It will take first rank among great roses. It produces more perfect salable flowers to the square foot than any other rose of its color now in commerce. It has no weak spots. Blooms all the time. No rose in the list can compare with it in vigor of growth. The flowers are as beautifully made as Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. Grand foliage. A splendid keeper. Every grower should have it. Of the many famous roses we have introduced we believe HELEN GOULD will prove to be the most valuable in every way, especially for forcing. This statement bears greater significance in view of the value of the varieties we have already introduced. The price is so low every grower can afford to give it a trial. It will not disappoint you. Prices:—Strong healthy plants from 2½-inch pots, for immediate delivery, $2.10 per doz. postpaid; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000, by express f. o. b. West Grove.

OMAHA.

I am sorry I cannot give a description of a chrysanthemum show such as is held in almost every other American city, but we hope to give a crackerjack next year, when our new Auditorium will be finished. Omaha has not up to this time had a hall large enough to make a creditable display.

Speaking of trade in general, it is first rate; no very great demand for roses, carnations or mums, but a steady trade which you can almost count on. Prices at wholesale are about as follows: Mums, $6 to $20 per 100; carnations, $2 to $3 per 100; roses, $3 to $4; violets, $1 per 100.

The Florists' Club at its last meeting decided to hold a banquet the first week in December. Also to devote one night of the month to the bowling alleys. Two teams captained by L. Henderson and J. J. Hess, bowled three games November 14, the result being that L. Henderson and his men won two games and Hess' men won their game by one pin.

James Hadkinson is back from Buffalo. He says Omaha is good enough for him this winter.

Peterson Bros. of Omaha have the finest mums in pots seen here for several years.

George Zimmer has added a house 96x17 to his plant.

J. Austin Shaw was a recent visitor.

J. H. B.

Chestnut Hill, Pa.—At the second annual exhibition of the Chestnut Hill Hort. Society there was an excellent display, the exhibitors being mainly the private gardeners in the vicinity. About $1,000 was distributed in prizes. The leading prize winners were Frank Gould, John Cullen, Jos. Monahan, James Ward, Edw. Jones, P. J. Kenney, H. W. Carey, Wm. Kleinheinz, Wm. Roberts, George Hunt, G. Manvel, H. Harris and H. B. Curran. There was a large attendance of society people.

"NOT MUCH!"

DENVER, COLO.

Various Items.

The weather still continues warm and bright, but the demand for cut flowers is much better than it was ten days ago and consequently the florists are all feeling better.

There being no chrysanthemum show here this fall, the Park Floral Co. had one by themselves, filling an entire storeroom, and it was a very fine display. Among the mums, Timothy Eaton and Golden Wedding seemed to be the finest, though Col. Appleton was hard to beat, and there were some elegant roses, some of the same kind with which they took first premium at the Kansas City show. Among the elegant assortment of plants the cyclamens were noticeable, both for plant and flower.

At the last meeting of the Denver Florists' Club it was unanimously decided to hold a spring flower show in the latter part of April, 1902, and a list of twenty-one names was secured as a guarantee for the premium list. Another matter over which the members were very enthusiastic was the one brought up by our president, A. J. Graham, who since his eastern trip has become imbued with the idea that we ought to have a meeting of the S. A. F. out here in Denver. It was the opinion of all that it was just the thing, and while there was nothing done formally, still the yeast was put into the club. Denver used to be, in the long ago (say 25 or 30 years) away out of civilization, but now we have the Injuns out of the streets and it is only a couple of days from anywhere. Thorne.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., register rose Dorothy Perkins, a seedling of 1898 of R. Wichuraiana; thought to have been hybridized with pollen from Mme. Gabriel Luizet; growth 10 to 15 feet in a season; decidedly upright, making it adaptable as a pillar rose. Flowers shell pink, fading to deep rose; very double, about two inches across, and borne in open racemes in clusters of 10 to 50; fragrant; petals frequently rolled back and crinkled. Buds pointed. Foliage leathery, dark green. Very hardy.

Schmidt & Botley, Springfield, O., register the following new roses:

Atlas (H. T.) from an unknown seedling crossed with La France. Shows La France blood in both growth and foliage. Buds large; flowers large, double and of two shades of pink; lighter than La France.

Nestor (H. T.) (Magna Charta x Belle Siebrecht). Flowers large, double, blooming on the ends of long canes. Foliage resembles Belle Siebrecht. Buds pointed.

America (H. T.) (Duke of Edinburgh x Meteor). Buds large, pointed. Flowers large, double, fragrant. Color, deep scarlet crimson. Foliage, large, dark, leathery.

The three above named roses are all strong growers and free bloomers, the last named especially free. They all originated with E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind. Wm. J. Stewart, Secretary.

BUTTE, MONT.

The Butte Floral Co. gave a chrysanthemum show in their store recently that attracted many visitors. They had about 1,600 blooms on exhibition, including all the best standard varieties, and quite a number of pot plants. It was a fine display and would have surprised some of the eastern florists, no doubt, to have seen such a splendid showing of fine flowers and plants away up here in the Rocky Mountains. The local people turned out in force and the attendance was immense.

All the plants and flowers were raised at the company's greenhouses at Gregson Springs, where Billy Day says he has the devil as his fireman. There are no fires around the plant, the entire heating being done with water from the hot springs. Even the water tower is boxed in and heated by this natural hot water to keep the pipes from freezing and everything comfortable. When this natural hot water enters the heating pipes at the houses it has a temperature of 198 degrees. There is a gasoline pumping engine to pump water into the tank when there is not enough wind for the windmill, and this is the only approach to a fire on the place. The hot water from the springs contains too much soda to use in watering when cool, though it can be used when largely diluted with other water.

The greenhouses are up-to-date in every respect and the stock is in fine condition. The carnations are as good as can be seen anywhere and the mums are strictly fancy. There are six houses and a lean-to. Next summer the company will erect four more larger houses and one will be devoted entirely to the Liberty rose.

The store is now in charge of Mr. O. A. C. Oehmler, formerly of New York and Washington, and it has been remodeled since he took charge, being quite up-to-date in its appointments. The fittings equal those of many New York stores and the scenery outside, with snow-capped mountains in the distance, is a decided improvement over a view of the Sixth Ave. elevated.

The company is composed of James H. King, formerly a banker of Philipsburg, and Wm. L. Day, formerly of Law Bros. & Day. They report business excellent and beyond expectations.

Law Bros. are also doing a good business. There are only three flower stores here, the State Nursery having a branch here. The Columbia Gardens, a summer resort ten miles from the city, have some glass. RAMBLER.

WACO, TEX.—The sixth annual chrysanthemum show of the Texas State Floral Society brought out an excellent display. Though most of the exhibits were from local amateurs, there were some good flowers and plants from outside points, these being mainly from James Morton, Clarksville, Tenn.; Nanz & Neuner, Louisville, Ky., and E. H. Michel, St. Louis. Henry Nanz, of Louisville, Ky., was judge. The leading winners of prizes in the open to all classes were Anna West, James Wolfe, W. L. Reese, James Morton, E. H. Michel. Nanz & Neuner's display was not for competition.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—The Walter Mott Seed & Bulb Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000.

The Mrs. E. A. Nelson

bids fair to become the commercial standard pink carnation. It is a healthy grower, a free and continuous bloomer, and it is sure to thrive wherever grown. Read the following from a prominent grower who tested one dozen plants:

SHARON, PA., November 19th, 1901.

S. S. SKIDELSKY. DEAR SIR: The twelve plants of the "Nelson" I have made fine plants in the field and is certainly a healthy grower, with good habit, recovering very quickly after transplanting, making a quick growth and coming into bloom early. In short, the Nelson is an ideal grower. The stem is elegant, the flower fine, the color is good and one that will sell. I believe the Nelson is all right all around.

Very respectfully, JOHN MURCHIE.

Various Items.

Since the advent of mums the demand for roses and carnations has fallen off considerably. Mums this year were of superior quality and very rich in coloring, but the interest in them seems to be dying out. Perhaps they are being overdone; demand was slower and prices not nearly so good as last year. They are nearly over and no one is sorry.

Trade altogether does not compare favorably with the same season last year. Roses and carnations are looking well and there will be plenty of all kinds of stock for Thanksgiving. Violets are looking well for a heavy cut in the near future.

The Dunkley Floral Co. are cutting some fine roses and carnations. Their stock looks well with good prospects for the winter.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. have had their store tastefully redecorated inside and out. Their carnation crop looks as if it would be right in on time for the holidays. Like most other growers they have a "seedling" bee buzzing in their bonnet. Roses are doing well and promise a fine cut of high grade stock later on. They have one house planted to Adiantum from which they are cutting quantities of fine fronds.

We had a visit from Mr. Skidelsky, who is booking large orders for the new carnation, Nelson. RIBES.

"Oriole" is registered by John B. Goetz, Saginaw, W. S., Mich. Color a glowing scarlet showing well under artificial light. Strong clove scented, fringed petals, flowers averaging three inches in diameter. The earliest and freest scarlet in cultivation, opening quick, no cropper, always in bloom. Stems stiff and wiry, eighteen to twenty-four inches long, habit strong and upright in growth. A good calyx and the variety is free from disease. Has been grown four years.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—There has been a very interesting and instructive exhibition of chrysanthemums at the greenhouses of the Department of Public Grounds near the Washington monument and it has been viewed by a host of visitors during the past few weeks.

ISLIP, N. Y.—A chrysanthemum show was held here November 8, the exhibitors being all local people. The prize-winners were Bradish Johnson, Harry Rollins, F. C. Lawrence and S. T. Peters.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL by WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 large pages (same size as those of the Florists' Review), and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half-tone engravings. It is and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Christmas Plants.

Plants are used now quite largely as holiday gifts. Not so much so perhaps as at Easter, yet many houses near our large cities are now filled with beautiful flowering plants for this trade. With us the four principal plants are the azalea, cyclamen, poinsettia and Begonia Lorraine.

Azaleas.

The azalea needs a strong heat to get them well out by Christmas. Ten days more would help us very much, particularly with the beautiful deep rose pink Simon Mardner, about the only colored one worth forcing. Deutsche Perle will open its beautiful flowers readily for us by Christmas. Be sure not to let these azaleas that you are keeping in so strong a heat suffer for water. Give them an abundance of water and plenty of syringing. A moist atmosphere will help much in opening the buds. Perhaps you have noticed that when an azalea is in bloom and it gets a severe drying out the petals shrivel up and will never assume their shape of beauty again. So never neglect the watering.

Cyclamen.

The cyclamen does best in a temperature of 55. You can give them 10 degrees higher to force out the flowers, but a very few days would ruin them and they never should be sold from such a temperature. A light, airy house with the temperature at 50 to 55 degrees finishes off the cyclamen in fine style. And when well grown it is almost or quite the most beautiful flowering plant that is grown, and with any kind of care it is a good house plant; one of the best. Tell your patrons to keep it in the window and as far from the radiator or fire as possible.

The people in this country live in very warm houses; our living room we consider chilly if it is not 70, and when we come downstairs to breakfast we prefer to have it 80. I am not going to pretend, because I don't know, whether this is unhealthy or not. People live just as long as they do in the country, where the wood stove goes out at night, water freezes in your bedroom and "bairnies cuddle doon" close to keep warm. But this great, steady heat that we have in city houses is not good for plants, especially the colder blooded ones. A rubber, pandanus or a kentia likes the heat, but it's hard on the cyclamen, azalea, and almost all flowering plants.

Begonia Lorraine.

Begonia Lorraine is no longer a very expensive plant. We have grown them in a night temperature of 65 degrees. They should for a week or two before Christmas have a lower temperature, and as much ventilation as it is possible to give. The degree of temperature is not of so much consequence as the ventilation. Give them all you can on favorable days and then they will be more satisfactory or last at least a week in fair order.

Poinsettias.

We have persistently grown the poinsettia for the last thirty years and now it is with us almost the leading Christmas plant. But the style of plant has very much changed. For many years we grew but the single stemmed plant in a 5 or 6-inch pot, but they no longer are the favorite. Last year we had several hundred that grew 6 and 7 feet high and so did our neighbor's. They were early propagated, it is true, but that did not entirely account for it. This year we have not one over 30 inches, and hundreds not over a foot.

I have often given the advice never to disturb the roots of poinsettias after the first of October, and that is good advice, for they will assuredly lose the foliage, but there is no harm in squeezing four or five plants into a pan a day or so before you sell or deliver them. They will lose their leaves in ten days anyway, and those you have just transplanted will lose them no sooner. But don't be doing it ten days before Christmas, or they will be in a state of collapse just when you want them at their best. We put half a dozen plants a foot high in large round baskets and with a dollar's worth of ribbon to match the scarlet flower they go at $8 and $10. Some want 5 or 6 plants in a 12-inch azalea pot, and more still are sold with us in 10 and 12-inch pans in which 10 or 12 small dwarf plants have been grown.

There are two causes of their losing their leaves. A low temperature and starving for root room. If healthy and vigorous they will do with a lower temperature, but they should never be below 60 degrees. If you think they are suffering for more root room give them liquid manure, weak but at every watering. We find for cutting that the pot-grown flowers last much better than those grown on benches or solid beds.

The wilting of the bracts (they are not petals) is one of the worst faults of the poinsettia as a cut flower. When wanted, cut them the night before and put the stems in water and keep them in a warm room. An ice box would be the very worst place for them.

Decorative Plants.

If you are not well supplied with a general assortment of decorative plants, you should get them at once and not wait till Christmas eve. There is always a good sale for a nice ficus, Boston fern, and several other ferns; one of the best is Cyrtomium falcatum in a 5 or 6-inch pot; it is a splendid house plant, and so is Polypodium aureum. When Peter Crowe, of New Chrysanthemum Convention Hall.

Utica, sends out his Adiantum Bardii there will be a great fern for the house, for I saw it growing in the windows as I walked the streets of Utica a few days ago.

A. cuneatum is not a good plant for the dwelling house. Great plant as the Boston fern is. I hear occasionally the remark: "I am a little tired of that Boston fern." Then there is Pandanus utilis and Veitchii, and the kentias and arecas. You cannot make a mistake in buying these, because unlike flowering plants they are growing more valuable all the time, if they don't go off at the expected date. William Scott.

NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

We present herewith engravings from photographs of three new chrysanthemums exhibited this year by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich.

Convention Hall is pure white and was the winner of the $200 prize as the best seedling at the Kansas City show. It is from The Queen x Merza and resembles The Queen in growth. The outer petals are tubular, the others broad and regularly incurving. Height 4 feet. The flower shown was cut Nov. 5.

Adrian is a very closely incurved creamy white Japanese. Height 4½ feet. Flower cut Nov. 10. This was scored 87 points by the Philadelphia committee of the Chrysanthemum Society.

Edgar Sanders is a fine exhibition variety with broad incurving petals. Hicks Arnold x Nyanza. Height 4½ feet. Cut Nov. 10.

New Chrysanthemum Adrian.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Now that the flower shows are over for this fall we can better compare varieties and form an idea which are the most desirable for both exhibition and commercial purposes.

In yellow the early mid season R. Hooper Pearson was a fine variety for us, all being good blooms except that two or three percent were under size. The stem is good, the foliage good and the color excellent. A fine keeper and a good shipper.

Col. Appleton is a beautiful flower and a good keeper and fairly good shipper. There has been some criticism of its stem. This difficulty must arise from keeping it too long as it has an ideal stem when grown to single stems, and used when ready. It is too early to be at its best at "show time."

I find at the shows that the growers are not pleased with Mrs. E. D. Smith. As a rule it has burned for most of them, although Mr. Elmer Smith, of Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., had some very good ones at the shows that were not burned. But they were not so large as those shown by the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind. Mr. Smith said that Mr. Hill and ourselves had overfed it, as Mrs. E. D. Smith would not stand feeding after it commenced to make its bud. I do not think it will be a profitable variety for the general trade to grow.

In Goldmine I saw some fine blooms at the Kansas City show. But the stem is at fault; it does not hold the flower up as it should. Too much of the parent, Sunderbruch, in it to make it a good keeper although a beautiful color and fine size.

Golden Wedding I think as a rule has been better grown this fall than usual. At least at several of the shows there have been fine specimen blooms of it. The stem and flower is fine but a little short on foliage, as the leaves are so small.

Of course Bonnaffon is a general favorite, both to the grower and retailer, as it produces a large percentage of fine flowers, is easily handled, as it does not bruise readily, and satisfactory to the customer as it is a good keeper.

The new variety, Golden Beauty, a fine late one for Thanksgiving, I think is going to be quite an acquisition. It makes a fine flower, a good rich warm yellow, stems of about three feet high, and fairly good foliage. Good for single stem.

In white there is nothing equal to Timothy Eaton. At the flower shows this fall, even among the newer varieties it was a drawing card for the public at every show. It proves to be an excellent keeper as well. Wherever the class called for white and Timothy Eaton was shown, which it invariably was, it was usually given first prize. If some one would raise us a pink variety of the Timothy Eaton type, they would long be remembered and their name would be ever in the minds of the busy florist.

For late varieties we consider the Jones family unrivaled. We have pure white, light yellow, deep golden yellow, bronze and pink of fairest form, large size, fine foliage and stiff stems. For those who can spare the room until Dec. 1 this must be a profitable variety, as it makes a large per cent of fine flowers.

The flower shows are undoubtedly a means of education to the general public as well as the visiting florists, and a great incentive to the trade. There are always queer questions asked which often show a great ignorance of floriculture. This is more especially true where cities are holding their first show. We of course are asked all manner of questions. Here is one: A lady accosted me, saying, "Would you please tell me where the mum chrysanthemum is?" After I explained to her the derivation of the word and made her understand they were all "mums" and suggested maybe it was the Timothy Eaton variety she was particularly anxious to see and suggested showing it to her, she said, "Oh, well, she was in a great hurry to catch the train and since it was all the same she wouldn't wait."

Now that the season is over we have concluded that for another year we will grow the following varieties, named in their order of successive development:

In White—White Fitzwygram, Bergman, Primo, Robinson, Ivory, Mayflower, Timothy Eaton, Princess Bassaraba, Western King, Chadwick and Jones.

In yellow—Yellow Fitzwygram, R. Hooper Pearson, Col. Appleton, Bonnaffon, Smith, Goldmine, Jones, Bassett, Golden Beauty.

In pink—Lady Harriett, Dalskov, Mrs. Gougan, Mary Hill, Perrin, Autumn Glory, Pink Jones.

In red—Mrs. Drexel, Malcolm Lamond.

M. S. Vesey.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY OF AMERICA.

Following are the reports of the committees judging seedlings and sports:

No. 29-1, also by same exhibitors, scored 72 points commercial scale, 74 points exhibition scale.

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 23.—Nathan Smith & Son exhibited Mrs. F. J. Taggart, yellow, Japanese, reflexed, scoring 85 points commercial scale. (Golden Wedding x Goldmine.)

Edwin Lonsdale, Secretary.

CARNATION NOTES.

Bone and Wood Ashes.

In regard to mixing wood ashes with bone meal I would say that circumstances alter cases. It is generally considered that wood ashes or lime will liberate the ammonia contained in the bone and allow it to escape as gas. This would cause us to refrain from mixing the two alone and allowing the mixture to stand any length of time. In fact we never mix these two fertilizers as we prefer to use them separately when using them for top dressing, but when mixing up a lot of soil for filling the benches there is no reason why all of the above fertilizers should not be mixed into the soil at the same time. The soil will absorb all the ammonia or other properties escaping from the fertilizers and there is no danger of anything going to waste in that way. W. B. made no mistake in mixing them into the soil unless he put in too much, as he did of the manure.

Propagating.

With the cutting bench ready to receive the cuttings the next thing to do is to select the cuttings and get them into the sand at once. We prefer if possible to take them off the plants in the morning if the day is bright, but on cloudy days it makes no difference what time of day you take them off. There is a wide difference between what one grower thinks is the best cutting and what another grower will tell you is the only cutting to strike if you want good stock for next year. And yet another will tell you that it makes no difference whether you take the side shoots from the blooming stems or the young blooming shoots before they begin to shoot up.

We prefer the side shoots from the lower part of the flowering stems for several reasons. We believe that if you keep on taking the young flowering shoots you will in course of a few seasons have plants that will run to grass instead of bloom. Then again, the side shoots are usually better matured and will make better, bushier plants, because the joints are short and the eyes close together and they usually have a good heel, which is always a good thing in a cutting. Another reason is that you will be almost certain to get your cuttings from plants that are bloomers and not from plants that may already have a tendency to run to grass instead of bloom. I must say, though, that the above is merely a theory of ours, as we have never actually tested it and know of no one else who has done so. We do know, however, that the side shoots from up near the bud will keep running into bud instead of making growth, and considering all we think our theory is about correct.

One of the most important things in selecting cuttings is to select none from diseased plants. Although the cuttings may root and oftentimes seemingly outgrow the disease, and you will think you are rid of it, yet the time comes when you will see that very same disease again. You can also oftentimes improve a variety by selecting cuttings only from plants that show extraordinary vigor in growth or in the size of the bloom or some other quality which the variety may lack.

Take nothing but good, strong cuttings, as the strength of the plants will depend largely on the strength and vigor of the cutting. I do not mean that you should select cuttings that are mammoth in size, but that you should select only short jointed, plump and well matured cuttings. Try to get them as near of a uniform size as possible, and one of fair average size is preferable to an extra large one in most cases.

In trimming the cuttings, be sure you make a clean cut at the base with a sharp knife. Occasionally one runs across an individual who thinks that the only way to have success in rooting carnations is to pull them apart at a joint and to stick them into the sand without any cutting. Others will have no other cuttings except those with a heel, and if a ragged thread half an inch long hangs onto the bottom it must be left on, according to their idea, and nothing can convince them that a clean cut will callous over quicker than a ragged break, and that all superfluous threads, etc., at the base will only rot and cause fungus. We trim off the ends of the grass just above the unfolded heart blades, as we think it helps to keep the cuttings from wilting and they can be stuck closer together in the sand without crowding, besides being much easier to handle.

Stick the cuttings in the row about three-fourths inch apart and make the rows about twice that distance apart, using an ordinary table knife to cut the furrows, which should be deep enough to allow the cutting to go down about one inch without bruising the end. Water thoroughly after the cuttings are set and keep the sand moist right along, but avoid getting it soggy. During the next eight weeks a good spraying about once each day will keep the sand damp enough and it is seldom we need to soak the bed heavily. This spraying is one of the most particular jobs you have in rooting your cuttings.

Just when to spray and when not to spray requires a great deal of judgment, and on it hangs very largely success or failure. You should spray and shade just enough to keep the cuttings crisp and at the same time you should not shade enough to make the cuttings soft and liable to damp off, nor spray so that the cuttings will remain damp on the foliage over night. You must study the weather, and if the atmosphere is loaded with moisture and the sky is likely to remain overcast, you had better not spray the cuttings unless they look wilted. A dark rainy day acts on the plants and cuttings very much the same as night does, and the cuttings will require about the same conditions as regards shading and spraying.

The first two weeks we do not allow the sun to strike them at all, but when the cuttings are calloused nicely we let them have an hour of mild sunshine each clear day in the evening just before sunset, and as the cuttings root we increase it, but be very careful not to allow the sun to strike them too strong, else they will wilt and a badly wilted carnation cutting means a dead cutting in most cases.

As soon as they are rooted well they should come out of the sand and be either planted or potted, but we will have more to say about that later.

ROSE NOTES.

American Beauty.

The rose is called "the queen of flowers," and the American Beauty may be called the "queen of roses."

To get the best results from this rose it ought to be propagated early, selecting well ripened short-jointed wood, having, if possible, two eyes to each cutting. Begin potting as soon as the roots attain an inch in length. If allowed to stand in the sand after being rooted they are liable to shed their leaves and all such should be rejected at potting time, however well they may be rooted, for with the best of care they make but sickly plants. This shedding of leaves in the cutting bench is frequently caused by an excess of moisture which is absorbed by the leaves lying so close to the sand and by the fact that all of the cuttings from a long stem are not in the same condition of ripeness, while all receive the same treatment in the bench. As soon as potted they should be thoroughly watered and given a bright and airy position in the house and carefully shaded from the sun till root action commences, which, under favorable conditions, will be in about four days.

At no stage of its existence will this rose bear the slightest neglect as it is very susceptible to nearly all the diseases known to the rose and is an especial favorite, in its younger stages, of greenfly, red spider and black spot if crowded in the bench. It should never be allowed to become pot-bound or have its growth retarded or checked in any way. Repot by half-inch shifts after the completion of each successive growth until it is in a 4-inch pot; pinch out the tops to make the lower eyes break and plant in the bench in May or early in June.

As it is a gross feeder it requires mulching earlier and more frequently than most roses. With this particular rose mulching is preferable to liquid food till after the day begins to lengthen; liquid food having a tendency to make the foliage soft and spongy and making it susceptible to black spot. This usually begins to appear in September when root action becomes less active and the benches do not dry out so quickly. To get quit of this trouble let the benches become moderately dry; syringe only on very bright days when the foliage will be sure to dry quickly; give plenty of air on all favorable occasions, and pick and burn all diseased leaves as soon as they appear. By persisting in this treatment the disease will soon disappear.

Black spot is a true fungus and one would naturally think it would be amenable to the fumes of sulphur, but from my own experience and from what I have learned from other growers, it seems to have little effect on it. One remedy which I have tried with some effect is sulphuret of potassium, two ounces to twenty-five gallons of water, syringing twice a week, selecting very bright days for the operation. The buds are liable to be attacked by thrip during the fall and spring; their presence in the house can easily be detected by the buds assuming a blood red color and appearing as if the points had been clipped. Frequent and light fumigating will hold them in check but this is liable to discolor some of the outer petals. Cayenne pepper on a hot shovel will destroy them without injuring the bloom. The operator must start at one end of the house and walk quickly to the door at the other end carrying the shovel behind him so as not to breathe the fumes. Repeat this once or twice a week and the pest will soon disappear.

To get nicely pointed and well developed buds the temperature at night should be 60 degrees, running up to 72 degrees on bright days.

The Market.

The social wheel has been revolving fast and faster still since Thanksgiving Day. Under its influence business has increased in volume with prices advancing. Beauties, in rare form since the wintry weather, are quoted at $6 per dozen for specials, and down to $1.50 for very short stemmed blooms. Liberties are improving; $1.50 to $2 per dozen buys the best stock. These red roses and Meteors are eagerly sought, as are violets and choice carnations, especially white. Brides and Maids are fine; most of the specials bring $8 per 100 now. Carnations are bringing $2 per 100 for anything nice; fancies go as high as $4 and even $5 per 100; the quality is improving. Violets are very scarce; $1 per 100 for the very best singles, many are lower; $1.50 per 100 for the best doubles, with $2 in prospect, it is said, though it is doubtful whether this raise will be made under present conditions. Chrysanthemums were cleaned up nicely last week at much better prices on ordinary stock than before the 28th ultimo. Leo Niessen reports having moved an immense quantity of these flowers at good prices.

Shipping trade has been heavy,—the opening of the Fifty-seventh Congress caused many choice blooms to go to Washington Monday. The first german in Baltimore on the evening of the same day created a brisk demand in that city which was felt by several of our commission men, who shipped many fine roses, lily of the valley and violets to that city on the days preceding this great social event.

Edward Reid shipped a grand lot of special Brides and Maids to Atlanta, Ga., on the same day.

Various Items.

H. H. Battles receives all the flowers of the new rose Ivory which are sent to this city by the American Rose Company of Washington, D. C.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a number of handsome baskets for the desks of the members of the Fifty-seventh Congress at the opening session on Monday last. A man was sent to Washington in charge of the flowers.

Samuel S. Pennock reports Thanksgiving business as the best he ever experienced.

Edward Reid is receiving some very fine Maids, Liberty and other roses from Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill.

Charles E. Meehan has made a specialty of Asparagus plumosus. He has it in many stages—from tiny seedlings to strong plants, topped by heavy six-foot strings, a house of which and yellow "Jones" chrysanthemums was a fine sight, the colors being equally divided, the bench a sheet of bloom. It is pleasant to see this enterprising grower once more in town seemingly none the worse for his illness.

Dumont & Co. have made their show windows very attractive with foliage plants.

Edwin Lonsdale is sending in some well flowered Lorraine begonias in several sizes.

S. S. Pennock considers Major Bonnaffon one of the very best Thanksgiving varieties of chrysanthemums. He sold a great many Eatons at $3 per dozen, but found Bonnaffon at $2 per dozen an even better seller.

The first prize pair of specimen Areca lutescens, together with the entire exhibit of palms shown by J. W. Cotting, Swarthmore Greenhouses, Swarthmore, Pa., were sold to a prominent Philadelphia party at the recent chrysanthemum show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society.

Much interest was shown in the Review's pictures of the wholesale houses last week.

The two florists' bowling teams are putting up a good article of ball at the Academy alleys.

Routine business was quickly dispatched at the club meeting on Tuesday evening. Then the members adjourned to the lecture room in Horticultural Hall, where a good audience assembled to hear Mr. Farquhar's lecture on the "Gardens, Fields and Forests of Hawaii," illustrated by many magic lantern slides. The evening proved very pleasant and instructive.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions for Nov. 25 30.

Thanksgiving week passed by without creating any great disturbance in the commercial world. There was a flutter in the poultry, fruit and candy market, and a call for heavy flannels and ulsters, with a correspondingly light demand for linen dusters, straw hats, ice cream and soda. Thursday had about the usual effect of Thanksgiving day upon the florist business, giving the incentive that a real good Saturday brings.

Violets are all that have been really scarce all the week, although red roses have been somewhat so. Violets continue at about $1.50 to irregular buyers and best American Beauties are worth $6 or $8 per dozen, with other sizes ranging down to $1. Pink and white roses started off in plenty, but decreased so suddenly for Wednesday that prices flew up strangely, especially on smaller grades. Heavier cuts later in the week brought things down to their bearings once more, so that buyers have lately offered from $2 to $12.50 per 100. Carnations have been plodding along very steadily, colored ones getting too scarce for the Thursday call, but all kinds otherwise just about keeping abreast of the demand at from $2 to $4 per 100. Chrysanthemums were very plentiful all the time, coming in much more freely the latter part of the week than I expected. Prices have advanced materially, but they are not extravagant yet, as compared with former years or with the bother and expense of raising them.

Of course, it will not do for me to let them hear me say so, but I do not believe any of the chrysanthemum men will make a big fortune this year. And I have an idea that those who simply try to grow small and medium sizes, two to four or more per plant, realized most for their labor. This kind take care of themselves largely, but the single blooms need a lot of babying.

Harrisii lilies are in force and callas are cropping out here and there. Bulb material increases slowly and fine white flowers are a bit scarce, candytuft being gone and stevia just beginning. All things considered the outlook is about an even one between the grower and the retailer for a few weeks more with a guess at rather a scarcity at Christmas along all lines generally, unless it be Mr. Eaton's lily crop. But trade for that day may run to plants heavily and the plant men can take care of it, presumably, as they report little life in their business so far.

An Item or Two.

Work is being rushed at Mr. McMulkin's new store on Boylston street. Plumbers, painters, carpenters, etc., are all there and making lots of chips. But it is coming into line and will be a magnificent place to carry on business.

On account of the accidental overturning of a lamp, the dwelling house of Mr. F. W. Fletcher, at Auburndale, was almost wholly consumed by fire on the night of Nov. 29. Being fairly well insured it is to be hoped no great loss is entailed, the greater part being probably on household furnishings, which were not so well covered. But the larger part of these were saved.

J. S. Manter.

A HANDSOME STORE.

We present in this issue two views from photographs in the store of Mr. C. A. Samuelson, Chicago, which has been entirely refitted and refurnished this summer, the interior finish being entirely in mahogany. The effect is very rich. It will be noted that brass framed marble topped tables have taken the place of counters.

The third picture gives a view in the conservatory at the rear of the store, built during the past summer. With the large increase in the call for high grade plants a conservatory of this sort is really a necessity with the retail florist.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Items.

Within the past ten days we have had a much needed rain which soaked the ground, followed by several nights with the mercury marking ten degrees of frost. And today (Dec. 2) is more like April weather than the beginning of the calendar winter, the thermometer showing above 60 degrees, with clear skies and dry atmosphere.

Trade continues moderately active, without the swing and movement of last year. Flowers are about equal to the calls and more in evidence would just at this time be an excess. Prices are hardening somewhat and the final passing for the season of the chrysanthemum will be regarded by pretty nearly everybody concerned as a benefaction to the trade.

Some fine Chadwicks have been seen on the market, this splendid variety outdoing in style and finish the vaunted Eaton, which shows some coarseness and a porcupinish bristling of the petals which is not attractive, while in size it has been equaled by well done Mrs. Henry Robinsons.

Tonight that great social event for a certain set, the first german of the year, takes place, with the usual resultant demand for flowers, especially American Beauties and violets, of which there has been an insufficient provision.

Anticipatory to the business involved in preparation for this function the Charles street florists decorated their windows with more than usual elaboration, and the handsome displays were worth a long walk to see. Amongst other choice things William J. Halliday had conspicuous a fine lot of orchids.

A new claimant for popular patronage, Mr. J. Brown, has opened a flower store on Linden avenue, near Preston street.

Mrs. Henrietta Bauer, who conducted a florist's business at Gay street and North avenue, died last week. She succeeded her husband and was the mother of three sons, all gardeners and florists, Henry, Frederick C., and Otto, the last named of Washington, D. C., and with daughters who married others in the trade; namely, Wm. A. Ekas, deceased, and Henry Fischer.

One of the oldest of the craft in this vicinity also succumbed at last to the grim reaper—Obadiah Kemp, aged 87 years.

Robert Halliday, president of the Gardeners' Club, tells me the result of its recent show is hardly so disastrous as was reported by the daily papers immediately after its close. R.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving Day trade was very good. The quantity of flowers was somewhat reduced though there was plenty, and the prices were somewhat lower than those quoted in the last issue. The weather was bright and clear, just the kind of weather that brings out the buyer. The West End florists are very much pleased with the business done and the down-town florists have nothing to complain of. The wholesalers had plenty of shipping orders which, with the local trade, kept them very busy throughout the day.

American Beauties averaged fairly good in quality and were in big demand at top prices; $4 and $5 per doz. for first quality was the wholesale price, with shorter stemmed stock from $1.50 to $3 per doz. The market went short on these early in the day. Meteors, Brides, Maids, Gates and Perles averaged from $4 to $8 per 100; quality, good.

The carnation supply was, and is short and the demand big; wholesalers haven't nearly enough to go around. The demand was heaviest on white and red, and the price was up as high as $4 per 100; very few sold below $2. Violets were very short in supply and commanded $1.50 per 100, and even at this high price more could have been sold. Chrysanthemums are still quite plentiful (except first class stock) and had an active demand at $15 and $30; the medium stock sold cheap. Romans and paper whites were in fair supply at $3 and $4; good valley at the same figures; stevia sold well at 25 cents per bunch; smilax went up to 15 cents, with demand fair.

Notes.

Philadelphia was well represented in St. Louis the past week. Mr. Eschner of M. Rice & Co., accompanied by Mrs. Eschner, made the rounds of the trade. Martin Reukauf looked after the interests of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and Mr. Fancourt remained over in the interests of J. Kift & Son. The latter two left for Louisville Thursday night, leaving the field to Mr. Eschner.

J. Rolker of New York also spent a few days with us last week.

Club Meeting.

President Meinhardt announces that the next meeting of the club on Thursday, December 12, will be a very important one, and requests that all the members be present so that the programme on tap may be carried out. The exhibition committee will make a full report and the prizes will be paid in full. Two essays will be read; also a report from the World's Fair committee. The second assessment must be paid at this meeting.

Bowling.

Thanksgiving night the florists bowled three games with the Bankers and lost two of the games. There was a large gathering of the fair sex present. Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Kunz, Miss Lupe, Martin Reukauf and Mr. Fancourt were the rooters for our side.

All the members were in fine form except the captain, who was unable to do much owing to the old ailment, and his average of 137 looks bad in print. Following are the scores made:

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Carnations.

In the seedling carnation competition at the recent exhibition the Chicago Carnation Co. was first on twenty white with their superb variety Polar Queen, Mr. Witterstaetter, of Cincinnati, being second with a large white under number. In scarlet, Chicago Carnation Co. was first, with their Mrs. Potter Palmer; Park Floral Co., second, with a fine red seedling on the order of Stuart, which was one of its parents. In clear pink there was no competition. In class calling for pink, lighter than Scott, Chicago Carnation Co. was first, with their Mrs. Higinbotham, which the judges declare to be the most fragrant of any carnation coming under their notice; E. T. Graves of Richmond, Ind., was second, with some excellent blooms similar to Morning Glory but larger and fuller and an exceedingly good stem. Class calling for any other color, Chicago Carnation Co., first, with their now famous Harlowarden, the same variety which won the S. A. F. medal at Chicago; this variety was also awarded, as a special prize, a gold medal, on account of its advancement over other carnations; Park Floral Co., of Denver, was second, also showing a crimson.

The Retailers.

Thanksgiving is past but most of the florists are still giving thanks, for more favorable weather and a better demand for the festive yellow mum, has seldom been realized. The "Tigers" of Missouri won the great foot ball game from Kansas—the first time since 1895, and the town and its citizens were "yellow" with enthusiasm. Many of the retailers were completely sold out, and yellow mums were on deck far into the night. The best blooms sold at $1 each and it was a poor flower indeed that wasn't worth a quarter.

There are many pretty florist stores in Kansas City and trade generally is in a most healthful condition. No city in the country for its size has as many lady florists, and every one of them is making money. Miss Murray and her sister have a cozy store in the popular Midland hotel, and number many of the best citizens among their patrons. Their business has grown constantly during the past five years.

Miss Dalley and her sister are now among the "veteran" florists of the city and have a large and well established business that is a credit to them and to the city.

On the same street Mrs. Edgar occupies a part of one of the largest millinery stores of the city and is rapidly building up a paying trade.

At Mr. Barbe's retail store on Walnut street, Miss Smith is and has been for six years, the sole manager of his business there, and so effective has been her supervision that Mr. Barbe contemplates an extensive addition to his plant in 1902 to supply the retail demand.

At the Chick-Pratt store Miss Pratt is the queen bee, and makes the honey and the money, while the large retail store of Mr. Kellogg of Pleasant Hill on Grand avenue is entirely in the hands of his daughters and managed exclusively by them.

So much for the glory of the gentle sex in Kansas City floriculture.

Mr. Samuel Murray has one of the best retail stores in the west and in one of the best localities, close to the famous Coates house. His store and greenhouse combined give him facilities unequaled here, and his immense decorative and cut flower trade is too well established to go in any other direction than forward. He has able assistants in Miss Hayden, for years with the Art Floral Co. of Chicago, and Mr. Ellsworth, while to his grower, Mr. Sharpe, he accords much of the honor bestowed on him by the judges at the recent show.

Mr. Murray is a broad, generous, wholesouled Scotchman whose openhandedness and solicitude for the pleasure of others made the Kansas City flower show such a happy memory for every florist visitor that attended it. He was ably seconded by that busy, goodnatured Arthur Newell, son of George Newell, Downham, England, an old-time florist of national reputation.

Mr. Newell has experimented successfully for years in running two stores, a rock on which many a good ship has been wrecked, but he sails both his vessels every year into prosperous harbors, with Mr. Schwager and Mr. Stark as first mates, and a good crew. Mr. Newell is a member of about every secret society here, a thirty-second degree Mason and an all around good fellow. He'll still be a young man when he won't have to work at all.

Another of the coming men here is W. L. Rock, a nephew of Mr. J. M. Gasser, of Cleveland, and a graduate, only three or four years ago, from the store of that gentleman. In that time he has developed an extensive business, has opened a branch store on Eleventh street, and now in partnership with Mr. Chas. Heite he has built a range of three houses 28x200 where the new firm will grow carnations for the present for his retail trade.

Mr. Rock has a good reputation as a decorator, making that work his specialty. He is very artistic, and his success in table and mantel decorations at the big show attest his ability. Mr. and Mrs. Gasser have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rock during the past three weeks.

Mr. Millatt, who has been your correspondent here for some years, is about to sell his business, marry a "sweet girl graduate" and teacher of Denver, and make his honeymoon trip to Manila, sailing about January 1 for Hawaii, on his way. Austin.

CLEVELAND.

Thanksgiving Trade.

Thanksgiving Day is over and the florists so far as I have been able to learn are very well satisfied. Prices on carnations and roses ruled a little higher but mums remained about the same although the quality was not quite so good. But for the fact that Wednesday was a most miserable day the demand would have been much larger; as it was carnations were very scarce.

Annual Opening of Smith & Fetters.

One of the very pleasant events of last week was the fourth annual opening of Smith & Fetters, and their beautiful store was handsomely decorated. Although a comparatively new firm, by their push and energy and exquisite taste in decorating they have forged ahead and are now acknowledged to be in the front rank as floral artists. Their window was very tastefully decorated with Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, violets and lily of the valley and Adiantum Farleyense.

They had two table decorations. One was in Meteor roses and orchids, with lily of the valley; the other was rather novel, being a large head of Savoy cabbage trimmed with yellow mums and croton leaves. The tables were rearranged each day.

On one side of the store they have a large mantel which extends up to the ceiling. This they had decorated with American Beauties and white Jerome Jones mums, Lorraine begonias, crotons with ferns and palms. On each side stood a very large cathedral candle and Easter lilies.

They made a specialty of birch bark and Porto Rican matting in their window decorations.

Each visitor was presented with a beautiful calendar for 1902.

A Visit to H. A. Hart's.

A visit to H. A. Hart's found everything in first class order. He has some fine primroses just right for Christmas and his cyclamen cannot be beat for young plants; they are now showing bud and bloom. The lilies here are also in good shape and will be all right for Easter. Mr. Hart is quite an expert on forcing hydrangeas and always has a large quantity in bloom just at the right time. The carnations are looking fine and give promise of plenty of flowers for the holidays. He is short on whites but that seems to be the general complaint here. Mr. Hart complains about the azaleas he received being badly mixed and not the varieties he ordered. This seems to be a trick with some of the growers. They seem to be short on some varieties and they fill their orders with anything they have.

A Visit to Glenville, O.

A. Schmitt of Glenville has his houses in fine shape now, having remodeled some of them. The stock is fine. He has three houses of carnations that are in the pink of condition and give promise of a good crop for the holidays. He has a great many Boston ferns, well-grown specimens in all sizes. Mr. Schmitt says there is not the demand for them this year that there has been but hopes to dispose of them before Christmas. His mums are about all gone now, and he is sorry; wishes he had a house of late ones just coming in; thinks they would pay well. There are others of the same opinion, but it is too late now. The prospects here are for a scarcity of flowers from now till Christmas.

TENEP.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Cut flowers have been very scarce for the last ten days and we are getting a taste of our mid-winter scarcities in advance.

It really seems too bad that it is necessary for all of the growers to be off crop at one and the same time, but as we are willing to forgive and forget any inconvenience caused now, if they promise us plenty at Christmas time, they need take very little notice of the storeman's railings as we are lightning artists at change of tone when necessary.

Mums are still fairly free with the exception of white, particularly small stuff being scarce. Carnations are still in greater demand than the supply and roses—well, there are not many of them being thrown on the market and the growers do not hesitate to slip a bull-nose or two in the count with stock whose company they should never keep. Violets are still being sought after and valley is not plentiful. A few nice paper whites are putting in their appearance.

Various Notes.

A visit to Mr. Hollis found him busy at his new location, building and getting his boilers in shape. He has been considerably handicapped by the dilatoriness of the windmill men, they not having completed his water pumping apparatus.

Last week the wedding was celebrated of Miss Mattie, eldest daughter of John H. Dunlop, our well known rose grower, to Mr. Goulding of the Ozone Co., Chicago. Mr. Goulding is an old Toronto boy and we congratulate him on winning one of our brightest lights.

I made a mistake in the flower show reports in not giving Mr. W. J. Lawrence credit for receiving second prize for twelve Beauties. I hope it will be first next time. C. W.

On Tuesday evening, Nov. 26, by the kind liberality of their employer, the employes of J. H. Dunlop were invited to partake of his hospitality at his residence and to spend a social evening with a few friends invited by their host. At the time appointed they sat down to a bounteous repast provided by their host, and needless to say ample justice was done to the good things which were supplied by one of the leading caterers of the West End; and I must not forget to mention that the dining hall was made to look quite gay by the use of palms, ferns and bunting, which part was ably looked after by Mr. A. Houle, the respected foreman of the establishment.

After filling the inner man with the good things provided, the worthy host occupied the chair and proposed the usual patriotic toasts which were enthusiastically received and honored. Mr. A. Houle proposed the health of the chairman, thanking him on behalf of the employes for his hospitality, to which he suitably responded, and after listening to some able speeches by A. Houle, J. Stevens, Mr. H. Dillmuth responding on behalf of the retailers, an adjournment was taken to the drawing room of the residence, where an excellent program, both vocal and instrumental, was carried out, assisted by the following: Miss Jessie Dunlop, Miss A. Montgomery, J. H. Dunlop, J. Churchill Arlidge, J. Milne and A. Arlidge.

Selections on the flute were rendered by J. Churchill Arlidge, who is one of the most noted leaders and performers on the flute, if not the most expert in the Dominion. A most enjoyable and long to be remembered evening was brought to a close by all singing "Auld Lang Syne." G. P.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Thanksgiving Day trade was fully as large as that of any previous year in cash results, but it was due to higher prices and not to increased supply. It is likely that fewer flowers were handled than last year, but the demand was so strong that prices averaged higher than ever before at Thanksgiving, and the results were very satisfactory under the circumstances. Prices held up firmly to quotations to the end and there were no heavy receipts on the last day to cause a slump as has been so often the case at holidays. Some say that growers kept their cut coming in more evenly, which enabled the dealers to realize better and keep the market steady, but others say the grower had nothing to hold back, "so how could he?"

Anyway, practically everything was cleaned up at good figures, the only item having a tendency to weaken at the last moment being white roses. Curiously enough white carnations were the scarcest of all, though all carnations were very short of demand.

Since Thanksgiving prices have dropped but little and the supply is still none too large, though improving. In roses the best still bring $6 to $8, with good ordinary at $4 to $5 and commons at $2 to $3. In Beauties the best select bring $4 and $5 and some extra fine ones are now coming in. In carnations white ones are especially scarce and they bring from $3 to $4, with colored at $1.50 to $3 and extra fancy as high as $5.

Good violets have been very scarce and the quality of those received has averaged very poor for the season. Grand Rapids growers report that they have had no sunlight for a month. Smilax and Sprengeri seem to now be very plentiful.

A few good chrysanthemums are still coming in and when first class they move well at good prices. Poor stock, though, doesn't seem to be wanted at any price.

There were probably more mums for Thanksgiving this year than last and all were needed on account of the shortage in roses, carnations and violets.

We hear of quite a number of growers who missed it for Thanksgiving but expect to be in it at Christmas, and indications seem favorable for a satisfactory supply for that great holiday.

Various Items.

Robert Newitt, at one time connected with the trade at the old-time establishment of W. G. Newitt, was killed by Geo. Johnson in a quarrel last Saturday night. He was about 55 years old and a widower.

Weber Bros. are sending in some remarkably fine Brides and Maids to J. A. Budlong. Their plants are making a phenomenally vigorous growth and their rose houses are a splendid sight just now.

McKellar & Winterson have recently much enlarged their stock of cut flower vases and have added many new styles, especially in glass, that are not only very pretty but of a shape that makes them really useful for preserving as well as displaying flowers. They are also displaying a fine line of braid basket covers for bulb pans that are very pretty and will certainly be popular.

Bouquet green is advancing in price and there is now little doubt that there will be quite a shortage in the supply of this holiday material.

E. H. Hunt's holly buyer, who is now in Maryland, reports that indications are that well berried holly will be scarce.

Louis Gresenz, with Bassett & Washburn, has a very bad hand as the result of rose thorn poisoning and a subsequent accident.

"See the sign" is still the "sign" at Kennicott's. Ask Scott.

Geo. Bayer, of Toledo, is still sending finely finished chrysanthemums to Kennicott Bros. Co. Mr. Bayer's mums have stood very high in this market, having uniformly fine finish and always bringing the highest prices.

At the next meeting of the Florists' Club, to be held next Wednesday evening, prizes will be awarded for the best plants suitable for holiday trade, and there will be a discussion upon the various plants adapted for holiday sales.

J. A. Lynn has established winter headquarters at 444 Wells street and is making up a big stock of novelties in his birch bark ware for holiday demands.

Mr. B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, accompanied by his wife, is in the city, and will remain till Saturday.

GALVESTON, TEXAS.

Galveston is all right again. It has quickly recovered from the frightful calamity it suffered. During the summer there were many storm frightened people who stayed away but have come back feeling that Galveston is herself again. The summer season is especially dull here as so many wealthy residents go away for the summer. Not because the summer months are especially disagreeable here, but because their business here lasts only during the cotton season.

It has been a hard year for almost everybody, but the florist has had the hardest struggle. The climate is a hard one for the florist to deal with and this last year expenses have been unusually heavy, as we had to get new soil to work with. The florist cannot get along with the plants that do not object to a soil that has been saturated with salt water. Roses that were planted out after the storm were almost a total failure. It takes a good deal of courage to keep at it when you have to replant stock three times during one season. But we have finally succeeded.

Hybrid tea roses are now doing finely. Liberty has proved to be one of the finest outdoor roses for our climate. I have tried both grafted and own root plants and prefer the grafted ones. I planted out 200 plants I obtained from Mr. J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., and during October we cut three to four dozen blooms every morning. Another good rose for us here is the Marquise Litta, of which I have some grafted plants from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.

Heavy rains just before the chrysanthemum season did much harm to the plants, especially to those planted early. A florist here should never set out his chrysanthemums before the end of May or in June. If planted earlier the stems get too hard and woody before blooming time and they will not take up water, the roots of the older plants often rotting. Even now those of the older plants which recovered from the rain have hardly any roots and but poor blossoms, while those I planted later in the season are not injured.

Recently I spent a day on the mainland at the Gulf Coast Nurseries, Mr. H. J. Caudron, proprietor. On the mainland chrysanthemums always do better and are earlier than with us because the nights are cooler and the soil (a heavy black clay) is better for them. They lost some as the result of the heavy rains but had a fine show of bloom. In whites they grow Mrs. Robinson, J. H. Troy, Frank Hardy, W. H. Chadwick and Mrs. Weeks. In yellows, Lincoln, Bonnaffon, Monrovia, Modesto, Dailledouze, Sunderbruch and Goldmine, the latter of immense size. In pinks, Maud Dean, Glory of Pacific, Pres. Smith and Mrs. E. G. Hill. In reds, Black Hawk.

On All Saints' Day the weather was beautiful and business was fair. People who can afford it will always buy some fine flowers for decorating graves, but for the great mass we must have cheap, home grown flowers, or do little business. And there are here many people who lost all their property as well as their dear ones in the storm and who have to watch every cent of expenditure. And there are others who have no graves to decorate—only pictures of their lost ones.

A poor looking old lady after pricing all the flowers in my store asked for a 15-cent bouquet, remarking: "I don't need much, it's only a tiny picture. He was my only son and he took care of me. Oh, if I only had his grave! But his body was never found. I am all alone." She could hardly speak. I gave her a small bunch of violets and half a dozen carnations to put on each side of the picture and handed her money back.

A young fellow whose hands showed the effect of hard work gave me $1.50 and wanted as many loose flowers as I could afford to give him for the amount. "How many graves?" I asked. "Ten," was the reply. He had lost father, mother, married brother with family and two sisters. One after another he had located their bodies and had them interred in decent graves, earning the money loading cotton.

Neither of these customers expected much for their money but it would take a tougher fellow than a Galveston florist to make money on such poor people, and this will be a weak point in our All Saints' Day business for some years.

On the other hand the season is opening in a lively manner. Preparations are being made for several large balls and other social affairs and for these the finest flowers are demanded. Most of the florists have down town stores this winter and all are expecting a good season. C. E.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Thanksgiving Day Trade.

The weather has been very disagreeable, dull and threatening, with mild days and cold nights, thus retarding the opening of flowers and causing such a shortage as to almost amount to a famine. This was especially true of carnations, the supply being totally inadequate. Roses were more nearly equal to the demand. Mums just about saw their finish, all the late varieties blooming in time for Thanksgiving. The demand for pot chrysanthemums was less than half of that of last year.

Shipping trade was fine and everything was cleaned up close. The volume of trade was about 20 per cent greater than that of last year.

Prices: Roses, $1 to $1.25 per dozen; Beauties, very scarce, $2 to $5. Mums, 50 cents to $3 per dozen, the bulk going at $2. Carnations, 50 cents per dozen; fancies, 75 cents.

There were some good Lawsons on the market, also Irenes and Cranes. The Marquis seems too slow to ever become a paying variety in this locality. Prosperity is fine, as are most of the new varieties. G. F. C.

FLOWERING PLANTS IN SMALL POTS.

A few years ago we used to have an occasional call for something in bloom to go into the fern dish on the table. Of course plants in 4-inch pots were too large and the demand could not be met.

There is a strong tendency on the part of customers to vary occasionally from ferns to flowers, however short their duration may be, and we should prepare to meet this demand. One wholesale plantsman told me he could sell thousands of well done cyclamen in 3-inch pots for this use alone. Begonia Lorraine in 2½-inch pots are fine for the purpose, also 3-inch primulas, poinsettias in season, and 3-inch miniature hyacinths.

Growing in pans is resorted to in some instances but one can always make up better with evenly flowered pot plants where often pan stuff comes uneven.

DO THEY DO IT?

If you are a wholesale florist stick to the title of your business and don't be selling to some honest retail florist's customers at wholesale prices. This is getting to be a very common thing of late. I know of at least $50.00 worth of flowers at wholesale prices coming to this city in the last two weeks from wholesalers who are supposed to be looking after the retailer's welfare instead of stealing the retailer's business while he is asleep. But all retailers are not asleep and we are going, I hope, to be more awake than we are at present, and the wholesaler will be sorry if this state of affairs is not stopped. We know the firms that ship to our city in this way.

If they must ship why not do as other firms do? For instance, if a person should go from here or any other town to Grand Rapids and buy furniture, the wholesale firm sells them, but at a good retail price, and sends the profit to the retailer in the town where goods are sent. That is no more than fair.

Now I think if the wholesale cut flower firms come down so low as to sell flowers at wholesale prices to people who are not in the trade, the florist papers should be honest and publish such offenees, mentioning names of firms, and all out of town buyers should trade with houses that protect their interests.

Would like to hear from some one else through your paper, even from the wholesalers who shipped the flowers to our city in the last few weeks.

East Side Floral Co.

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 25, 1901.

[We find it difficult to believe that any wholesaler would be so unwise as to do what our correspondent states. If it is done then those who do it are simply cutting their own throats. Certainly the retailers who have their trade taken away in such a manner have good cause for complaint, and the action suggested by our correspondent would be in order. —Ed.]

JAPAN LONGIFLORUM.

Forcing for Easter.

There are many inquiries this season as to how Japan longiflorum may be got in for Easter. In spite of the many special brands offered there are still mixed varieties to avoid.

We notice that where the bulbs were evidently well ripened and of medium size, even when potted three weeks later they are now coming on strong and vigorous, whereas the very early shipments run uneven in growth and do not move so fast. I think our latest potted bulbs, not yet up, will overtake the first. This would indicate that the proper ripening of the bulb is the main factor, and an essential before early planting can be successful.

I like to put them as near the glass as possible, and give air day and night when practicable, starting in a night temperature of 55 degrees if well rooted, and raising the temperature gradually until a maximum of 70 degrees at night is reached. Art.

Various Notes.

The general report for Thanksgiving trade is all that could be desired. Nearly every one reports an increase over last year and with plenty of stock to fill all orders the increase would have been much greater. It would almost seem that Thanksgiving is going to be a rival of Christmas and Easter. The prices, too, ruled higher this year than ever before and the public were willing to pay the advance price.

Flowers of all kinds were scarce, roses especially so, and the market held up firmly to prices quoted in last week's notes. Carnations were in better supply than any time this season, but still there were not nearly enough to go around. Fancy varieties brought 3 to 4 cents; good stock, 2 to 3 cents, and ordinary grades, 1½ to 2 cents.

Owing to the scarcity of stock at the present time and as there is no immediate relief in sight, it is expected that prices will hold up well from now till Christmas.

Wm. Murphy is now cutting some fine Estelle. He has a large house devoted exclusively to this variety and they are in good shape. The cut blooms are much sought after and readily bring 3 cents.

J. W. Rodgers met with a peculiar accident during the past week which resulted in the loss, by freezing, of nearly two houses planted with J. Jones and Gold Mine chrysanthemums. One of his men left the water running and the tank was soon emptied; water in the boiler went down and there was not enough to heat the two upper houses in his range.

Both Ed and Sidney Murphy have completed brick smoke stacks for their plants. This is the only kind of a stack to have, as once up it is there to stay.

Nathan Smith & Son of Adrian, Mich., were again on hand with a seedling mum for the committee. It was a creamy white variety named Polar Queen; incurved with outer petals reflexed; fine color, stem and foliage, and a nicely formed and built up flower. Looks to be a good thing for late, and it's the late varieties that pay.

Visitors were: H. Behrens, Middletown, O.; Lloyd Vaughan, Chicago; Martin Reukauf, Philadelphia.

C. J. Oehmer.

Auburn, N. Y.—Business has been satisfactory, showing an increase of about 25 per cent over last year. Geo. Dobbs & Son built a new carnation house 75x27 this fall, using the Garland iron gutter construction.

Toronto, Ont.—Mr. R. Mearns reports a very good year with prospects bright for the coming year. He is more than pleased with the Florists' Review.

Oconomowoc, Wis.—Mr. John Dupee has considerably added to his private place here and will soon erect a conservatory and range of small houses. Robert Lundstrom is the gardener.

If you want to make a valued employe a Christmas present, nothing will be so much appreciated, or return so much value to the giver, as a copy of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott.

PARIS, FRANCE.—W. K. Vanderbilt's collection of chrysanthemums from his estate at St. Louis de Poissy won the first prize in the great Paris show.

ATHENS, O.—G. H. Moores, the florist, and his wife, have arranged to go to Florida, the first to remain for a month and the latter till spring.

As a Christmas present, nothing would be more greatly prized than a copy of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott. It covers the whole field of commercial floriculture, and the price is $5.00.

IVIES.

Next to the variegated vinca comes the ivy, and as a useful window box plant it is hard to beat. In Europe many variegated varieties are grown and they are well worth a trial in this country, being of easy culture and requiring only a frost proof shelter in winter.

Mr. E. Wienhoeber, Chicago, uses many pot ivies, and grows some fine plants. He propagates early, placing three plants in a 3-inch pot, and these are planted out a good distance apart on rich land, well cultivated and watered. In winter they are placed on a narrow shelf just under the edge of a bench and droop to the ground, thus taking up no extra space. They are useful in decorations and as box plants are invaluable.

Cuttings of half ripened wood are best and they root at any season, though fall propagation, with a gentle bottom heat is preferable. ART.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

It is believed in some quarters that a mistake has been made by many in discarding Ivory. Dealers say it is still a fine seller and that it ought to pay at the price it brings, as growers say they can produce two good blooms of Ivory from the same space that will produce one Bonnaffon.

One grower says that Bonnaffon is getting to be one of the most difficult to do well and the most expensive to grow. This grower doesn't see any place for Appleton as a commercial flower because it comes at a season when there are so many other good ones, and his experience with it is that while it is extra fancy when it comes good, there is an unpleasantly large proportion that come poor, and when they are poor they go nearly to the foot of the list.

A COMPLIMENT.

Allow me to compliment you on the truly instructive articles on chrysanthemum, carnation and rose culture that have appeared in the REVIEW during the past year. My success in growing mums this season, which eclipsed any ever before seen in this city, I owe to an article in the REVIEW of Aug. 22.

NEW FORCING ROSE HELEN GOULD.

READ WHAT OTHERS SAY:

"Has no Hybrid Tea faults and never goes dormant. A very rapid grower, an excessive bloomer, as free as Golden Gate, a beautiful deep pink color, almost cherry red; flower full double to the center; plentiful foliage. An ideal rose for the grower who retails. We have a house of it 240 feet long, making a most wonderful growth. The commercial grower who buys Balduin for Helen Gould will be badly 'done.'"—AMERICAN ROSE COMPANY.

"Freely tested by us last winter and proved to be a gem. Remarkable for vigor, color, size, form, fragrance and keeping qualities. The demand for it will be large."—WABAN ROSE CONSERVATORIES.

BUY IT DIRECT FROM THE INTRODUCERS.

We have 40,000 plants of this superb new Rose ready for delivery. It will take first rank among great roses. It produces more perfect salable flowers to the square foot than any other rose of its color now in commerce. It has no weak spots. Blooms all the time. No rose in the list can compare with it in vigor of growth. The flowers are as beautifully made as Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. Grand foliage. A splendid keeper. Every grower should have it. Of the many famous roses we have introduced we believe HELEN GOULD will prove to be the most valuable in every way, especially for forcing. This statement bears greater significance in view of the value of the varieties we have already introduced. The price is so low every grower can afford to give it a trial. It will not disappoint you. Prices:—Strong healthy plants from 2½-inch pots, for immediate delivery, $2.10 per doz. postpaid; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000, by express f. o. b. West Grove.

NEW ROSE CLIMBING CLOTILDE SOUPERT. A sport from Clotilde Soupert, with which it is identical, except it is a strong rampant climber, perhaps the most vigorous Climbing Rose known. Hardy everywhere. $1.25 per doz. postpaid; $8.00 per 100. NEW CHRYSANTHEMUMS. Timothy Eaton, Col. Appleton, George S. Kalb and fifty other varieties. Plants ready for delivery. Prices right. AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The third annual meeting of the American Rose Society will be held in the Berkeley Lyceum Building, New York City, on March 12 next. The hall is admirably adapted to the purpose as it has abundance of daylight. The usual exhibition will be held in co-operation with the American Institute and will be open for three days beginning on Tuesday the eleventh. The regular hall of the institute will be devoted to the floral display, the theater on the lower floor having been leased to accommodate the combined meetings. The exhibition rules of the Rose Society will govern the show, and awards will be made by the judges of the Rose Society.

As was announced some time ago the number of blooms asked for in the regular classes has been reduced to one-half of what was the number in other years. The secretary of the society will be glad to correspond with anyone interested; he would also be particularly gratified if all who have rose pictures would send him copies, and this request does not refer to novelties alone.

THE JUDGES DECIDED OTHERWISE.

EDITOR FLORISTS' REVIEW: Your Western contemporary under heading "The Exhibition at Kansas City" seems to be much concerned about a pink seedling chrysanthemum. It is evident the writer did not see the contestants the day following. The pink in question was a sorry looking candidate for the grand prize the next morning, while the white chosen by the judges remained fresh to the last. Size is not the only qualification to be considered in judging seedlings. MUM.

LIVINGSTON'S BEAUTY TOMATO

Prof. W. J Green of the Ohio Experiment Station, says:

"I am fully satisfied that Livingston's Beauty Tomato is the most profitable variety of all for growing under glass."

Prof. W. B. Alwood of the Virginia Experiment Station, says:

"Your Beauty Tomato was superb, as usual, and gave us magnificent fruit. We consider it the standard by which comparison of other sorts is made, and are using it now exclusively for winter forcing."

"NOT MUCH!"

ST. PAUL.

Various Items.

Thanksgiving trade was a "hummer" and reflected the general prosperity of the Northwest in a most satisfactory manner. Weather conditions were perfect, stock fairly plentiful and of good quality and buyers numerous. This holiday never brings out the large buyers like Christmas does, but the great middle class, people of moderate means, always like a few flowers for the table and buy according to their purse. After all this class of trade is the most satisfactory as purchases are mostly for cash, complaints are few and patrons know what they want and are easily attended to.

Chrysanthemums were in great demand during the week owing to numerous receptions and the annual charity ball.

Roses, carnations and violets have been in big demand with not enough home-grown stock to supply the demand. If the favorable weather continues there should be a good crop for the holidays.

Bouquet green is now in stock, the quality being very fine but the quantity limited and prices high.

August Exstrand, who formerly ran the greenhouses on Portland avenue, this city, and was located at Forest Lake during the summer, attempted suicide Nov. 24 by swallowing two ounces of carbolic acid.

The daughters of the Brooklyn bard, J. Austin Shaw, were here the past week, acting in "the Burgomaster," in which they have prominent parts. While here they were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. May.

L. L. May & Co. received several importations of valley pips and spireas the past week. Their wholesale seed establishment is a bee hive of industry at the present time.

W. G. Bunde, formerly connected with the trade in this city, and quite well acquainted with the craft throughout the West, was recently married to Miss Andrews of this city. X. Y. Z.

CORRECTION.

In our report of the St. Louis exhibition some errors crept in. Gunnar Teilmann, of Marion, Ind., won the first premium on 25 pinks, with Helen Bloodgood, and third premium on twelve any other color with Lavender Queen, in addition to those awards credited to him.

A COPY of the printed proceedings of the seventeenth annual convention of the Society of American Florists, held at Buffalo last August, has been received. These reports seem to be expanding yearly, this one containing nearly 200 pages. It contains all the essays read at the Buffalo convention, with full reports of all the discussions and much other interesting matter. It is a very useful record and well illustrates the progress being made by the national organization.

LYNN, MASS.—Fred Smith, of Euclid avenue, has gone into partnership with Gibbs Bros., on Munroe street. Their houses are well stocked and they expect to do a large business.

THE Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, is a whole library on commercial floriculture. It costs $5.00 and nothing would be more appreciated as a Christmas gift.

HARTFORD, CONN.

Trade is picking up well and the supply is about equal to the demand, except perhaps carnations and violets, the latter being well cleaned up by the Yale-Harvard football game.

John Coombs' large carnation house is a sea of buds, with a liberal sprinkling of fine blooms.

G. S. Osborn and George Goodwin are bringing up in the rear, and as the home-stretch to Christmas nears look out for a smashing crop and a score of perhaps 22 to 0.

Walter A. Power, who has been making lots of bluster in his ads, offering carnations at 25 cents a dozen, Boston ferns 10 cents each, violets 50 cents a hundred, and similar profit killing prices on other goods, has been attached by local firms for claims said to be between $6,000 and $7,000.

In addition to the above, claims are recorded in the town clerk's office as follows: mortgages, $16,000; mechanics' liens, $2,986.64. A local paper in which the ads referred to were printed, winds up the account of the attachments in these words: "He is widely known for his enterprise." This is no doubt true, but wouldn't that jar you? If not, ask the creditors. O.

FREMONT, NEB.

Thanksgiving trade was very good this year with us. Considerably better than last season in volume of business and also on account of not having to buy stock. Our stuff is fine and we are cutting plenty of it.

In carnations we find Ethel Crocker vastly superior to last year. By giving it a little extra heat it is all that could be desired. Lawson, on the other hand, has so far given a big per cent of short-stemmed, off-colored blooms. We grow besides the above, Argyle, Crane, Lord, Mary Wood, Bradt, Chicago, Gold Nugget, McGowan, Melba, Joost, Gomez and Flora Hill. Will try a few of the newer sorts this season.

Mums have sold exceptionally well, the last being cleaned up with a rush for Thanksgiving.

Violets are up to our usual standard, which is pretty high. We grow only Marie Louise and Swanley White. They require more care but give better results when properly grown than any others.

In roses we have Brides, Maids, Liberty, Perles and Wootton. The last named is very profitable with us, producing an abundance of A1 flowers with stems 14 to 20 inches long. They are just the thing for young men with American Beauty girls and carnation incomes.

Weather is good, being bright and rather warm, and we hope it will remain so until Christmas, as all indications point to an immense business at that time. C. H. Green.

Marion, O.—Sanford Wilson the florist, was struck and instantly killed by a street car Nov. 22. He was driving and the horse became frightened, throwing him out of his rig onto the track in front of a moving car. Mr. Wilson was born in Marietta, O., in 1824, and came to this city in 1843.

Carrollton, Ill.—J. Clint McPheron is now sole owner of the florist department of the business of J. A. McPheron & Son.

The Mrs. E. A. Nelson

bids fair to become the commercial standard pink carnation. It is a healthy grower, a free and continuous bloomer, and it is sure to thrive wherever grown. The following letter from Mr. A. N. Pierson speaks for itself:

Cromwell, Conn., November 25, 1901.

Mr. E. A. Nelson. Dear Sir: From what I have seen of the "E. A. Nelson" I feel no hesitation in saying that it is in every respect a first-class commercial variety. The plants you sent us were grown in the field, and made by far the BEST GROWTH of any, and were especially noticeable among 25,000 plants for the clean, vigorous growth they made. The plants suffered no check on benching and the flowers produced have been of high grade. We hope that next season will find at least two thousand "Nelsons" in our benches.

Very truly yours, WALLACE R. PIERSON. For A. N. Pierson.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

A busy Thanksgiving trade with a good supply of cut flowers has been the order of the day.

Numerous decorations have been arranged by the various florists, the most notable being for the 6 o'clock dinner at "The Oriental" arranged by the Texas Seed & Floral Co.

All mums have been cleaned up for the season and the growers are well satisfied with the results. Carnations are hardly in full crop yet but will be on hand for Christmas in good shape. Buds from outside were plentiful and very good; large quantities were sold at good prices. Violets and Romans are now on hand and meet with ready sale, in fact, anything good in flowers sells in Dallas.

Last week the Texas Seed & Floral Co. had their annual opening and palm sale. They had a great rush, selling large quantities of palms and Boston ferns. They showed some fine specimen Bostons that sold readily at $5 to $10 each. The sale was all, or more, than they had expected and they are well satisfied with the results.

F. A. B.

HASTINGS, NEB.—Charles Winkler built new houses last year, has added more this year and contemplates building a new plant next year to contain 26,000 sq. ft. of glass, for carnations, roses and plants; also some more houses for vegetables. He reports business good and the weather all that could be desired.

GLASS.—We hear that large orders for 16x24 double strength glass have recently been placed at less than $4 a box, which indicates that the glass situation has very much improved from the buyer's standpoint.

AS A Christmas present for an appreciated employe or a friend in the trade nothing will prove more satisfactory than a copy of the Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Holly and Green.

From the actual non-observance of one hundred years ago and but slight recognition fifty years ago, Christmas time is now the most joyous and most widely commemorated day in this broad land. It's a grand sign of the advancement of man when all so-called Christian denominations unite in keeping this day as one of joy and happiness. And perhaps babies are breathing today who will live to see but one church where now there are forty varieties (each one the only one) and whose teaching will be that if all will "do unto their neighbor as he would they should do unto him" our race on earth will have advanced many degrees nearer an earthly heaven than it is today. And so what was the association of Christmas in our mother countries had to be revived here. No doubt the holly and mistletoe were obnoxious to the sight and ears of a Puritan, but the Puritans are only a memory and now in less than thirty years in our northern states, where few knew that the tree grew on the continent, its uses as an emblem of the season and to decorate the home from that of the humblest to the palace is simply enormous.

As in many other things (mostly all) we go the whole hog or none, and it is pretty safe to say that in no cities of Europe of the same size is holly used to the extent it is in all our northern cities. Wide must be the forests of the south, where it grows, to stand the enormous drain that is annually made upon it. Two years ago our city was flooded with many carloads of poor stuff, but last year the shippers were a little shy and there was less of it and of better quality. The holly is no longer exclusively a florists' article. Ever corner grocer handles it and lots of people who strive to turn an honest penny buy a few cases, make it into wreaths and peddle them from door to door. We must not grumble at that any more than the grocer does at the huckster who sells you, or rather your wife, potatoes, apples and "nice banan" at the door every day of the year.

The florist will always have his share of this holly and green business, because he makes them better, and all our good people are willing to pay a little more for a good article. Retailers who have but the limited space of a store can scarcely go into the making up of holly wreaths and wreathing, and it is much better to let out the job to some one who will make the wreaths for you at so much a hundred, but you had better always furnish the material or there will be an inclination to scrimp the material and make it go too far; that's an instinct of the savage breast as natural as love or appetite.

Many of us have the room and help to make our own, and the great thing is to get a lot made and ready for sale a few days ahead of Christmas, for with us that time brings its other cares and if you had double force of help, which we usually do, we would be all busy selling, wrapping, delivering, and what is sure to occur, decorating houses or churches. So get all wreathing and wreaths made just as soon as the material arrives.

Holly should not be exposed to hard frosts or many of its berries will drop; plenty drop from dryness. A cool basement or cellar is the best place to keep the cases till you can use them. Bouquet green can be kept out of doors, as no amount of freezing hurts it, but an old carpet or cloth of some kind should be thrown over it or the outer exposed ends will soon turn brown and you can't afford to lose any of it. Where to keep this wreathing and wreaths when made up a week or more before time is often puzzling. The wreathing and wreaths of the bouquet green we have found keep best out of doors in a cold frame, with something opaque over the glass, and if there is any snow around throw a little snow among it. It is not well to pile too much in depth, as it flattens out very easily. It will keep in a cold frame for several weeks if the light is kept away. We used to throw all the bundles of greens into a tub of water before using and sometimes a tubful would be left in this bath over night. This we found would not do, for in a day or so it turns black, but we do soak it for a few minutes; you can use it much quicker when moist and pliable.

It is needless to remark that even at this simple job division of labor should be carried out. Don't expect the man or boy, or maybe girl, that is making the wreath to cut and sort the material. If four pairs of hands are making the wreaths it will take one good helper to chop off the stems and lay before the operators nothing but good material. Every time the busy hands encounter a yellow piece of pine there is wasted energy in throwing it away. An irritation of the nervous system, followed by exhaustion, and perhaps a cussword, shakes the cobwebs on the roof of the shed.

Holly wreaths after being made up are more difficult to keep fresh and green than the pine. A dark, moist, cool cellar is the ideal place. We know that to be so, for we have room for 200 or 300 in such a place, but that is not enough, and other places must be found. Beneath a bench in your coolest greenhouse will do. Lay down some coarse paper, wet it so that the ground beneath is moist, and then lay on your holly wreaths, but not more than three deep, and cover with newspapers.

We like to make our holly wreaths on No. 16 wire, but your wireworker will make them cheaper for you than you can, and for the best wreaths we twine a very thin covering of bouquet green around the wire before the holly is tied on. It is well to have several different sizes of holly wreaths, some on 12-inch wires, some on 15 and some on 18-inch; larger than that you can wait till they are ordered. Many holly wreaths are now taken to cemeteries and we find that those made with holly at one side (or on top, shall we say?) and the back of bouquet green, are preferred. However, be well supplied. I have never known us to have enough. It's one of those bits of our business that only comes once a year and you have not much faith in it, but it comes and all in a heap the last day or two. There is very liberal profit in it, so be well supplied.

Laurel.

There is a great deal of laurel (Kalmia latifolia) used as wreathing nowadays, and it is much richer looking than the roping of bouquet green, particularly in large decorations. It can be bought made into wreathing much cheaper than you can buy the material and make it up yourself, but it is sadly crushed and flattened out by the time it reaches the retailer, and if we get well paid for its use we prefer to get the branches and make it ourselves.

Just here allow me to mention what I had forgotten to speak of. Bouquet green wreathing and laurel wreathing is always made on a coarse string or rope. Now, this rope should always be dipped in a dye of dark green. It costs next to nothing and will cover a multitude of sins, for glimpses of the rope will occur occasionally, and if green it will never be noticed. Laurel is perfectly hardy, but keep it covered in a cold-frame if you want to retain its bright, glossy color.

Mistletoe.

The European mistletoe is the real mistletoe that was according to legend worshiped by the barbarians called Druids, who were a brave people and ate each other to keep down the population. Our American species is nothing like as handsome, but with those who know no better it goes all right, and a kiss stolen from beneath it is as good as that four feet from the French or English mistletoe. It depends more on the "variety" under the bough than the species of this parasite, for it is the truest of true vegetable parasites. We have made a little money from a case or two of imported mistletoe if handled properly. For several years we used to buy a case. It was left in a dry warm basement and if a piece was wanted the whole case was mauled over to get the right piece. In a few days there was nothing but leaves, berries and bare stems. Now, directly it arrives, unpack it and lay it out in a cool, moist, dark cellar, and sort every branch and handle just as little as possible. If a customer asks you for 50 cents or a dollar or two dollars' worth you know at once where it is and you will make some returns and please your customers.

CHRISTMAS WREATHS.

We present herewith engravings from photographs of three Christmas wreaths that we noted last week at the establishment of McKellar & Winterson, Chicago, who made them and others to order for an out of town florist.

The first one is made entirely of the bright red "Winterberry," which seems to be in fine shape this year and which makes a particularly bright and attractive Christmas wreath. The star in the center is scarlet immortelles. Some of the wreaths had this star and others were without.

Wreath of Bouquet Green with Clusters and Star of Scarlet Immortelles.

The second wreath is of holly with winterberry worked in to add color and the wreath is tied with a bow of ribbon to match the berries. On both wreaths the streamers of the bows were much longer than shown in the picture, and of course the length is a matter of taste and price to be asked for the wreath. It is certainly true that the ribbon adds wonderfully to the effectiveness of the wreaths, and as the bows can be quickly attached a few sample wreaths with bows would meet demands till others could be supplied.

The third wreath is heavily made of bouquet green, with four clusters of scarlet immortelles and a star of the same. Of course the star can be omitted.

It seemed to us that pictures of these wreaths might be interesting and suggestive to many of our readers at this time. The winterberry has not to our knowledge ever been illustrated before though now fairly well known. Though devoid of foliage the branches are so thickly covered with bright red berries that they are remarkably effective in Christmas decorations. In plant arrangements in Chicago stores we have seen small branches worked in among the plants with fine effect.

DO THEY DO IT?

Under the above title [the title was written by us.—Ed.] the East Side Floral Co., in the last issue of the Review, complain of wholesale houses selling flowers at wholesale prices to people who are not in any way connected with the trade, and I am sorry to say that I know several cases where there was no question that "they do it." In one case where I figured on some Beauties, the same were supplied by one of the largest growers and wholesalers in Chicago—sold to a purchasing agent, whom the house knew perfectly well had no connection with the trade. I have not bought a flower of them since, and I won't.

I began buying from a commission house, only to find that they also "do it." They send price lists to undertakers, retail buyers just as well as to florists, and when they sold to a party who was buying of me regularly, and I complained, "It was an oversight," I was assured, and "It will not happen again." They made a note of it right there and when a little later two of the firm visited Aurora they proceeded to explain to the same buyer the advantages he would enjoy by dealing directly with them.

I tried another house, one that claimed to be as straight as can be, and before I dealt there a month an undertaker who wished to open an account with me showed me several receipted bills (by way of reference) all billed at wholesale prices and from the same angelic house. I did not say, "Do they do it?" but "Why, and what can be done about it?"

It occurred to me that if the retailers depending on the Chicago market for flowers would form the Retail Florists' Protective Association, inform each other and every florist they can reach of all such transactions and never buy a thing from a house guilty of such practices, they would do something toward putting a stop to it. While I know several cases where orders were accepted and even solicited from people outside of the trade, I know only one case where a Chicago house refused an order from an undertaker, advising him to buy of one of the local retailers, and now several florists think more of E. H. Hunt than they did before, for good actions become known just as readily as bad ones. Now that the wholesalers have heard from us, let them present their side of the story.

Aurora, Ill.

I was much pleased to see the letter of the East Side Floral Co., Champaign, Ill., in the issue of December 5.

This is something we have had to strive against at different times, though it does not usually last long. However, it is hard to feel that persons not in the business receive circulars of wholesale florists and buy at wholesale prices.

Wreath of Winter Berry and Star of Scarlet Immortelles.

In midwinter one does not care to see roses advertised at 6 cents when they cost more to buy if we run out of stock.

Dixon Ill. O. L. Baird.

We are with you. We are glad our friends in Champaign, Ill., have spoken. They voice our sentiments to a dot. About a year ago a leading wholesale florist of Chicago shipped a C. O. D. package to one of our customers in this city (but "not in the trade.") This box consisted of 800 carnations, as fine ones as were then grown. They were billed out at the lowest point of that shipper's Holiday Price List, cheaper by 2 cents than we paid same date to same house. How do you like that?

While we did a little decorating with plants, etc., we were ignorant of the fact that the customer was expecting to delight his friends with real Chicago floral souvenirs. But he did not, however, for, alas, they went wrong and when they arrived three days late we were the first parties notified by the express company. That's where we got next. They were, being, of course, refused, sold by express company for a song.

Of course we got hot, but after the mercury fell a few degrees contented ourselves watching for a recurrence of same when we would and will do some free advertising. It is needless to say we have ordered elsewhere since, although the price current continues to come.

CARNATION NOTES.

Varieties to Propagate.

One of the main questions confronting us about propagating time is what varieties shall we grow next year and how many of each variety, and should we discard some old standby and grow some of the new ones instead? We need just about a certain proportion of white and so many of each pink and red and this must be divided again between the several varieties we have of each color, and it takes considerable study and calculation in order to have your stock just what you want it to be. You must study each variety, just when it is at its best, so you will have a steady supply right through the season and never be without a good crop of each color on some variety. If we have found no new variety which we think good enough to displace any of the older ones it is an easy matter to make up our list as we always have last season's experience to guide us, and if our proportion of each color was right then it will likely be all right this season.

And if a certain color sold poorly and another was continually scarce he would be foolish who would not displace the one with the other, etc. Last year we had a fine bench of Mrs. Bradt and at first it sold well, but people seemed to tire of the fancies, and fine as the blooms were it was always a drag on the market, and so this year we have only a few hundred plants. The public taste in this city seems to run toward solid colors and among these it seems pink is the favorite for decorations, etc., although we have never had a surplus of good scarlet.

In white we shall still hold onto Flora Hill for spring, summer and fall blooming, as it is ahead of anything else at that time, and onto White Cloud as our main mid-winter white, while we give some of last spring's novelties further trial in larger quantities than we are doing this year. A visitor a few days ago remarked that as long as White Cloud did as well for us as it is doing this season we are not greatly in need of a better white. However, we are looking for an improvement on White Cloud in various ways. The growth might well be more upright, the blooms would be prettier with a light fringe and it does not stand warm weather very well. But in spite of all these faults it is a grand variety and pays him who knows how to handle it about as well as any other variety.

In red we have decided to grow the three leaders. Jubilee on account of its color, in which respect it is still unsurpassed. Crane on account of its productiveness early in the fall, and America because it beats them both after Dec. 1.

In pink E. Crocker is again demonstrating that if it is handled properly it beats anything we have ever had as a money getter. The blooms are always of fine size and color, while the stem can hardly be improved upon. Our benches look like wheat fields at present and there is no sign of a let-up during the season. About 55 degrees at night and not too much feeding we consider essential in growing this variety. Mrs. Lawson is fine in size and productiveness but it is always a stiff, coarse bloom. It sells well nevertheless and brings the top price right along, so it pays to grow it if you are willing to do it right. The Marquis is again on our doubtful list, with the chances against it. We had fine plants to house this fall and they took hold nicely, but it does not seem to thrive like Crocker, which is planted next to it. The stems are still rather short and the blooms a little better than Joost and unless it improves wonderfully in the next few weeks it will have to go. We have seen it on several places and all are just like ours. Perhaps the easiest one to manage of all the carnations is Mrs. F. Joost and if the blooms were about one-half larger it would outstrip anything we have as a money maker. Even small as it is compared with Lawson and Crocker it pays mighty well where a Scott grade bloom can be used to advantage.

Triumph is still a fine variety with some growers, as was proven by a vase of 100 blooms at the fall show. Scott is still grown in large quantities, and so is old Tidal Wave and its red sports, but we can see no money in them, as the blooms are not wanted except as a last resort.

Genevieve Lord does not seem to have caught the popular fancy and we never took a fancy to it either on account of its light edge. If it had an even color all over the bloom it would be very pretty indeed.

Among the fancies Mrs. Bradt still holds the lead and when propagated early and kept going right along it is indeed hard to beat. Olympia makes a better plant, a prettier bloom and a longer stem and was claimed to be much freer, but somehow not many growers have been successful with it. We think this variety would well repay the grower who would be willing to study its wants if he has a market for fancies. Armazindy is still grown by some and its productiveness makes it profitable, but its color is against it as it is neither a white nor striped enough to go as a fancy. This variety, by the way, is the parent of several fine seedlings and sports, all of which seem to inherit its great productiveness.

We have never been able to see any money in the yellows nor the crimsons, so we do not grow them any more. In the east where they are said to be more popular there ought to be good money in Gold Nugget and the two Cubans, Maceo and Gomez.

Perhaps the most interesting varieties on the place outside of the seedlings are the varieties introduced last spring and naturally we watch them very closely in order to discover every good point as well as every fault they may possess. By this time we have just about made up our minds what varieties we will grow all we can of and what ones we shall discard, as a variety that does not promise good results by the holidays is usually not worth bothering with.

Perhaps the most promising white with us is Lorna, which is all its introducers claimed for it. It has fine long and strong stems, and a prettier bloom than White Cloud, besides having a more erect growth. If it proves as free as White Cloud it will displace it, and it promises to do so now. Queen Louise is another one we like very much on account of its earliness and fine habit. It can be best described as an early and much improved Alaska, which variety it resembles very much.

Norway has disappointed us somewhat. When we planted the fine, large plants in August we expected to begin cutting from them early, but it bloomed very little before November 1st, but the blooms are very fine and on good stems. We hope to do it better next season. Hoosier Maid is too much like a white Daybreak to suit us. We do not consider it up with the others and shall drop it. Elm City will meet the same fate. This variety was recommended to us as an improved Flora Hill but we fail to see the improvement, and in fact we consider it far inferior.

In bright pink we only tried two, of which Dorothy is the best. It is perhaps the earliest and freest variety we have on the place and there seems to be no let up to its blooming. The blooms average a little larger than Scott but the stem is much better and there is no surplus grass. The color is not so good as Joost else it would easily displace that variety. A vase of 100 blooms at the fall show outlasted everything else on the carnation tables. Irene made a poor growth in the field although it had the same show that the others had. It bloomed early, however, and the blooms, which were very fair, were borne on good stems. We may try a few another season, but it is not likely to crowd out any of our present list.

We have been growing Elma during the past three years and as a Daybreak colored variety we have never seen its equal. The growth is strong and erect. The stems are long and strong, supporting a large, well colored and well formed bloom, which is very spicy. It is very early and free and we consider it a money maker. It has displaced Morning Glory on our place.

Avondale is a pink sport from Armazindy and it is giving good satisfaction wherever it is being tried. We did not invest in Prosperity nor Roosevelt as neither color would be likely to go well here. We hear nothing but good reports about the latter, but the former seems to be late this season. Perhaps another season with home grown cuttings this variety will do better. A. F. J. Baur.

New White Chrysanthemum Polar Queen.

CHRYSANTHEMUM POLAR QUEEN.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of the new white chrysanthemum Polar Queen, raised by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., and exhibited at some of the shows by them this season.

It has made a very favorable impression and was awarded 90 points by the Cincinnati committee of the Chrysanthemum Society.

During the winter months when there is a lack of sunshine it is difficult to get the long stems to set their buds. This is generally the result of keeping the benches too wet, using liquid food too freely and keeping the atmosphere too close and moist. To stop the stems from running, dry off the bench to as near the wilting point as possible and reduce the temperature to 56 degrees at night and 68 degrees on bright days; bend down all the long stems that are near the glass; and if the foliage is very dense it will facilitate the setting of buds to pick off as many of the leaves as will allow the rays of the sun to reach the surface of the bench. As soon as the buds appear, begin to give water gradually, increasing the supply as the buds develop and raising the temperature gradually till it reaches the normal. I have used this method with good results in houses that showed too rank a growth. It requires careful watching so that wilting does not take place, especially on bright days. With longer days and brighter sunshine these long stems, that are to all appearances blind, will form buds and develop rapidly. They ought to be carefully tied so as to keep sufficient length of straight stem, as a bent stem on a Beauty bud detracts very much from its appearance and value.

By the beginning of March the bench will be thoroughly filled with roots and a rich mulch, one inch thick, will materially assist in developing the buds, which will now come in quantity. They will also require copious supplies of water, using liquid food once a week until it is time to replant. Some growers advocate running the plants over a second season, claiming they can get more medium length stems than from young stock. The method of lifting and transplanting recommended by these growers augments the labor very considerably. Having tried it myself and seen it tried by several good growers, I found the result in every case disappointing, one such experience being generally sufficient. Apart from the question of productiveness, the plants as a whole lacked that freshness, vigor and symmetry so dear to the heart of the tasteful and up-to-date grower.

A Christmas Basket.

The rose Queen of Edgely, which is a sport from the Beauty, requires exactly the same treatment. The bud is the same shape and quite as large; the color a very pleasing pink, several shades lighter than the Beauty. RIBES.

A CHRISTMAS BASKET.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a basket recently seen at the store of Mr. E. Wienhoeber, Chicago.

The basket is of silver birch bark, filled with a Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, with a sash of light green Porto Rican matting tied with a bow of dark green ribbon. The effect was very fine and this arrangement with variations in the colors of the trimmings will no doubt be a very strong seller this coming Christmas.

GENERAL PROPAGATION.

[Read before the Tarrytown, N. Y., Horticultural Society.]

This subject certainly is most comprehensive in its latitude. The area it covers is almost boundless. We, therefore, propose to speak tonight only on that part of the field relating to the vegetable world and leave the outside realm to those whose opportunities are more favored for investigation. We shall treat only of the reproduction or increase of plants by seeds, cuttings, layers and rootlets.

We propose to speak only as to the methods and results of our own experience. Probably each one of you has some favorite method of his own by which he has obtained most satisfactory results, and should your humble servant succeed in affording even a hint to any one of this society that will lead him to a new and better method than that which he now practices, and by which he shall obtain more satisfactory results than those which he at present obtains, his expectations will be far more than realized.

We will first speak of the production of plants from seeds, which for the most part is nature's method. And just here I will say that I am often more than surprised that the amateur florist succeeds as well as he does in germinating seeds and obtaining results at all satisfactory, while we, who have spent a good part of a lifetime at the work, are so often disappointed.

It is usually the case with extremely minute seeds, those like particles of dust, that we find our greatest trouble; for example, begonia or petunia seed and the like. For such seed we take the greatest care in the preparation of the soil, making it about equal parts of good potting soil, sand and leaf-mould, mixing these ingredients thoroughly, then passing them through a sieve of about ¼-inch mesh. This preparation of soil being completed, we usually take a shallow box or flat, say one-half of a milk-can box, which is about 3 inches deep; bore six 1-inch holes in the bottom, cover it with about one inch of sphagnum moss, which we saturate with moisture. Over the moss we place our prepared soil, filling the flat even full, compress it moderately with a flat trowel or board (do not make the soil too firm).

We then wet the soil thoroughly by several sprayings, observing not to apply sufficient water at one time to render the soil muddy (by all means avoid that condition). It is intended that this moisture will remain until the seeds germinate. Over the surface we then sift a very light coat, say ⅛-inch, of the same prepared soil, using a sieve of about ⅛-inch mesh, taking pains to sift it evenly over the entire surface of the dampened soil. Leave it in that condition, do not compress it, but leave it open and porous, that the fine seeds may find lodgement between the particles of soil and thus gather more moisture than they would resting on a smooth, hard surface.

The seed is then placed on a smooth piece of cardboard and carefully and evenly dusted over the soil. We then set the flat aside where it will not be exposed to any strong currents of air, and cover it with wire netting of about ¾-inch mesh, over which we spread about one inch of damp, loose sphagnum moss. This covering can be lifted at any time if needs be to examine the seed and at the same time it retains an even moisture to the soil and allows sufficient air to reach both soil and seed. If the moss at any time shows dryness, dampen it with a fine spray. Watch your seed carefully. When you think it has had sufficient time to germinate (if needs be, use a magnifying glass), but do not water it unless it becomes absolutely neeessary, which condition should not occur unless the moss above has been neglected.

As soon as you find that the seed is fairly well sprouted remove the screen and moss and replace it with a pane of glass, allowing a small air space at the sides of the box. Cover the glass for a time with a sheet of tissue paper, and when moisture is needed use a very fine spray. Apply the water slowly, but use enough to meet all needs for several days, if possible. Too frequent waterings has a tendency to sour the soil, but do not, even for an hour, allow the surface to become dry, which condition is sure death to the young plants. Overwatering is nearly or quite as destructive. I mean too frequent applications of water. Be sure to allow no strong sunlight to strike the young plantlets and at the same time do not apply too strong a shade. Tissue paper allows all the light needed at this stage of growth. You will find "eternal vigilance the price of success."

As soon as the little seedlings have made sufficient growth to enable them to be handled, be sure to prick them off, or transplant them into fresh soil. Seedlings like these I usually allow about one square inch of space. Be sure that this work is carefully done, that the fine rootlets are not injured, and that they are down full length into the new soil. If the soil in which they were sown is allowed to approach slight dryness before they are removed it facilitates the lifting of them without injury to the roots. After transplanting, water carefully with fine spray and shade until they are nicely started in their new home, observing to shade carefully until well under way. Never allow them to flag or wilt at any time.

If by neglect or oversight they at any time become wilted, I prefer to saturate a sheet of paper with water and lay the wetted side next to the plants, as near as possible, but not allow it to rest upon them. This I prefer to immediate watering. As soon as they stiffen up you can then apply the water, but do not use a heavy spray.

The larger sized seeds, such as salvias, myosotis and verbenas, etc., are treated in the following manner: Use good friable potting loam, screen as before described, level the soil carefully in the flat, compress slightly, then sow the seed. When sown compress soil and seed together. This done, water thoroughly with fine spray. Over the seed with your fine ⅛-inch mesh sieve spread about ¼-inch of soil evenly. This covering do not water. It will absorb as much moisture as is necessary from the moist soil beneath, and at the same time it will remain open and porous. Over all spread about one inch of loose sphagnum moss, well moistened, but not saturated. Keep this nicely moist with spray until the seedlings begin to show above the soil, but be on your guard; as soon as they begin to show themselves remove the moss and cover the flat with damp paper—or an inverted flat answers the purpose better.

As soon as the young seedlings are generally in sight remove this covering and substitute glass, about an inch above the soil. The glass should be shaded for a few days with thin paper. As soon as the plants are generally in sight give all the air and light they will stand, but do not neglect to keep the soil nicely moist at all times, never allowing the plants at any time to become wilted.

As soon as large enough, transplant into new soil, being very careful to firm the soil well about the roots. Water carefully and shade during the heat of the day until they become well started.

The foregoing relates to seeds sown in the house in flats at any time of the year. Seeds sown outside in frames I cover with glass and lath-shades. Leave the glass in place until the seeds are nicely up, then remove the glass, keeping the shades in place until the plants become strong enough to stand full air and sunlight. Transplant as soon as seedlings are large enough.

For seeds slow of germination the moss over them in the frame answers the same purpose as in the house, retaining an even moisture without hardening the soil.

We next come to propagating plants from slips or cuttings, as they are termed. This branch of the florist's work requires many favorable conditions to insure invariable success. For instance, a house that can be controlled absolutely as to shade, light, heat and moisture; plants in a perfectly healthy condition and proper stage of growth from which he can take his cuttings. It is folly to take a sick plant and cut it into pieces and expect to obtain strong, healthy growth. If these requirements are met, a failure of success would seem to be the fault of the propagator.

A propagating bench with slate bottom comes as near perfection as any I have ever used. The openings between the slate are never closed by expansion, as is the case with a board bottom. If your propagating bench has a board bottom let the boards extend across the bench so as to afford even drainage at all points. If near the end and on the side of each board you nail a thin piece of wood about ⅛-inch thick (one half of an 8-inch label will do) it will separate your boards and insure an opening of that extent (⅛-inch) at all times, no matter how much the boards are expanded by water. And these openings will allow all surplus water to escape, and unless the surplus water can escape from the bottom the sand becomes sour and consequently destructive to the cuttings. The sand must be kept fresh and sweet. Never place cuttings into sour sand.

When sand is first placed upon the bench screen it through a sieve of about ¼-inch mesh to remove all coarse gravel or other foreign matter it may contain. Place about three inches of loose sand on bench. This when well watered and firmed will be about 2½ inches deep. Make sand so firm that you can make but slight impression on it with the tips of your fingers. It is now ready for your cuttings.

If steam heat is used, I prefer that the pipes should be some distance below the bench, which will insure a more uniform heat over the bench bottom. If too close the intense heat is likely to be injurious to the cuttings directly above it. If hot water is used, the pipes may be closer to the bottom of bench, as the heat is not as intense as is the case with steam.

Now let us consider our shading. The mode of shading I most prefer and which I use almost entirely is as follows: Use white muslin of medium weight and of same width, or slightly wider than the bench. Cut it into pieces about six feet long, hem the ends and sew small brass rings one-half inch in diameter about eight inches apart across each end of curtain, along the hem. Insert screw eyes about one foot above the bench at the back. These are to support the curtain at back. Construct a frame as follows: Strip of board ½-inch thick and about 2½ inches wide and same length as your curtain; to each end of this attach heavy wires of sufficient length to extend across the bench. This forms three sides of a square. The ends of the wire farthest from the strip of wood are bent downward at right angles. Run these wires through the rings on the ends of your curtain and then hook them into the screw eyes that were placed at back and above the bench. This construction affords a shade that can be adjusted at will. When not in use shove the curtain back, raise the frame and fasten it to the roof by a small piece of cord or by a hook.

During the day when shade is needed lower the frame; draw the curtain forward. It shades the bench and at the same time allows an abundance of light and air. Curtain may be sprayed at any time to moisten the atmosphere and thus keep cuttings from wilting without wetting the cuttings. This is a condition that is very often required. It is always at hand, never in the way, and answers every requirement for which shading is needed.

We are now ready for the cuttings and this part of the work a propagator must learn in a great degree by experience—must learn by experience what stock is suitable and what is not, no matter what the variety of plant. With plants such as coleus, ageratum, salvias and like soft wooded plants, any soft tip will meet all requirements; while others, as the rose, hardy shrubs and other plants of like nature, the stock must be selected in a certain condition of growth, some more firm than others, some must be cut just below a node or eye, while others may be cut at almost any point and rooted with equal success.

In the case of roses I prefer single-eyed cuttings, which method affords double the amount of stock from the same number of plant stems, and often even more. The plants obtained by this method are equally as good or better than those grown from two or three-eyed cuttings. One thing is absolutely important—that is, that your stock be in as thrifty and healthy state of growth as possible and taken at the proper stage of growth, neither too hard nor too soft, usually at a stage between hardness and sappiness, moderately firm. Never allow the foliage to wilt a particle if possible from the time it is removed from the parent plant until it is ready to be potted from the cutting bench.

The cuttings being made, get them into the bench as soon as possible, keeping the foliage at all times as fresh as when growing on the parent plant. See that they are well firmed in the sand and watered. The first watering needs, usually, to be sufficient to settle the sand well around the cutting; after that require more or less water daily according to the nature of the plant. Soft wooded cuttings usually require watering more frequently than those of harder growth, while geraniums would be ruined by the same liberal supply that coleus need. Give these a watering when first placed in sand. They will scarcely need more, save an occasional spraying if the foliage is inclined to droop, for eight or ten days, or until they become nicely calloused, and even then they are better if kept but moderately moist.

At no time allow the atmosphere in the house to become close and muggy, as it is sometimes termed, on any class of cuttings. And, by the way, the curtain shade I have mentioned allows the propagating house to be thoroughly ventilated at all times without any detriment to the stock in the bench.

As to temperature, I prefer a bottom heat of 55 to 65 degrees, house temperature about 10 degrees lower, and both bench and house as uniform as possible. In a great measure I am guided by the feeling of the house temperature both on my person and by my inhalation of the atmosphere. The air must be genial and pleasant to be in a proper condition.

We now come to a class of plants which are usually increased both by division and by root cuttings. Many varieties are increased by a single division of the crowns and by the young offshoots that spring up around the crown. Others are increased by the stronger roots, which are invested with plant germs, or eyes as they are sometimes termed, the entire length of the root. These roots may be cut into sections an inch or two long, spread over a flat soil, like seed flat, covered with soil half an inch or so deep, in which they readily take root and soon throw up leaf stems, and in this stage may be potted as soon as large enough. And, by the way, these flats are greatly benefited if covered with an inch or so of the moss until growth is well started. To this class of plants belong anemones, bouvardias, etc.

There is one item of special importance in propagation which may be of interest to some of you. It is this: You have all been annoyed at times more or less by the sand in your propagating bench becoming sour, and that, too, at times when it is difficult to replace it with a fresh supply. To avoid this I make it a rule, as each batch of cuttings comes from the bench, that the sides and bottom of the bench are thoroughly washed and then sprayed with a solution of copperas and ammonia. This I apply with a fine spray syringe. It seems to have the effect of destroying all fungus on the bench.

If the sand is not to be used at once it should be thrown up in a ridge along the middle of the bench. It is thus renovated by exposure to the air and the acidity seems to pass away. And even though fresh sand is used for each batch of cuttings I wash the bench and spray with ammonia and copperas mixture as soon as the old sand has been removed from the bench. J. W. C.

RIBBON BOWS.

The acompanying engraving is from a photograph of a display of ribbon bows made in front of their store by Messrs. C. L. Brunson & Co., Paducah, Ky. This seems an unusual display for a florist to make, but we understand it attracted much favorable comment and drew trade, which is the main point in any special display.

At our request Messrs. Brunson & Co. have favored us with the following regarding their experience in the use of ribbon and bows:

We have entirely dispensed with the sale of ribbon by the yard and now keep in stock bows of different sizes, colors and widths, displaying them, rather than the bolt, in which we come in competition with the cheap ribbon counter sales. The bows seen in the cut are made of Hunt's "Holly" and "Orchid" brands, Nos. 16 and 22. The latter width we use in our general work, and it retails for 25 cents a yard, but in the bows we use 1½ yards and get 50 cents for the bow, this being the smallest bow we make, and start it with three loops and one short streamer, and from that we run to the whole bolt for something "swell."

We find that the use of a well-made bow draws trade, and instead of our orders reading "Ribon furnished," it is "One of your fancy bows." We have also found since we have introduced the bows that our ribbon sales have increased tenfold. We have used at one time six bolts of ribbon, while previously that amount would have run us as many months, as formerly two-thirds of all the ribbon used was furnished, and often of such poor quality, and coming direct from us, with the flowers, recipients would think we furnished it, and often to our embarrassment. Now we use our own brands and have a uniform appearance to all our work.

Not only has the ribbon increased in the sale but in the demand for it on sprays, baskets, wheat, designs; in fact, wherever a finished effect is desired, and a profit is attached to it at the same time. We never use the old "shoestring" tie of a double bow knot and let the ends come where they will, but beginning with the three loops try in an order of a dozen not to have any two alike, using more or less loops, longer or shorter loops, streamers of different length, and coming out at the top, sides or bottom, or a fancy puff knot.

SOW BUGS.

By Joseph Coenen.

[Read before the Kentucky Society of Florists, Louisville.]

It has been quite a while since we had a paper on any subject so I thought I would write something on bugs.

Cellar bugs or wood lice, or better known here as sowbugs, have of late years become very troublesome and as greenhouses get older they seem to increase wonderfully. The method of destroying them generally is with paris green. It is not to any new remedy that I wish to call your attention but to a better way of applying the paris green. Paris green is, as you know, a strong poison and should be handled very carefully and not be allowed to lay around the shed or greenhouses.

The way we used to use paris green was to mix it with bran, corn meal, sugar, oat meal, etc., but these substances are all more or less troublesome to apply and take too much time to distribute around. Another reason why we were not always successful in destroying the bugs is that we used too much paris green. These sowbugs are very smart and when they see the stuff you use is too green by putting too much poison in it they can taste it and leave it alone and seem to say "I am not so green as your stuff." It takes but very little paris green to kill a good many bugs. The principal thing to do is to mix the substance used with the poison so thoroughly that they can not be separated, no matter how little is taken.

Paris green is, as you know, a powder that can be mixed in all proportions with any other powdered substance so as to be inseparable. The best substance that I have found and use at present is ordinary wheat flour. The way I use it is this: Take one quart of very dry flour, sift well on a stiff piece of paper, take one spoonful of pure paris green and mix till the flour and paris green are well incorporated. This will give you a very pale green powder, the green hardly noticeable when dry, but darker when wet. What you don't use right away put in tin can in dry place and label poison. It will keep for a long time and is ready for use.

Now take a tin can with a tight fitting lid, an empty pound can of quick yeast is the best, on the bottom of can make about four or five little holes with a sharp nail, fill can nearly full of the powder, put on the lid tight, and you are ready for the picnic. Go to the house you want to destroy the bugs in and hold the can with holes down over the edge of the front side board of the bench and give a gentle shake as you go, distributing the powder as evenly and thinly as you can. You will soon learn to do it right. Don't think that you put on too little; better a little at a time spread all along than in little patches.

Use powder two or three weeks in succession and spread it in all the houses the same day so that the bugs can not go from one house to the other, for if you kill them in one house and not in the other they soon will be all over them again. The best time to put on the poison is just before dark, for the bugs only feed at night. Also put the poison on only where the boards are dry. Water the houses in the early morning and put the poison on at night and don't water for a day or two if possible.

Do not put any of the poisoned flour on the leaves of the plants, for if the leaves are anyway damp when powder is put on it will stick. Water will not wash it off and the leaves look bad. Don't give up if you see a few bugs alive a few days after putting on the poison. All the bugs don't go to the free lunch the same day.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

By Joseph Reeve.

[Read before the Chicago Florists' Club Dec. 11.]

This beautiful and now popular plant first came to us surrounded with mystery and difficulties affecting its cultivation, but we have all succeeded in growing it well this season and hope to be able to rest and propagate our own stock another season.

We may learn something by looking up its parentage and the experience of those who are growing it well from their own cuttings.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine is the result of a cross between B. socotrana and B. Dregei, one parent coming from the hot sandy island of Socotra and the other from the Cape of Good Hope, one forming semi-tubers and the other a fleshy, globular tuber. This indicates that it should be subject to great heat and then again cooler treatment at stated periods. Also that like all plants forming eyes or scaly tubers it must have sufficient growth to enable it to store up its strength in the formation of the eye or scaly tuber, which is to be the future plant.

As to soil, we all know that begonias flourish best in a compost of good, sweet, sandy loam, free from manure or fungus and enriched with leaf mould. Perfect drainage and always sufficient moisture without sogginess is essential during the growing period. These requisites, coupled with light shading and good ventilation, have given us the great measure of our success this season.

My experience has been that from March 17 to June a temperature of 52 degrees, giving as little water as possible, the plants being gently shaken out and started in a brisk heat in May, shaded during starting-up time, was fairly successful.

Here is what one of the best English authorities (Robert McIntosh, gardener to F. Cobbold, Esq., Felixtow, England, and fellow of the Royal Horticultural Society) says: "We grow Begonia Gloire de Lorraine rather extensively, and give it a rest by withholding water and keeping it in a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees for two to three months. Then it is introduced into a brisk heat, causing it to throw up a number of young shoots, which root very easily. By withholding water I mean giving the plant just enough to keep it alive. With some gardeners here it blooms right up to the period it is placed in heat in this climate."

BUFFALO.

The past two weeks has seen a better style of business. Several good weddings and a few prominent buds emerging so sweetly into society have called for many flowers. I notice a good many prominent notices of deaths have been accompanied by the stereotyped appendage, "Flowers gratefully declined," but that no longer counts and we often notice that our best orders are on these occasions.

On the whole I would say that chrysanthemums have gone rather slowly this year—not quite as good as last year—although fine flowers now find a ready market. There is not much to beat old Lincoln for yellow just about now, and another old favorite, Maud Dean, for late still holds the fort.

There are not too many good roses coming into town. Carnations are cleaned up regularly every day. These certainly bring a better price, both to the wholesaler and retailer, than they did three or four years ago, even for the same quality, and that is very encouraging. John Esler would say this is accounted for by our high tariff, but I don't think it's that or our annexing Porto Rico. I think the taste for flowers has grown a little faster than the supply. Violets are much too scarce to be healthy. Black aphis and spot must be getting in their work pretty generally over a large section of the country.

Those who live on the sunny plains of Long Island or the verdant fields of Chester county, Pennsylvania, will be surprised to read of zero and below in northern and western New York, but so it is, and now again we are saving fuel and walking in mud.

Since the convention met here I don't believe a Buffalo bowler has handled a ball, except the bowling fiend, George McClure, who would rather bowl than go to church. But there is talk among the boys of getting together and really trying to shoot, so after New Year's we are going to have a good tournament and they are coming out here to my little farm, where there is plenty of room. Billy Kasting says if he can't hit the targets he will fire at the Empire State Express as she flys by our southern boundary at a mile in 35 seconds. There is an advantage in coming here, as the targets will cost nothing. Instead of Peoria black birds we are going to use the Balsley bottomless pots. We have found at last a profitable use for them. The only trouble will be that expert shots like Louie Neubeck and Dennis O'Connell are apt to send their charge through the bottomless part and get no credit for a "dead bird."

I regret to say that for two months past our genial and popular Capt. James Braik has been a great sufferer with inflammatory rheumatism. At last accounts he was well on to health. It must hurt awful for a man of Jimmy's temperament to have to stay indoors.

We had a very interesting call from Mr. C. W. Ward. He found his way to this forlorn village, where we could the better talk carnation lore. Any ideas that you have about carnation culture that have not already been fermenting in Mr. C. W. W.'s more than active brain must be most remarkably original, and you must explode it quick or it will be a fossil. All carnation growers owe much to the experiments, research, time, money and energy that Mr. Ward has devoted to his adopted flower.

Mr. S. S. Skidelsky was also here, the independent drummer who will sell you anything but bores you about nothing. He was principally looking to the interest of the Mrs. Nelson carnation, which he controls, and if it is as good everywhere as it is here he has a winner.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions for Dec. 2-7.

A holiday is always an oasis in the midst of a desert here. There is a journey of at least a week through a very barren land, both before and after. And this week was no exception otherwise than for its exceeding dryness. I heard several representative retailers say they rarely do a poorer business even in the summer weeks. Consequently buying was languid and results to the grower were disastrous because contrary to all prophesies nearly all kinds of material was plentiful.

Chrysanthemums are holding out wondrously, proving that many were holding back in hopes of realizing last year's good prices at this date. Pinks became over plentiful. Violets took a drop in price but sold out very cleanly. Narcissus and hyacinths arrived in great numbers and from the amount of stevia coming in one might think it was being cut from every bush by the roadside, and jonquils have put in a plea for recognition. Prices on everything but red roses have been very reasonable and the wholesale ice chests have been running over with good things because quality on everything is now first class.

Signs of Christmas are around, particularly the wholesale places and several of the large retail stores in other lines of trade have already put up their decorations. The prettiest one I ever saw for interior work is at Filene's where three-foot twigs, dipped in white wash, have been woven into hen wire, so fastened up as to give the appearance of a net work of snow covered branches over a pathway in the woods.

Various Items.

Another feature causing poor trade is the smallpox scare for which there seems to be good foundation. Naturally it prevents some social events and lessens attendance at others. There are no cases yet heard of that particularly frighten the florists, but a daily paper tells of a florist who has lately worked in Hyde Park being taken to the pesthouse from off the streets of Boston. And it develops he was very recently in the Park street market after a couple of letters that were waiting for him. Vaccination is quite general among us and from the cosmopolitan character of the crowd, particularly at Park street, it would seem as though we need it if anyone does.

In connection with Mr. McMulkin's start for himself much comment is made from the fact that all the employes, five in number, at Galvin's Back Bay store, gave two weeks' notice of leaving, to enter the employ of their old foreman. Not being in the habit of temporizing, Mr. Galvin instantly shortened this two weeks to two minutes, and took personal charge of the store. New employes are advertised for but so far as I know at present no changes have been made except the employment of Maurice Hambro at the Tremont street store, to make up for the removal of a salesman or two to the other place. The aggregate of evidence is that all want to see the new firm prosper but object to anything detrimental to the immense business being done by Mr. Galvin.

John Forbes is still at the city hospital but is doing nicely and would probably be out except for the fact that the institution is quarantiued because a case of smallpox got in there. John should have purchased a 'three-star-ring lucky-box" while they were in the market.

R. Miller, manager of the Exeter Rose Conservatories away up the Merrimac, passed through Boston a few days ago on his way to inspect the work of others in his line in New York, Pennsylvania, and in the region of Chicago. He makes New Hampshire produce a first class red rose of any kind and evidently means to keep up the standard.

At a recent election in that city E. N. Peirce was re-elected alderman of Waltham in a three-cornered campaign.

A FOLIAGE WREATH.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a wreath of foliage and orchids arranged by "Shibeley, the florist," San Francisco. He speaks of it as "some autumn leaves, a few orchids, wheat and ribbon." He does not say what "autumn foliage" it is, and it would seem to be from a vine.

Anyway the effect is certainly excellent and we are glad of the opportunity to reproduce the photograph. The material is most admirably handled and the picture will, we are sure, be suggestive and helpful to many.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The tap, tap, of the hammer heard in many of our commission houses indicates that the social season is in full swing in points that draw their supply of cut flowers from this city. These shipping orders nearly always demand choice stock and their effect on our market is felt more and more each season. Prices are very much the same as one week ago with the demand sufficient to clear up all fine stock. Large quantities of Beauties are coming in that find ready sale. Tea roses are moving well and on one or two days select was scarce.

Carnations are increasing in quantity and improving in quality. Edward Reid is handling great numbers of them at from $2 to $3 a hundred. Valley is less plentiful than during the late fall, but enough is promised for the end of this month. Double violets continue scarce. Mr. Conley is sending in some splendid blooms to H. H. Battles; they are probably the finest coming in town today.

The use of orchids is becoming more general throughout the city. Formerly they could be had only in the leading down town stores, now the best uptowners have them too. J. J. Habermehl's Sons receive a regular shipment from Geo. Field, of Washington, D. C. An attempt is being made to advance the price of Cypripedium insigne to 20 cents each by a couple of the larger growers. Many blooms, however, are sold at the old price, 15 cents each.

Before closing the market report it may be of interest to note that the Queen of Edgely rose is making a place for itself beside American Beauty as a distinct variety of great merit. E. Bernheimer handles some of this variety and is much pleased with it.

Various Notes.

Jasper Lorimer, of Croyden, Pa., has made a specialty of yellow daisies for the past few years, bringing them into flower a little earlier each season. He is now cutting nice flowers with stems that will soon pass from medium to long.

Leo Niessen spent a day early this month among his carnation growers. He is quite enthusiastic over the condition of their stock, which is finer than ever. Very little loss from stem rot was found, one large place having lost but 2 per cent of the plants set out in the field, from all causes.

City councils passed appropriate resolutions last week on the death of their esteemed fellow member, Thomas Meehan. It is proposed to name a small park in his honor.

Harry Huff, lately with H. I. Faust, of Merion, has gone into the cut fern business on his own account.

E. Bernheimer is receiving a red seedling carnation in quantity described as deeper than Thomas Cartledge, of good size and stiff stem.

The Lehman wagon heater is an excellent thing for our retail florists during the cold weather. H. F. Mitchell is the local agent for this valuable invention.

Mrs. George Redles, wife of the secretary and treasurer of the Germantown Horticultural Society, died on Thursday of last week after a long illness. Mr. Redles has the deep sympathy of his many florist friends. PHIL.

UTICA, N. Y.

The literary drummers don't seem to call at Utica much of late. This is a distinct and exceptional advantage to the pent up city itself but distressing to the outside world of florists who like to know what Peter Crowe, Billy Mathews, Alderman Baker and all the rest are doing, so I stopped off for a day. There is always a bed and breakfast for me at Mr. Crowe's, but your stay there would be more pleasant in its retrospect if you were allowed to eat simply what was good and sufficient for you. What with Jersey cream, chicken, oysters, beefsteak, and irrigation of various brands, you are in a state of distention all the time. You have read of the meals of the Terrible Turks that visit this country to wrestle and get drowned going home. Well, it is something like it, only more so.

But we waddled as best we could after lunch to view the new block of rose houses which Mr. Crowe built this past summer. We have seen such blocks, or something very near. It was fine to look upon and the roses, nearly all Bridesmaid and Bride, could not possibly be finer. The earliest were planted in August and the last end of September and the latest planted are now (or were four weeks ago) giving a fine cut. The block consists of six houses, each 150x18, all connected, with no partition wall between them, just red cedar 4x4 posts supporting the gutter. They are equal span, one-quarter pitch houses, one path in center of house and a path each side next the wall, or rather posts, for there is no wall, only a 4x4 post and five run of 1¼-inch steam pipes. Mr. Crowe said the pitch was one-quarter, and without stopping to doubt it, I would rather say now that they were one-third pitch. There didn't seem a dark or gloomy spot in the whole range. If there was a partition between the houses there would be, but the whole field, as you may call it, was daylight. In our dark and stormy winters, particularly the months of December, January and February, it is not much use catering to the direct rays of the sun, because he is mostly behind a cloud when above the horizon, but there is every reason to catch every ray of light, and light comes from the north as well as the south, so as much as possible must be glass and little as possible wood.

When Mr. Crowe sends out his Adiantum Bardii everyone should grow it, for it is a great fern and he pulls it to pieces and makes it grow as freely planted out on benches as we used to grow rhubarb beneath a greenhouse bench "in the days of auld lang syne."

The genial Mr. Matthews we found with a house or two of very fine chrysanthemums, but orchids is what his place is best known for. Two houses have been pulled down and rebuilt the past summer for the growing of cattleyas. Mr. Matthews had not cut but few Cattleya labiata. He retards them so as to have the bloom at the holidays instead of their natural flowering time, October. This can be done, but I think at some expense to the vigor of the plant and size and quality of bloom; still a cattleya flower at Christmas would be worth three times what it was in October, when the magnificent labiata is rather too plentiful.

We were led to inspect an establishment that was entirely new to us, S. Whitton & Son. We did not think as many cyclamen were grown in western and central New York as is to be seen on this place. Many thousands of all sizes and some variations in quality, but the larger part fine, healthy plants. This firm also grows tens of thousands of young cinerarias and calceolarias. Of course all these are not used in Utica or neighborhood, but go everywhere.

Utica has more greenhouses to the square mile than any city of its size that I am acquainted with, and to get around them all would take a week, but we visited several others and saw several good houses of carnations.

Mr. Benedict's large range of houses we never saw look better, and it is pleasant to see a solid bed of old Niphetos rose plants or bushes 5 feet high, resembling Viburnum Opulis in the month of June. Houses of Brides and Maids were looking fine. Here is a house with two 6-foot solid beds of carnations, beds raised not one foot from the ground. I never saw finer flowers; every variety without exception was almost a fourth larger than you see them on a raised bench. How long that will last I don't know, but I do know that I would not want to be the one to tie or clean or pick them. It is highly inconvenient and you would either want to be an acrobat or have a patent knuckle-jointed spine to work among them with any comfort or energy. Let them be a little nearer the level of your nose, please, for me.

And then it was time to show Peter Crowe and Billy Matthews, experts as they respectively are on adiantums and odontoglossums, that in the presence of a bowling expert (?) they can only make three and five pins the first ball.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower business since my last report has been rather quiet, as it always is right after Thanksgiving. Cut flowers are not overplentiful, at least those grown in this vicinity. A few cold days last week kept the fakir off the streets and as stock is somewhat high in price the chances are that he will not be seen again until spring. Violets have been very scarce, requiring some hustling to get enough to supply the demand; prices remain unchanged. Other kinds of stock, such as roses, carnations, bulb stuff and chrysanthemums, are in good demand and of uniformly excellent quality. We are all looking forward now to a good Christmas business. Holly and ground-pine wreathing have made their appearance and the stores will soon put on their holiday attire. The demand for this stuff is heavy and from reports will be very scarce and high priced, and out of reach of the street peddlers.

The Christmas prices on cut stuff are as yet unsettled and the wholesalers say that they will not make any sudden advance in prices.

Chrysanthemums are about over and only a few stragglers are now coming in, which bring all the way from $3 to $15 per 100.

The wholesale men claim that the demand has been fairly good the past week and that they are carrying very little stock over these days. The shipping trade has also been very good and quite a number of orders have already been booked for Christmas.

The Missouri State Horticultural Society.

This society held a meeting last Thursday at St. Joseph, Mo., and during its session adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The Missouri State Horticultural Society will be expected to take an active part in the coming Louisiana Purchase Exposition to be held in St. Louis in 1903, and

Whereas, The time is now at hand that steps should be taken looking to the matter of a complete and grand exhibition of the horticultural products of our state on that occasion, therefore be it

Resolved, That the executive committee is hereby instructed and empowered to take such steps as will in their opinion insure successful results.

The next meeting of the society will be held in Springfield, Mo.

Notes.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., continue to send their large cut of flowers to this market, which they find one of the best the year around. Their stock is, as usual, of the best quality.

Frank M. Ellis has been sick for the past few days with the grippe, but it is expected will be around again this week.

Shaw Banquet.

The twelfth annual banquet to gardeners, florists and nurserymen took place Saturday evening, Dec. 7, at 8 o'clock; covers were laid for 300. Prof. William Trelease, in his usual happy frame of mind, acted as toastmaster. Among those who responded to toasts were: Mr. Taylor, late of the Pan-American Exposition; Mr. Judson; Prof. Stevens, of Carthage, Mo.; Judge Marshall, of Joliet, Ill.; Paul F. Coste, of the St. Louis school board. Norman J. Coleman and Park Commissioner Ridgley also sat at the head table. Among the florists who were present were: Mr. Meinhardt, president of the St. Louis Florists' Club: Emil Schray, C. C. Sanders, George Windler, F. J. Fillmore, Otto Koenig, Max Herzog, Charles Juengel, Mr. Fluneker, Dr. A. S. Halstedt, E. W. Guy, Robert F. Tesson; Mr. McClure, Prof. Irish and R. J. Mohr, of the Missouri Botanical Garden; Albert Michel, Mr. Gurney and Phil. Goebel, of Tower Grove Park; Mr. Theo. Miller and J. J. Beneke.

The tables were handsomely decorated with flowers sent by Mr. Herrington, of Madison, N. J.

Bowling.

The Florists on last Friday ran up against a hard proposition when they tackled the Enterprise Club on their own alleys. On the Cass avenue alleys we won the first by a small margin and lost the next two. We are still in fourth place in the league race, with only three games behind the leaders. The scores of Friday night were:

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

Monday night saw the largest meeting of the Florists' Club held for some years. It was election night and it was eloquently apparent that the nominees and their friends had been working most vigorously. Never before was there such interest taken in an election. The result was that although Walter F. Sheridan was not on the slate made by the nominating committee he was re-elected president; Alex. Wallace, vice president; John Young, secretary; Charles B. Weathered, treasurer; John Donaldson, Lawrence Hafner and Paul Dailledouze, trustees to serve two years. The defeated candidates in each case moved to make the election unanimous.

A. S. Burns, John Donaldson and S. S. Butterfield were appointed a committee on resolutions to express the sympathy of the club on the much lamented death of Gabriel Dorval, son of Victor Dorval, Woodside, L. I. The deceased had been for some years in the employ of Ernst Asmus at the New York Cut Flower Company's, and was very popular with all.

A. Herrington, J. H. Troy, C. W. Ward, F. L. Atkins, Wm. Plumb, John N. May and W. H. Siebrecht were appointed an exhibition committee to prepare for the show in Madison Square Garden next year.

On motion of Mr. O'Mara it was decided to have a "Beefsteak" dinner in the club's rooms early in January, and Julius Lang, John Young, C. B. Weathered, L. Hafner and W. W. Burnham were appointed to attend to the arrangements.

The awards committee awarded the club's silver medal to a vase of the new rose Mrs. Oliver Ames, exhibited by John N. May, and a cultural certificate to Arthur Herrington for vase of Cypripedium insigne.

A communication was read from the Horticultural Society of New York inviting the members to attend a meeting on Wednesday at which A. Herrington will speak on the chrysanthemums of 1901.

The entertainment committee as usual did their full duty.

Mr. Sheridan announced that the contract with the Garden management for next year's show had been closed and that the outlook was very bright.

Mr. Edwin Lonsdale was a most interested visitor and after the meeting adjourned there were many groups chatting of memories ever green and thus the night passed pleasantly away.

Bowling.

In the afternoon the bowlers accomplished the following:

Business.

Business is good and everything points to a record breaking Christmas, not only that particular day or week but for the entire winter. It will be a plant Christmas. All the available stock has been bought up. J. I. D.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

Trade Notes.

At last we are having some real winter weather and no doubt it will benefit business in general besides bringing the prices up to where they belong at this season. A steady snowfall for about eighteen hours is just what was needed to put a little life into the business. During Thanksgiving week the weather was rather unseasonable, which no doubt had some effect on business and some of the store men complained that it was not what it should have been with prices ruling a trifle lower. There were too many mums and prices on them were quite low, which may be said throughout the mum season. Fine blooms were shipped into this city at $1.00 per dozen which would easily have fetched $1.50 to $2.00.

A visit around to the growers shows them to be in very good shape to do a good business this season and in very few cases was the work much behind hand.

A. Wiegand & Sons have a fine lot of Lorraines and poinsettias and so have Bertermann Bros. The latter also have a fine lot of Primula obeonica and Forbesii.

H. W. Rieman has a fine lot of cyclamen in good shape but when we go to his place we expect to see mum seedlings, and he usually has some good ones to show if it is their season. This year he seems to have had better luck than ever and no doubt you will hear from them later.

E. A. Nelson is busy getting ready to propagate his new carnation, of which he has three houses full for propagating and one for blooming. Although they were planted late he says he will have them in good shape by February. They are booking lots of orders for rooted cuttings.

The Indianapolis Flower and Plant Co. now has a fine range of glass and more is to be added as the weather may permit. Beauty is grown in nice shape on this place as are also the standard teas and carnations. A bunch of Liberty is giving them a good deal of anxiety as it positively refuses to make a satisfactory growth.

John Hartje has some of the finest white seedling carnations that we have ever had the pleasure to see. He has not only one but at least half a dozen which are very fine. Here we also saw a batch of chrysanthemum Golden Beauty which will keep for Christmas.

Baur & Smith have a fine lot of carnations and will cut heavy for the holidays. Their cyclamen are the best in the city and are just coming into bloom. They are already filling their propagating bench with carnation cuttings in which they do a large business.

A. Pahud has made extensive improvements the past summer. Besides building a $6,000.00 residence he has torn down and rebuilt several greenhouses and added a couple more.

We were sorry to have to miss the Young & Smith Co., as they are sending in some fine roses and violets.

Geo. W. Huber has stepped out of the florist business after being engaged in it for two years.

The greenhouses and stock owned and operated by the late John Rathsam are to be sold at public auction.

Robt. McKeand, for several years city florist and superintendent of Garfield Park, has been relieved and is now with Huntington & Page. Bert Stanley is temporarily in charge at the park. Mr. McKeand made a fine record while he held the position and it is too bad that he was taken away. It is feared that some political ward heeler will be put in his place and that the park system will suffer by it.

At the meeting of Dec. 3 Mrs. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, and O. Rieman and C. Glaubke, of this city, were accepted as members of the State Florists' Association. The coming carnation convention was the main topic for discussion during the evening. The committees are getting down to work and the arrangements are progressing nicely and a good time is assured.

On exhibition were some seedling mums by H. W. Rieman, some seedling carnations by Baur & Smith, John Hartje, and two vases from F. Dorner & Sons Co. Some of the blooms shown were extra fine and caused those present to open their eyes.

After the meeting H. W. Rieman "set them up" to a supper in honor of his twin daughters, born a couple of months ago. Visitors from out of the city were E. G. Hill, J. A. E. Haugh and F. Dorner, Jr. A. B.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

It has been dark and gloomy for the past week, with numerous cold rains or crosses between rain and snow, decidedly unsatisfactory to the grower of cut flowers. But while the cut has probably been reduced somewhat, the demand, especially local, has fallen off sufficiently so there is no difficulty in getting all the roses one wants at quoted rates aside from medium-length American Beauties. Medium-length Beauties, by the way, seem to be continually in best demand, there being apparently less inclination to pay the extra price for the extra long stemmed blooms than in past seasons. The best Beauties are still $4 to $5 a dozen and then through the various grades down to 50 and 75 cents. Brides and Maids are selling at $3 to $6, with a few extra fancy reaching $7 and $8 and the poorest being cleaned up as low as $1.50 and $2. Golden Gates and Meteors the same. Liberty ranges from 75 cents up to $2 a dozen.

In carnations a decided scarcity has developed, especially in good whites, and prices have stiffened. Any kind of a carnation will bring $1.50 and anything at all acceptable will sell at $2, while really good ones fetch $3 and $4, with fancy at $5 and $6 and a few Prosperity reaching up to $7 and even $8. The bulk of the cut, however, goes at $2 to $4.

Chrysanthemums are about out of the market, the only really good ones we noted this week being several vases of Bonnaffons and Chadwicks at Kennicott's that came from George Bayer, of Toledo, and we are told two or three more shipments will finish his crop. He seems to keep Bonnaffon coming very late.

Valley is selling very well, the best bringing $5. Violets are in fair supply and sell at $1.50 to $2. Roman hyacinths are $3 to $4.

There is a good deal of guessing as to what the supply for Christmas will be. It will have to be largely guess work with all, as the weather will be an important factor. But from what we hear here and there we are inclined to think that unless the present darkness and gloom should continue unbroken for the next ten days, which seems very unlikely, there will be a fair supply of tea roses and of all other flowers except Beauties and carnations. The latter promise to be especially short in supply, unless it be that the growers have a lot stored away. It has been suggested that the present scarcity of whites is due to growers holding them on the plants, the whites showing less injury in color than others when so held. Of course only the growers can answer as to this.

Of course a certain amount of holding back is always done for a holiday, and within certain limits it is all right, and in fact essential if we are to have an extra supply for the great date. But were we in the growing business we would take mighty good care that not a single bloom was held a day too long when prices are up to their present range. The price could hardly go much higher, even for Christmas, and if there should happen to be a great many held back and dumped on the market at the last moment there would be a break in prices that would be disastrous. It is well to remember that long held stock cannot be shipped and that the local buyers are quick to scent the possibility of a surplus at the last and take advantage of it when there is no other outlet.

In any event it will be money in the growers' pockets to keep in the closest possible touch with his commission man and let the latter know just what to expect in the way of supply. We have too often seen the dealers distracted one day because they couldn't fill orders and then after the best of the demand was over have big shipments come in that they could not then place to advantage. To have stock that you can't sell today but which would have been grabbed up quick at top figures the day before is sufficient to warrant profanity, especially when the grower kicks about his returns afterward.

The man in closest touch with the market naturally knows best the times he can handle the stock to best advantage. To know the ins and outs of the market is the dealer's constant study and in a measure his stock in trade. It is to his interest in every way to get the most for the stock. If you can't have confidence in your dealer's judgment change to one in whom you can have confidence, but he can't be expected to do his best unless he knows what he can depend upon in the way of supply, and whether he can have it when the market will take it to the best advantage.

We notice that the growers who have city salesrooms never make the mistake of holding back too long. They are in daily touch with the market and see the importance of having the stock in when the buyers are hungriest for it. Others can be in just as close touch through their commission men if they will give the latter the opportunity. On Christmas orders shipping will begin on Saturday (December 21) to distant points (possibly some as early as Friday), but the heaviest shipping days will be Sunday and Monday (the 22nd and 23rd). A few orders may be shipped on Tuesday, but remember that if your stock is of shipping grade it should reach your dealer by Sunday or Monday morning. Your dealer will tell you the best time. Ask him and give him credit for knowing his business.

If he wires for more roses on Monday don't reply that you haven't any and then send in 2,000 to 5,000 the next day. If they can be forced out so suddenly, work the "forcing process" a little harder yet and send them in when he calls for them. We may seem to lay too much emphasis on this matter, and some growers will say we are speaking for the dealer. It isn't the dealer we are worrying about. His loss is insignificant compared with that of the grower who hits the market at the wrong time with his stock. All the dealer loses is the small amount of commission he might have made and the peace of mind he would have had if he could have been in shape to fill his customers' orders properly, instead, as is often the case, of having to job off good stock to the faker at the last moment in order to save as much as possible from the wreck.

Surprise the market all you want to, but don't surprise your dealer. If he isn't worth taking into your confidence he isn't worth trusting at all. It may be that a scarcity will continue right up to Christmas day. But a scarcity on that day and high prices to the end are much more likely when the stock reaches the market regularly and is handled with full knowledge on the part of the dealer as to what is still coming.

On Wednesday the gloomy weather was broken and the sun took a good look at us. A few such days between now and Christmas will very materially help the holiday supply.

Club Meeting.

There was a good attendance at the first meeting held in the new meeting hall last night (Wednesday), and there was an excellent display of blooming plants and cut flowers, including Gloire de Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, primroses, bouvardias, early blooming azaleas and cut chrysanthemums. The award for best plant suitable for holiday trade was given to Walter Retzer & Co., for a Gloire de Lorraine begonia, and second to August Jurgens for a pot of poinsettias.

Joseph Reeve read a paper on Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which appears elsewhere in this issue. He illustrated his paper by showing three stages of the propagation of this begonia from top cuttings, and indicated the various ways of propagating it. In the informal discussion that followed leaf propagation was favored. The plants should be started early so that large plants may be had for this date.

Two new members were elected.

The next meeting will be held the evening of Wednesday, January 8.

Various Items.

McKellar & Winterson are working every night now on orders for holiday supplies and are doing an enormous business in these goods, as well as in cut flowers. Mr. Winterson was unfortunate enough to have a finger crushed by the fall of a heavy case last Friday, but is hustling as hard as ever with the finger wrapped up in a section of rubber hose—or something that looks like it. He stopped "action" long enough to say: "When anything—finger, hand or anything else—gets in the way we simply cut it out and go ahead. Got no time to nurse anything."

Bassett & Washburn say shipping trade is holding very steady and strong and that the out-of-town florist must be doing a good steady business.

August Jurgens is marketing some of the finest lily of the valley ever seen in this city. It is really remarkable for size and quality. The spikes have 12 to 15 very large bells on eight inches of the spike, while the whole spike measures 12 to 15 inches long. And it seems to be more fragrant than ordinary valley. August says it is not a new variety, but that this splendid result is due to extra care and skill in forcing.

Mr. W. E. Hearne, of the Kemble Floral Co., Oskaloosa, Iowa, passed through the city last week en route for New York, from which point he will "cross the puddle" and spend some months with relatives and friends in England.

Frank Stuppy, St. Joseph, Mo., was a visitor last week, having come to act as best man at the wedding of Alex. Newett, at Joliet, December 4.

George W. Scott, the West Madison street florist, was married November 30 to Miss Ellen Wells.

Wietor Bros. have just put in a fine new ice box as an addition to their equipment. It will enable them to more conveniently handle their large cut of flowers.

Peter Reinberg has returned from a hunting trip in the neighborhood of Chebanse, Ill., bringing back a good many rabbits and quail.

E. H. Hunt has rented a large store at 89 Kinzie street to be used for warehouse purposes.

H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., passed through the city early this week on his way to New York.

A. H. Budlong has been confined to his home for a week with an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Emma J. Church, Charlotte, Mich., was a recent visitor.

George Reinberg expects to have an extra good crop of Beauties and carnations for Christmas.

P. J. Hauswirth has removed his store to the Congress street side of the Auditorium Annex, the number being 13 Congress street, where he will remain until the addition to the Michigan avenue side of the Annex is completed, when he will have a fine new store in the new part of the Annex on Michigan avenue. Mrs. Hauswirth is mourning the loss of her mother, who died Dec. 2 and was laid at rest on the 5th.

FEEDING EXHAUSTED TREES.

It has long been supposed, even by some of the successful growers of fruit, that manurial matter, either in a liquid form or as a top dressing, can only be applied with advantage to trees when they are in full growth and carrying their crops. That such assistance to trees, not excessively luxuriant, at that stage is beneficial there can be no question, but it is a mistake to suppose that the trees are unable to derive assistance from liquid manure or rich top dressings at other stages of their growth, and the productiveness of thousands of trees is materially lessened owing to this misapprehension.

The first stage in the production of a crop of fruit is not the expansion of the flower buds in the spring, but the formation of the buds in the previous autumn. This formation commences before the crop has been gathered, but the process is not completed until the trees have been relieved of their heavy load, and are in a position to divert their energies to the completion of this important work. Sometimes these energies are so enfeebled as not to have the power of completing the development of the embryo buds, and the result is an indifferent crop the following year. You will readily understand that bringing to maturity a heavy crop of fruit is very exhaustive to the trees, and that unless something is done to enable them to recover from the exhaustion they will proceed to regain their wonted vigor in their own way, and that way is the non-production of fruit for a season.

If heavily cropped trees have received top dressings or applications of liquid manure until within a short time of the fruit attaining maturity, the soil may be stored with sufficient plant food to enable the trees to complete their season's work. But, unless the trees are very vigorous the safest course is to assume that they are in need of assistance, and give what may be considered necessary.—Gardeners' Magazine.

FOR SALE—A model florist's establishment (see illustration in Nov. 28th issue), situated in a town of 6,000 inhabitants, which supports two public schools, a high school, a military school and a ladies' conservatory of music, these two latter having an attendance of 250 each. Receptions calling for an extensive use of cut flowers are frequent. Although having increased his greenhouse capacity from three to six thousand square feet during the last four years, the owner is a frequent buyer in the St. Louis and Chicago markets. Having established a fine trade in a dozen nearby towns, it will be necessary to build another range of houses, in anticipation of which the owner bought last year three more acres of land for this purpose. The establishment is located on principal street and only three blocks from court house; it consists of three greenhouses, a fine office and several other buildings; also a new seven-room cottage. A driveway leads direct to office; there is also a fine fountain, city water, etc. Business in the last few years has increased 65 per cent, as can be shown by owner's books. Owing to reasons, which will be given to a prospective buyer, the owner has decided to sell this very promising business, and any one looking for a well established and prosperous stand at a moderate figure will make no mistake in entering into correspondence with C. C. Wonneman, Mexico, Mo.

EMBLEMATIC DESIGNS.

We often receive orders for floral lodge emblems of kinds not generally made in wire designs at such short notice that we cannot get wire frames made in time, as we have no wire worker in our small city.

In such cases we have found an excellent substitute for the wire frame in a board shaped like a placque—square, round or oval, covering it with sphagnum moss on one side and working out the design in flowers. In many cases we can get a better effect this way than with a wire frame.

We drive tacks in the edge of the board and then weave string back and forth over the moss to hold it in place. We cover the back of the board with tin foil, attaching the sheets of foil to the wood with glue. The moss is put on about two inches thick and such designs last better than those made on the ordinary frames on account of the greater quantity of damp moss they contain. But the great consideration is that the materials are always at hand and quickly made available. W. H.

Trade Notes.

We are having a good soaking rain. It started Sunday morning with a misty drizzle, slowly increasing until by Monday afternoon it was coming down pretty hard. This rain is what the florists, to say nothing of the army of farmers and truck gardeners, have been praying for for several months, and in consequence there is general rejoicing in the country.

At present roses are coming in in somewhat better supply and the quality is greatly improved. The color on Maids is hardly up to standard in some cases, but as there is a steady demand for good stock, prices hold up well and all of the good stock is readily cleaned up. Brides and Maids are held at 2 to 6 cents; Meteors, 2 to 6 cents; Liberties, 5 to 8 cents; Golden Gates, 3 to 6 cents, and American Beauties, as usual, are scarce, and all grades are picked up as soon as they arrive in the commission houses. From 50 to 75 cents per dozen for shorts to $5 per dozen for long stem blooms is the ruling figure.

The supply of carnations is still increasing slightly, but there is a steady demand for them and they bring very good returns. Ordinary varieties, such as Scott, Portia, McGowan, Daybreak, etc., bring $1.50 to $2 per 100. Fancy varieties, Dorothy, Estelle, America, Crane, White Cloud, Lawson, Enquirer, Bradt, etc., readily realize 3 to 4 cents. Carnations have been very backward this season, so now that chrysanthemums are nearly out of the way we are very glad to see them coming in in larger quantities. Prospects are that there will be an exceedingly large cut after the first of the year.

Chrysanthemums are about over, and we were really sorry to see them go, as the late varieties made up for all the earlier varieties lacked. In other words, the late sorts proved themselves to be the best all round, proving highly satisfactory to all parties concerned, which could not be said of the earlier varieties. Mr. George Bayer, of Toledo, Ohio, is still sending in some first-class Bonnaffon and Wanamaker and they sell fast at 15 cents each.

Violets are now to be seen in much larger quantities and the quality is greatly improved. They are mostly double and bring 75 cents to $1 per 100, with good chance for a rise very soon. Romans, narcissus and valley are to be obtained in fair quantities and of good quality. Smilax is still somewhat scarce.

Mr. Ed. Murphy suffered the loss of a house of J. Jones mums by freezing. Defective heating apparatus was the cause.

B. P. Critchell is also among the number of those who lost chrysanthemums by frost. It looks as if the boys were caught napping this season, judging by the number who lost heavily by having houses of late mums frozen.

At the Hoffmeister Floral Co.'s store I noticed some plants of begonia Gloire de Lorraine, which were very nicely grown. They say that there is a fine demand for this plant with them.

Visitors were Mr. E. M. Hyatt, with Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind., and E. J. Fancourt, who is traveling for Kift & Son, Philadelphia.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM.

Said the Carnation
To the Rose,
What are those
With curly hair
And pompous mien,
With largest heads
I've ever seen
So late in year
I should say
In bobbing up
In such array.
Drum majors, all
With flippant glee,
They're every one
Just come to see
The curtain drop.
Proud exaltation,
They the source
Of admiration,
While you and I,
Not quite so gay,
May bloom and die,
For aught I know,
Without a show.

Not envious I,
Replied the Rose,
In fragrant speech
And modest clothes;
For when they die
I'll be near by
With perfume breath
In zephyrs wave,
To tell the story
Of a knave
Who lived a life
So blithe and gay
That it lasted
But a day,
While you and I
Are here to stay.

OMAHA AND COUNCIL BLUFFS.

Mr. Hadkinson has returned from his superintendency of the Nebraska fruit exhibit at Buffalo and contemplates making Omaha his headquarters. He is doing some park landscape work at York, Neb., and has in view an extensive nursery business in the future, in conjunction with ex-Secretary of Agriculture Morton of Nebraska City, Neb.

Our old-time friend, A. Donaghue, Sr., has returned from his European trip in excellent health and has taken entire charge of his greenhouses and retail business again.

A call at Hess & Swoboda's greenhouses found Mr. Swoboda "on deck" and proud of the two large ones erected during the past year. Stock of all kinds looks well and is easily absorbed by the retail outlet of the firm, in the Paxton house.

Lewis Henderson's store is only a block away and here Mrs. Henderson manages to sell all that Lewis can grow, and a good deal more. Both are contemplating a trip to Asheville next August.

Miss Arnold, with whom all the eligible horticulturists fell in love at the convention of 1898, looks younger than ever, and presides at her cozy little store as charmingly as in the old days.

Paul Paulson has become ambitious and has a retail business this season which promises well. His greenhouses are fully stocked, and his perennial palm decorations keep him busy.

"Manager" Sam Stewart still monopolizes the retail seed and bulb trade of Omaha and does a fine cut flower business as well. He reports a very prosperous year, and everything looks it.

The Peterson Bros. still maintain their retail place on the same street and are evidently progressing.

On the way to South Omaha Louis Lecluse has the old Haas place, and "is making the best of it," while further on, past the Henderson plant, Monsieur DeLaney has dispensed with his greenhouses altogether, and is developing his retail trade in that growing suburb.

It would be no visit at all to this central state of the union if one did not cross the muddy Missouri and spend a day with J. F. Wilcox, the young giant of horticulture in this western country. Those of you who attended the convention of 1898 and enjoyed the "outing" at his hospitable home will remember the acres of glass in view and the fine grapery above them on the hillside. You can see no grapery now. The whole hillside is a "sea of glass," and nearly half a million feet constitute the largest plant west of Chicago. Not yet satisfied, or compelled by the constant growth of his business, he contemplates still another range in 1902, and it would be a bold prophet who could determine when his ambition will be satisfied. The plans for a $25,000 mansion, now in process of building, are another evidence of progress.

The stock grown by Mr. Wilcox reaches every state in the south and west, and his shipping trade is enormous. His retail establishment controls the local trade of Council Bluffs, and his store has been added to considerably since the convention, by a special packing and shipping department, occupying the second story of the building.

DENVER, COLO.

Thanksgiving trade was good. The only complaint being that there was not enough flowers. Violets and Beauties seemed to take the lead; mums were not as much in demand as was expected.

The Gallup Floral Company had the decorations at the Broadway theater for the memorial services of the Elks, which were very fine.

Carnations seem to be off crop just at present and are slow in coming in. Stevia and hyacinths are coming in to help out variety.

One of the finest sights to be seen at any of the greenhouses is found at the City park, where a 6-foot bench about 50 feet long is planted to poinsettias. Old plants in the center, young plants on the sides and seedlings on one end. They are a mass of scarlet bracts and growing so fast that one can almost see them increase in size. THORNE.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

At the last meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society two new members were elected and five new applications were received.

Officers for the ensuing year were nominated as follows: President, William Scott; vice-president, David McFarland; secretary, Edward Neubrand; treasurer, F. R. Pierson; corresponding secretary, H. J. Rayner; executive committee, Francis Gibson, J. E. Whyte, Alex. Hogg, Thos. Cockburn, Thos. A. Lee, H. H. Hyland, Jno. Elliott, Jacob Knodel, Wm. McCord, James Nicol, A. A. Taafe.

Reports regarding the recent exhibition showed a balance in the hands of the treasurer. H. J. RAYNER.

ASTORIA, N. Y.—Henry Pritchard, the Bartow street florist, is in St. Luke's hospital, New York, where he has been confined by severe illness for the last five weeks.

I AM more than pleased with the REVIEW. Everything in it is good and interesting and has been a great help to me.—PETER LUNDBLAD, Long Lake, Minn.

THE REVIEW is O. K. and I wish you success for another year.—WILLIAM WICKHAM, Adrian, Mich.

ALTHOUGH I am a busy man I always take time to view the REVIEW, and I always find something to interest me.—F. J. FILLMORE, St. Louis, Mo.

NEW IDEAS AND NEW THOUGHTS

For the Progressive Florist in

Ribbons, Cords, Tassels

OUR business in Ribbons is extensive. Why? Because we have supplied the trade with correct shades, best of qualities and at the lowest prices.

The price of raw silk changes and hence prices of ribbon change. During September and October we took advantage of the Low prices, and our stock of all brands is now practically complete, and we offer while our present stock lasts:

HOLLY BRAND

Number	Inches Wide	Special Price
1½	¼	.30
2	½	.45
3	¾	.58

60	4⅔	3.30

This is the very finest satin and gros grain ribbon made. Full 10-yard bolts. All shades supplied in this brand. For Beauties we have had an exact shade manufactured especially for us, and we recommend No. 22 and No. 40 as correct widths to use. No. 1½ in Lavender is very swell for Violets.

ORCHID BRAND

Number	Inches Wide	Special Price
1½	¼	$0.25
2	½	.28
3	⅔	.38
4	¾	.45

60	4½	2.38

Full 10-yard bolts. The best every-day ribbon. All shades supplied. This is by far the most satisfactory of all for ordinary use. It fills the bill for almost all vocations, and the above prices cannot be duplicated anywhere, quality considered.

40	3⅓	2.25

Full 10-yard bolts. A very fine useful ribbon. All shades supplied. Our No. 40 Bridesmaid shade in this brand is particularly fine. This is a satin and gros grain ribbon. This quality has met with great favor among the home trade in Chicago. The trade here declare it the best ribbon for bows ever used.

In the other widths we can supply only black and white except No. 22 American Beauty, of which we have a few bolts on hand.

NEW FORCING ROSE HELEN GOULD.

READ WHAT OTHERS SAY:

"Has no Hybrid Tea faults and never goes dormant. A very rapid grower, an excessive bloomer, as free as Golden Gate, a beautiful deep pink color, almost cherry red; flower full double to the center; plentiful foliage. An ideal rose for the grower who retails. We have a house of it 240 feet long, making a most wonderful growth. The commercial grower who buys Balduin for Helen Gould will be badly 'done.'"—AMERICAN ROSE COMPANY.

"Freely tested by us last winter and proved to be a gem. Remarkable for vigor, color, size, form, fragrance and keeping qualities. The demand for it will be large."—WABAN ROSE CONSERVATORIES.

BUY IT DIRECT FROM THE INTRODUCERS.

We have 40,000 plants of this superb new Rose ready for delivery. It will take first rank among great roses. It produces more perfect salable flowers to the square foot than any other rose of its color now in commerce. It has no weak spots. Blooms all the time. No rose in the list can compare with it in vigor of growth. The flowers are as beautifully made as Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. Grand foliage. A splendid keeper. Every grower should have it. Of the many famous roses we have introduced we believe HELEN GOULD will prove to be the most valuable in every way, especially for forcing. This statement bears greater significance in view of the value of the varieties we have already introduced. The price is so low every grower can afford to give it a trial. It will not disappoint you. Prices:—Strong healthy plants from 2½-inch pots, for immediate delivery, $2.10 per doz. postpaid; $10.00 per 100; $90.00 per 1000, by express f. o. b. West Grove.

LANCASTER, OHIO.

The Ohio State Horticultural Society held their thirty-fifth annual meeting here, at the Auditorium, December 4, 5 and 6. The stage was nicely decorated by John Gravett & Sons, on one side of the stage, with a beautiful clump of palms and some choice cut roses, carnations and brilliant poinsettias, while near the center was a fine clump of plants and pot chrysanthemums from the Ohio State Industrial School for Boys. John D. Imlay, of Zanesville, came over with some fine chrysanthemums, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Mrs. Bear and Chadwick, while his carnations were extraordinarily fine in quality, including Flora Hill, White Cloud, Morning Glory, Marquis, Mrs. Bradt, Chicago, Crane, Dorothy, Queen Louise and Mrs. Thomas Lawson; also some very fine Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissus. His display occupied the right of the stage.

These flowers with a collection of vegetables in front of the stage and the display of 400 plates of fruit on slanting tables at the rear made a very suitable stage setting, and much better than any they have ever had before.

The attendance was larger, making it in all quite an advance in Ohio horticulture. Mr. M. R. Starke, of the Boys' School, read an interesting paper on flowers for the amateur. D.

Mt. Pleasant, Mich.—The Mt. Pleasant Greenhouses, owned by E. T. Hammond, were destroyed by fire the night of Dec. 6, the loss being total and amounting to $1,650. This loss, following a heavy loss by frost two years ago, has wiped out Mr. Hammond's resources. He writes, saying: "If my brother florists would grant me any help to rebuild it would be thankfully received."

Centerville, Iowa. — The Mobley greenhouse property has been sold to J. A. Bradley.

Leavenworth, Kan.—August Katzung, the florist, is seriously ill and it is feared death will result.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

I have noted references to the "burning" of chryanthemum Mrs. E. D. Smith. As a small grower, I wish to state that out of ten flowers from as many plants not one was salable on this account.

Whether it is "burning" or something else, I do not know, but this I do know, that it is not the result of overfeeding, as I never feed any of my mums. They are all grown in solid beds and the only fertilizer ever used is thoroughly rotted stable manure dug in when the ground is prepared in early summer for planting.

Some of my reds had a petal here and there burned, but with Smith it was entirely different. When about half open the bloom looked as if some one had touched them on one side with some strong acid, and in a few hours this appearance was changed to a dirty brown, which spread over the greater part of the flower, rendering it entirely unsalable. When my reds burn at all it is simply at the tips of the lower petals and it does not materially interfere with the sale of the blooms.

Mrs. E. D. Smith was such a disappointment that I had decided to throw it out, but have changed my mind and will give it another trial, selecting for stock those which burned the least.

Carlisle, Pa. Jesse Robbins.

MISSOULA, MONT.

Having never heard from this part of Montana, I deem it justice to your many readers to let them hear from our "Garden City," Missoula. It is located in perhaps the best valley in the northwest. We can grow fruit of every description; in fact, apples like pumpkins.

The Missoula Nursery is right in the field with the only well established nursery in the state. Two years ago they branched into the floral line, erecting one house. It was so well patronized that last year they enlarged their plant to about 10,000 feet of glass, in charge of R. Hasselbring, who is showing us he can grow flowers here in the Rocky mountains to rival his eastern brothers. In fact, our chrysanthemums would have been all prize takers.

Trade has been good; not enough stock for the demand. Wishing our eastern brothers a merry Xmas and a prosperous New Year. Missoula Nursery Co.

JOLIET, ILL.

Alex. Newett was married December 4, the bride being Miss Alice Le Rette. Frank Stuppy, of St. Joseph, Mo., was best man, and many florist friends were present at the ceremony. Many presents were sent by friends in the trade.

Anoka, Minn.—D. O. Pratt is building one house, 27x200, for growing his carnations and roses on for next year's planting. In the spring he will build two more carnation houses 27x200 each and two rose houses 30x300 each which will give him a total of 75,000 feet of glass. His carnations are doing fine and he finds a good market for them.

At the Kansas City show Mr. Gunnar Teilmann received a special premium for a Timothy Eaton pot plant bearing 25 large flowers. He also received second on white and pink in the bush plant classes. Through an error these awards were not covered in previous reports.

bids fair to become the commercial standard pink carnation. It is a healthy grower, a free and continuous bloomer, and it is sure to thrive wherever grown. The following letter from Mr. A. N. Pierson speaks for itself:

Cromwell, Conn., November 25, 1901.

Mr. E. A. Nelson. Dear Sir: From what I have seen of the "E. A. Nelson" I feel no hesitation in saying that it is in every respect a first-class commercial variety. The plants you sent us were grown in the field, and made by far the BEST GROWTH of any, and were especially noticeable among 25,000 plants for the clean, vigorous growth they made. The plants suffered no check on benching and the flowers produced have been of high grade. We hope that next season will find at least two thousand "Nelsons" in our benches.

Very truly yours, WALLACE R. PIERSON. For A. N. Pierson.

PORT CHESTER, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Westchester Gardeners' Association was held in the Knights of Columbus Hall, Port Chester, N. Y., on November 23, President Robert Williamson in the chair.

Some fine blooms of chrysanthemums (Souei) were exhibited by M. C. Adcock, gardener to Adrian Iselin, New Rochelle. Mr. J. Carstairs exhibited two plants of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine (pink), which were exceptionally fine.

By a unanimous vote the president and secretary were requested to forward to the family of Thomas Meehan a letter of condolence expressing the sympathy of the members for them in their recent sad bereavement.

Fairhaven, Mass.—On the morning of November 27 a section in one of the boilers at the greenhouses of S. S. Peckham cracked and let all the water out of the entire heating service. They immediately set to work, but before satisfactory connections could be made the stock in some of the houses was quite badly damaged, as the thermometer outside registered 12 degrees above for a part of the time. The damage is estimated at $400.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS.

A very busy and a Merry Christmas to all. Be good natured, cool, clear-headed, active and face the rush like men and women; it won't last long, and do the best you can. The great department stores have educated the American people up to the mauling of goods and the contemptuous treatment of salespeople; it is a condition we must recognize and tolerate, so have patience or treat with respect for your own sake the crank and capture all the business you can.

Get your grower to supply you with some of his bright young men to care for your plants or handle your flowers; the last day or night or two a good plantsman is all important. This is going to be what is generally termed a "plant Christmas." It is held unwise by many of the leading retailers to push the sale of plants at Christmas. They argue that it injures the Easter trade and that plants require too much wrapping up and other care at Christmas. We are of opinion that the Christmas plant trade is only in its infancy; that it will continue to grow enormously and will increase, not decrease, the plant sales at Easter. The growers are not yet equal to the supplying of the Christmas plant market. Of course there is considerable trouble in the wrapping up of plants and the work calls for experienced hands. Nevertheless, there are advantages which compel recognition. You can get your stock in and make it up weeks in advance; there is immense satisfaction in the assurance—the certainty—of being able to supply what you sell, and beyond all there is more money in the plant trade when properly handled. It is going to be a very good Christmas and we feel sure that all branches of the trade will do a good business.

We hope you have all made whatever preparations you could. There's many a little thing you can do now. Have plenty of cards, envelopes, tags, ribbons, tassels, pins, boxes and all supplies necessary for a big rush. A neat small order pad always in the coat pocket is a necessity. Don't wait till the last day to get in your supply; get them at once and plenty of them. There is nothing more encouraging to a customer than to see abundance and variety; yeu yourself prefer to deal with a house that carries plenty of stock; it is the spirit of the times.

Let us chat over the things in the different sections. About green stock. Wm. Scott covered the subject in last week's issue and there remains little to be said. There will be more wreaths used this year than ever before and the variety will be more extensive. Holly wreaths will be most popular, most appropriate, and can be made the most beautiful. The price is a matter of your class of trade and your location. Thousands of wreaths are sold in New York at from one to two dollars each. A cheap, poorly made wreath is a bad thing to have in evidence. One-side wreaths are offered for sale by wholesalers, but the retailer usually has to put two together before he can dispose of them. Many of the leading florists here have their wreaths made up by contract, they supplying all materials. The usual rate is from a dollar to a dollar fifty per dozen for wreaths that sell for a dollar or dollar fifty each. Others buy their wreaths from men who make a specialty of high-grade work and these cost all the way from $3 to $9 per dozen, the retailer doubling on the price, extra being charged for ribbon.

Boxwood wreaths and Princess pine wreaths sell well and there are the innumerable combinations of mixed greens and berries that most of you know of, such as stars, balls, bells and wreaths of red immortelles, will go well in some quarters, but they're troublesome and are not as artistic as the wreath of green.

There is a good deal of doubt as to the proper place for a bow on the Christmas wreath. The right place to tie the bow of ribbon on a suspended wreath is on the top. The bow should be a simple two-loop one and the streamers, different lengths, should not reach the bottom of the wreath unless where they are hung very high when the streamers can be made long and heraldic. You will notice that the majority of ribbons are tied at the bottom; this can only be excused on the ground that there is space to fill. A well made wreath suspended by a loop and bow of narrow ribbon is a thing to be admired. Wreaths hung in a finely curtained window should be neat and compact and ribbons if any should be subservient.

Bunches of holly in dark green Porto Rican mats tied cornerwise with bow of red ribbon go well; try a few. Have lots of holly and mistletoe tied in bunches at various prices ready for immediate delivery; if they are artistically fixed up with a bow of narrow ribbon you can get good prices. Make a good showing of greens outside your door; you cannot make your outside display too elaborate; florists ought to make a specialty of the exterior decoration of their stores at Christmas. The occupants of many a passing car or carriage might get out to patronize you or see what you have if your window attracts their eye.

Holly and mistletoe are fairly good this year; all sorts of prices are being asked; you want the best. It's a mistake for any florist to imagine he can ignore the importance of green stock; it's a big nuisance to some but the public will have it and expect the florist to supply it. Nursery grown Norway spruce in all sizes will be looked for and those having them for sale should show them. The average Christmas tree buyer would prefer to pay a good reasonable price for a well shaped Norway spruce than take the riffraff offered by the grocer and butcher were they shown to better advantage.

There will be many palms, rubbers, ferns, araucarias and such plants sold if they are displayed in a proper manner. In the case of araucarias very narrow red ribben streamers suspended from the top whirl will attract many.

A Simple Wreath.

Needn't put ribbons on the others; put them in white or green pot covers or jardinieres, and stick a spray of holly in to season it. It is more of a question what you have to sell than what you have to buy at this reading, but almost anything in fair condition has a chance to move if it is fixed up right.

The plant basket trade will be very large, and in this class of work small plants of every description can be worked in. What we call Parisian plant baskets will sell well. They are small handle baskets filled with growing plants, some green, some bright, with bow of ribbon on the handle. Plant baskets can be made up in an endless variety of styles. Some fine baskets bring as high as from $25 to $50 in New York and it isn't the value of the material, it is the artistic arranging. Fancy baskets and ribbons run up into money. It is necessary to have some such stock but a vast amount of cheap, plain baskets and ribbons can be worked off at Christmas and they cost very little where business methods are used. As with greens the plant department should be if possible kept apart from the cut flower section for it is next to impossible to keep a cut flower table clean where plants and soil are being continually moved and nothing lessens the value or beauty of flowers so much as dirty surroundings. In a great many cases sphagnum moss can be used instead of soil and many plants need not be taken out of the pots. Small ferns, Pandanus Veitchii, Dracaena terminalis, Ardisia crenulata and such are excellent for basket work. IVERA.

A SIMPLE WREATH.

The engraving shows a simple form of the wreath that can be made very effective at comparatively little expense for material.

Galax leaves, roses, sword ferns and a little ribbon were used, and the effect was very good.

The wreath lends itself to great variety in the way of arrangement and we would be glad to receive other photographs of simple forms showing these variations. We feel sure such pictures would prove interesting and instructive to many.

The engraving is from the photograph of a wreath arranged by Mr. C. A. Samuelson, Chicago.

CARNATION NOTES.

Carnations and Lettuce.

Max writes: "Would you kindly tell me what is wrong with my carnations? I have a patch of Floral Hill and Jubilee in my lettuce house; the flowers don't open fully and they die down in a short time after showing color. I keep the temperature from 58 to 60 degrees for the lettuce. Is that too high for the carnations?"

In reply would say that 58 to 60 degrees is certainly too high a temperature for any carnation to do well in, and possibly that is the main reason why his carnations are acting the way he describes. However, if all other conditions, such as soil, water and ventilation are proper, the only bad effect we would expect would be small blooms and weak stems, but as I do not know the conditions under which they are growing I cannot suggest any other cause. If Max cannot grow his lettuce in 55 degrees he had better not plant carnations in the same house, and even at that temperature they will want a heavy soil and lots of ventilation to keep the stems strong.

Calyx Bursting.

"A Subscriber" would like to know: "What makes the calyx on the carnation break and how can it be stopped?"

The bursting of calyxes is a source of worry to the carnation grower during these mid-winter months and it takes constant watching to keep them from splitting. Perhaps the most frequent cause is an irregular temperature, which if the variation is severe enough will cause almost any variety to burst. Robbing the plants of all the young shoots or feeding in strong doses will also affect them in the same way. We give our carnations very little food between Dec. 1 and March 1 and if we do deem it necessary it is given in very weak doses and at wide intervals. We think that a well enriched soil with a mulching in the fall is enough to carry almost any carnation through the winter and since we have adopted this practice we find the percentage of bursted calyxes much smaller than before.

The hardest job we find now is to maintain a steady uniform temperature throughout the winter. When the mercury one morning stands at 54 degrees above zero and within forty-eight hours it is 14 degrees below zero it is likely to test your heating apparatus and unless you have it in pretty good shape the houses are likely to drop a few degrees below their mark. While some varieties burst much easier than others there is no variety that can be said to be absolutely non-bursting under any and all circumstances, neither can any particular style of calyx be said to split less frequently than any other.

I recall an article in one of the trade papers a year or two ago saying that the Albertini calyx never bursts and that Mrs. Bradt has the same calyx and would therefore not burst. I cannot recall ever seeing a bursted calyx on Albertini but I have seen hundreds, yes thousands, of split calyxes on Mrs. Bradt, and so has every one who has grown that variety. Then again it has been claimed that a variety that will push the bloom well above the calyx will not burst, which is also a mistake. E. Crocker does this to a remarkable degree and yet one of its few faults is that it will burst some, while America turns its petals just above the calyx and it never bursts for us. The general make up of the bloom, fullness, etc., have as much to do with this particular fault as the calyx has and it lays entirely with each variety whether it bursts or not, and you must learn each variety and handle accordingly.

Those who grow seedlings know this to be a fact and it is interesting to watch a bench with perhaps a hundred or more varieties planted on it and see these generally accepted ideals knocked into a cocked hat, and you may perhaps see a dozen different shaped calyxes, each bursting no more than the other unless the bloom is too full or some other cause exists to cause it to burst, and each can be made to burst if circumstances are favorable.

The Christmas Crop.

It would be too much to expect a commercial grower to not raise the temperature of his cut flower house in order to force out a few hundred more blooms for the holidays when the prices are just about doubled and every one of your customers expects you to treble his regular order and you are expected to cut them off the same plants too. When you come to think of it is it any wonder that many a house of carnations is ruined by over forcing and many a thousand blooms are kept a week longer than they should have been kept in order that all orders may be filled? It takes a strong will to resist these temptations although we all know that we will be much better off in the end if we stop within reason.

If the weather is cool and especially if it is cloudy you can save up your blooms in good condition for a week or perhaps ten days, if you are careful and work it right. Most of the white varieties can be left on the plants until a day or two before you want to send them in, but you must be careful with the pink and red varieties. Most of the reds will fade out some if left on the plants too long, especially if the sun strikes them strong, and they should be picked as soon as they are fully developed. Some of the pink ones improve in color with age while others again will suffer by it and you should cut them so they will be at their best at marketing time. Those that fade badly should be picked as soon as developed while the others can be left on the plants a few days longer to advantage. All the pink ones will keep their color best in a half dark cellar and should be cut as they open.

Grade them as you put them away so they will not have to be handled so much when you are getting out orders, as each handling makes them worth just a trifle less, besides the few you break every time you sort over a jar full of them. Lots of time will be saved, too, when you are filling orders as you can put your hand on first or second grade any time without stopping to select them. Place the stems in cool water of about 45 to 50 degrees and have your storage room the same temperature. The air should always be pure and fresh but let no draughts strike them.

When packing them up to ship them in don't let the rush cause you to handle the blooms carelessly. Many a good lot of blooms that should have brought the top price is forced down into second or third place by being packed carelessly so the blooms get bruised.

CARNATION ESTELLE.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph taken November 1 of a house of Estelle carnation at the establishment of Mr. William Murphy, Cincinnati, O. The house contains 10,000 plants which were planted in on Sept. 1 last.

This variety, which is one of the best scarlets on the market at the present time, originated with Mr. R. Witterstaetter. It is a good, steady bloomer and has a very brilliant color. For a commercial variety it is A No. 1.

C. J. Ohmer.

In response to our request Mr. Murphy has favored us with some notes on the culture of Estelle, which we print below:

In propagating take well hardened wood from base of blooming shoots. It requires a few degrees higher temperature to root these than some other varieties; 55 to 58 degrees in the sand bed is about right. When well rooted plant out in flats and as soon as tops start top back low down, transplant again in flats when side shoots appear and begin to crowd. I prefer flats to pots to plant in, as the cuttings are not liable to get pot bound and dried out at times. A little extra labor in transplanting will well repay the grower.

Estelle will grow in any well manured soil outside. Do not plant too early in the field and keep well topped back, as this variety is a persistent bloomer. Sept. 1 plant inside, somewhat closer than some sorts, as it is a strong stemmed, upright grower. Keep night temperature 52 to 56 degrees, with 10 degrees higher in daytime. Syringe lightly overhead, and you will have a continuous crop from November on. Wm. Murphy.

CARNATION TROUBLES.

Mr. J. W. G.'s case is a puzzler. I cannot see any mistake in the time of planting nor the treatment as described in his letter. The manure in the bottom of the bench would hardly cause such results if the manure was pure and well rotted when put on the bench. We have practiced the same thing for years and have never had anything but good results from it. The fact that the plants have made a strong and vigorous growth and are still doing the same is proof sufficient that the soil is not at fault.

I am rather inclined to think that the trouble is caused by adverse atmospheric conditions, such as a leaking gas main or something of that kind. If it were only affecting one or two varieties we might suspect that it were a deterioration in the variety, but as all of them are doing the same it cannot be from that.

The specimens were of little value, as they were badly dried and only showed that the buds were as he described, but did not show the condition of the growth. Perhaps if I had a fresh plant before me it would help me in solving the mystery. Inquirers sending specimens should be just as careful to have them reach their destination in as fresh condition as they would a prize bloom, and it certainly cannot be done in an ordinary envelope. A whole plant with a good deal of the soil in which it is growing is the proper thing to send. Then if it were deemed necessary the plant could be potted and the trouble watched from day to day if necessary. It is quite possible that if the trouble is as I have suggested the plant would in another place grow and produce good blooms, which would be positive proof.

Perhaps it would pay Mr. J. W. G. to send a few plants and a quantity of soil and also some of the water he uses for watering to one of the experiment stations and have them analyzed. They could soon tell him if the trouble is in the soil or the water. A. F. J. Baur.

BULBS.

Will you please tell me if narcissus need to be shaded when taken into the greenhouse? I have them on the north bench, protected with a cheese cloth. Some are in full bloom, others I just took in.

Also please tell me how hyacinths, tulips and calla lilies should be treated in the greenhouse. L. A. G.

So much has been written about the handling of all bulbous stock that it seems it could have escaped the notice of no one. Still they come. Paper white narcissus want no shade of any kind after they are brought into the greenhouse. They always grow long enough. To grow them to perfection they should be brought in early, given the very lightest bench and a night temperature of not over 55 degrees. They can of course be forced much quicker in a higher temperature. A shade of any kind would be useless and an injury.

Bring in the earliest forcing varieties of tulips after New Years. Yellow Prince, Vermillion Brilliant, La Reine and other early single varieties will then flower in about three weeks, if you can give them a steady temperature of 80 degrees, plenty of water and the shade of cheese cloth a foot above them. As the season advances the temperature needed will be gradually less as well as less shade and by middle of March and in an ordinary greenhouse, temperature 55 to 60 degrees, will do nicely and no shade.

Hyacinths. Bring in the first lot February 1. A night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees will do with no shade except that for the first few days; if the sun is bright, throw a moist paper over them but when they begin to throw up their spikes they want no shade.

Calla lilies, so called, for they are not lilies at all, are a very different plant from any of the bulbous plants. Supposing you are growing them in pots (the best way) they want a light, hot house. The warmer and brighter it is the more flowers. If they are in 5 or 6-inch pots don't shift them unless they are very much in need of it. Rather feed them with liquid manure, but light and heat is what they want.

To be reminiscent, I can remember very well long before I knew what a calla wanted I had a dozen or so in my charge, at least I used to water them. They stood in a north side old camellia house among some camellias and azaleas. The house was only heated sufficiently to keep out frost and that occasion arose only two or three times during winter, but this was in the south of England. One flowered on the date of the marriage of the Prince of Wales and another at the next eclipse of the moon, and that was how not to do it.

William Scott.

Kaiserin Augusta Victoria.

This rose is quite an acquisition as a summer bloomer; its vigor, healthfulness and freedom from disease make it an ideal rose, especially for those florists who do a retailing business. In shape, size of bud and length of stem it is perfection; it is also very fragrant, so much so that some people complain of it on that account, but as a winter bloomer it ranks next to a failure.

By propagating in November from retarded flower stems (of which there are plenty at this season) the cuttings will with ordinary care in a temperature of 58 degrees, make ideal plants for benching in February. After the young stock has started in the bench the temperature can with advantage be raised to 60 degrees. The surface of the sod should be cultivated one inch deep at least once a week, watering freely, giving plenty of ventilation and syringing every bright day. By treating them in this way they will begin to crop in May (just when Brides begin to deteriorate) and continue doing so up till November. Periodical mulchings and liquid feeding are essential to continued crops and well developed buds.

This variety can be run over a second season with advantage. In October begin by gradually reducing the temperature till it reaches 35 degrees and withholding the water and syringing, allowing the plants to rest in this state till February. They can then be trimmed of all blind and useless wood and pruned down to three eyes, as the roots will then be dormant. They should get one thorough watering and started by raising the temperature 5 degrees each week until it reaches 60 degrees. As soon as the eyes have started the benches should get a light rich mulch, watering moderately, and never neglecting to keep the syringe going on all favorable occasions.

The quality of buds from second-year stock treated in this manner is superb. If solid benches are used the buds will be larger and the stems longer, but they will require a longer season of rest.

When cutting the bloom there should never be left on the stem cut from more than three well-developed leaves. This makes the eyes break strong, each one throwing up a strong flower stem. If cut higher and more eyes left they are apt to break weak and run to blind wood. It is an excellent keeper, but by reason of its shape and softness of petals is a poor shipper.

The rose, Helen Gould, which some claim to be the Balduin, or as it used to be called Red Kaiserin, resembles the Kaiserin in foliage, habit of growth and shape of bud. If this rose can be grown to pay it will make an excellent companion for its white prototype. When tried some years ago it proved so delicate in constitution and so susceptible to all kinds of trouble (especially mildew) that it had to be discarded. Let us hope its culture may be attended with more success this time. We are in need of just such a rose for summer.

CHRYSANTHEMUM NOTES.

The smoke of battle has cleared away from the exhibition halls and we can leisurely walk over the field and count up the dead ones, i. e., the varieties that have fallen from their high estate and joined the noble army of "has beens." Of these perhaps the most noteworthy is Bonnaffon, whose sun has in my opinion definitely set and Appleton takes its place.

Bonnaffon lasted well, but it was getting very cranky to handle and no longer can be considered any easy doer. There was a time when we considered Bonnaffon as the whole thing almost for an exhibition yellow, but it has passed over the range.

It is difficult to say how many whites have fallen beneath the axe of Timothy Eaton. Some seem to think very few, because Eaton is so coarse. Time will show. I imagine after it becomes properly acclimated in cultured centers, such as Boston for instance, that much of its coarseness will disappear, and it will take unto itself the refining attributes of its environment. What could one expect of a variety coming out of the wilds of Canada but that it would be coarse alongside of the pampered products of the effete east.

After the Broadway florist has taken it in hand for a year or so and dressed it up in a paper collar and called it a dozen different names to suit the different members of the 400, and lied about it strenuously, and put its price up so high that one needed a step ladder to reach it, then it may be expected that Eaton will take a proper pride in itself and tone down.

Speaking seriously, a year or two of careful selection of stock may work wonders with this variety. Eaton has beaten in fair fight every white on the boards this year, and that is a record that can't be gainsaid.

I predicted last fall that Mrs. Ritson, the white sport of Vivand-Morel, would be found wanting, as it would not grow, and I have not noticed that it has been exhibited anywhere except once as a single bloom in a class of singles. It is striking that this sport would not grow anywhere. I was hoping some one would be able to make something out of it, but it seems destined, as an Hibernian remarks, "to go back to that oblivion from which it never emerged."

While on the subject of sports those who can grow Mutual Friend well should try its yellow sport Madam Von Andre, which seems to be getting a prominent place across the water as an exhibition variety.

Australia also has a white sport called Madam Herrewege. I have only seen one flower of it, but I thought it promising.

Glory of the Pacific has also produced a yellow sport which may be found useful to those who grow the earliest varieties, though the yellow Fitzwygram fills the early class fairly well at present.

In the bronze section Rustique will certainly play second fiddle to Kate Broomhead, which has been shown in good shape all through the east.

In reds Childs and all the other fellows must step down in favor of H. J. Jones. It is easily the best, and will not burn if treated liberally, as all the other large reds will. It needs careful handling when first planted out but is all right once it gets to growing.

Many of the newer varieties, as Miss Alice Byron, Mrs. Barkley, etc., have been mentioned in these notes before, so I will not reiterate. Madam R. Cadbury as a white and J. R. Upton as a yellow may be heard of again next year, while Lord and Lady Roberts (Australian varieties), Lord Ludlow and several other titled ladies and gentlemen are peacefully resting on the dump.

From now on for a few weeks the stock plants are liable to be left under the bench, dried out, and neglected generally. The best way, we have always claimed and always follow, is to root cuttings now of the varieties needed, and throw the old plants away. The young plants when rooted can be planted out anywhere and are bound to give an abundance of clean, healthy cuttings in the spring.

The great advantage of this system is that one has thousands of cuttings to select from and need only use the very cream of the stock to take cuttings from. It is a hollow mockery to talk to a man about selection of stock, when he has nothing to select from but a batch of old plants that having been neglected all the winter are more dead than alive. It is curious to note with some men that they are keen enough on getting good cuttings of carnations or roses and yet with their chrysanthemums they are absolutely indifferent.

LETTUCE FORCING.

This year I have made a trial of the Black Seeded Simpson lettuce and had a sad experience with it. It started to turn black at the tip of the leaf and soon rotted down to the roots, the whole patch being spoiled in a very short time. I have been growing Grand Rapids and it looks fine. The lettuce is growing in a carnation house, with a temperature of 58 to 60 degrees.

Max.

Penna.

The most serious trouble in growing lettuce under glass is the rot, of which your correspondent is now well aware. He speaks of a night temperature of 58 to 60. This I regard as altogether too hot for lettuce, though I understand the Grand Rapids lettuce is always run much warmer than the other varieties. If your correspondent has been spraying his plants overhead and maintaining a high temperature at night the cause of the rot is not difficult to find. The plants should never be syringed overhead at all and as little water as possible should be applied at the root after the crop is well under way.

The surface of the soil should be kept well stirred and as dry as possible and the atmosphere of the house must be always dry and breezy. Some growers claim nowadays that soil should always be sterilized for lettuce unless it is entirely new. This may be true where lettuce has been growing for years in solid beds with the same soil and has become filled with the spores of disease, but ordinarily speaking it is not necessary.

While the loose kinds like Grand Rapids are more easily grown than the heading kinds I think that Boston Market is the only lettuce to grow under glass. A night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees with a rise to 70 on bright days will give the best results. If your correspondent cares to follow the subject of lettuce forcing he will find it treated and described fully by a noted grower in Bailey's Cyclopedia of American Horticulture.

HOUSE OF NEW ROSE IVORY.

The accompanying engraving is from a photograph of a house of the new white rose Ivory (White Golden Gate) at the establishment of the American Rose Co., Washington, D. C. The photograph was taken in October.

The house illustrated is 262 feet long and 62 feet wide and contains about 10,000 blooming plants on benches.

CEMETERY IMPROVEMENT.

A lady reader of the REVIEW expresses a wish that some articles would appear in the REVIEW with new ideas on cemetery decoration and improvement. We think that there are journals published that do devote time and space to that special subject. Perhaps the American Association of Cemetery Superintendents have an "organ" in which they ventilate their views. They are generally a very able lot of men and many of them have decided views on cemetery management and some few whom I know have quite advanced ideas.

Floriculture is by no means the most important part of cemetery management, but it is an important part of their adornment. Our local Forest Lawn Cemetery, and it is one of the most beautiful in the country, is managed on the lawn system. Flowers or flowering plants are only allowed in iron and rustic vases and in that I believe they are right. If every one was allowed to cut up the sod and plant what they liked it would be a dreadful mix-up and unsightly jumble. Neither do I believe that flower beds on individual lots are to be commended. The well kept grass and judicious planting of flowering shrubs are much better. If all flower beds could be planted with uniform excellence and good taste it might be bearable, but it never would be done, so some might be pretty and others a fright.

The beauty of a cemetery does not depend on the lavish use of flowers and showy flowering bedding plants, quite to the contrary. Its beauty is in its undulating surface, its broad and well kept roads, the green lawn, the handsome trees, and wherever possible groups or individual shrubs. The statues and tombstones are the ugly and objectionable features of our leading cemeteries and the wealthier the people who own the lots the more the place is disfigured. The management of the cemetery are the people who can do most and in a proper way to make our cemeteries beautiful places to visit. I used to visit our cemeteries very often and would like to again, but I never gave a thought to those who have gone before. What's the use? But I admired the trees and landscape features and the gold fishes in the ponds.

Now, my idea of a cemetery, and I believe cemeteries of the future will be so, is that they should be beautiful gardens until cremation is the accepted thing. Cemeteries will be a necessity, but let them be cheerful, beautiful spots. Abolish all stones, both large and small, just a marker to designate the owner of the lot. Let all graves be even with the surrounding grass, let the management plant flowers and shrubs and ornamental grasses in profusion, let the very best of the art of landscape gardening be displayed. A soldier's plot or the fireman's lot may have a fine monument; that would not make it a stone yard, as many parts of our cemeteries now are.

A western cemetery superintendent who called on me this summer was decidedly progressive in his ideas. He said they had devoted one hundred acres to a new system, which was that no tombstones of any kind would be allowed. If a person (I mean those alive) objected to that they need not buy a lot in that part; and this superintendent was making this portion as beautiful as he could. To use his own words, he was going to make it "a botanical garden." It seemed a novel idea at first but I believe he is right. Make the cemeteries beautiful and interesting. Remove as much as possible all reminders of what they are. The cemetery authorities are, however, the people to do this. It must be done with a well defined plan and design and they can do much more than the great majority of superintendents attempt.

All we outside florists can do is to add some patches of color here and there where allowed. I don't think a carpet bed of alternantheras, etc., is any more becoming on a lot than the tall granite shaft I saw in Greenwood cemetery, which was finished off with a gilded top. Possibly this shaft marked the resting place of a bullion broker.

FREESIAS.

Some excellent pots of Freesia refracta alba were to be seen last winter and though this flower is not at all uncommon these plants caused considerable comment, being exceedingly well flowered and dwarf and they were quickly bought up by the retailer.

In the growing of the freesia as a pot plant, to have it dwarfed and stocky as well as covered with bloom, requires some little care and judgment. The main points are to keep them in a cool, sunny place near the glass and give as little water as possible until the flower spike shows. Shade, heat and moisture in the early stages are detrimental.

The mammoth bulbs now offered give good results although with cool treatment in the early stages very small bulbs will prove satisfactory, and they more often give the purest white flowers.

LAWN AND SHRUBBERY UPON RESIDENCE GROUNDS.

[Read before the Hartford Florists' Club, Dec. 10, 1901, by J. Wesson Phelps.]

The history of the development of the lawn and shrubbery upon residence grounds is interesting. It suffices for the present purpose to recall the fences and hedges which were common along every street and which have given way to a broad expanse of lawn bordered with shrubs. The whole has developed into a certain style, more or less permanent, which may be termed the landscape method.

It is the abuse of this landscape method which is under discussion in this paper. Especially is this true of small city residences, in extent an acre or less, where imitation of larger things has led toward the danger point. The type is outlined as follows: Conventional beds of shrubbery are around the house and at the corners of the property, sometimes with a border plantation around the whole field, thus leaving the body of the grounds, except for walks and a drive, a smooth continuous lawn. This arrangement enlarges the lawn, gives a good mass of shrubs and makes a clean design. The defect comes in the numerous imitations and these often without a clear understanding of principles. There results a commonness which becomes vulgar just in proportion as the construction becomes mechanical. Again, the cause is not in the curves. I sometimes meet owners dreaming of outlines and sweeps, as though an inch one way or the other would separate aristocracy from the commonplace; and yet, the construction of landscape depends upon more fundamental principles than gentle curves and the choice of fine plants. These alone do not satisfy the artistic sense.

Much of the present style is due to the influence of large city parks, where we see beautiful scenery which we would gladly welcome at home. I have in mind one of the large fields in Hartford. There is a park and in it a broad, undulating sloping meadow covered with dry walkable turf. It is a delight. A mass planting stands on a hillock overlooking the meadow and many charming vistas are to be seen from this knoll. Imagine a house to grow up in the background of this shrubbery. What a splendid spot to live in! Were such a habitation for every household, what beautiful American homes.

Can this unquestionably beautiful scenery be transplanted to ordinary residences? There are two ways of attempting it. The first is to treat several adjoining house lots together, putting a whole section under one scheme; the second is to treat each property separately. Regarding these methods let us remember how that the English love to own land and that land-ownership is beginning truly to be sought by Americans; and, therefore, any scheme which wholly ignores boundary lines in property is not likely to wear well, so that a better way is to combine the two methods; that is, treat each lot by itself and in relation to the neighborhood it is in. Does this, then, allow us to transplant nature? Partly. As animal beauty depends largely upon the health of the animal, so landscape beauty has its conditions of life. Willingness to live where placed is a necessity to beauty. Therefore, to transplant natural landscape, the secret of success is to make such surroundings that the natural landscape is contented with the new location.

It has been suggested that the present style of shrubbery is merely a fad, that people will drift back to the use of a few shrubs, a lawn and trees. I have not heard any one call the house lawn a fad, and yet when I think of the park meadow and how we transplant it and cut it up as a cook would trim pie crust I fail to see there the beauty of the meadow. Mud lives where we wish good turf. We are overforcing nature when we ask for sod in very shady places and often so in narrow strips along our city sidewalks. Hardened to that, we pass it by, but cry "Down with the shrubbery fad." Think, study and learn the varied beauty of the many distinct varieties of shrubs—their leaves, their stems and their blossoms. Shrubbery is not overused, unless this is an age dull to nature, dull and growing duller. It is the abuse of shrubbery that is a fad if anything is.

There are many principles which define a good layout of grounds from a poor one. Certain landscape architects have formulated what seemed to each a foundation for work. "Capability Brown," I think it was, who said that the house should come out of the lawn. A later landscape architect said that the house should come out of the shrubbery. Both of the above I take to be but special cases of a more general principle. The ground around the house should be treated for stability with the house. By stability I refer to the stable equilibrium mentioned in treatises upon physics. Anything which makes the architecture of the house in general or in detail to stand out more firmly, that thing adds to the stability of the whole. Stability might be termed wearableness, and it has to do both with the useful and the artistic. The house should come out of grounds stable to that particular house and the uses required of these grounds. If the house come out of shrubbery, let the planting be broad enough and designed to set off the firmness of the building. We Americans overestimate a lawn and we fear and tremble lest we lose an inch of it. Many places would be saved from artistic ruin if the shrubbery encroached just a little more upon the lawn. Once more, the house may come out of the lawn or again partly out of shrubbery and partly out of lawn, or even out of gravel spaces, rockeries, hillsides, and so forth. The grounds between some houses and the street might be entirely covered with shrubs and other grounds might consist of simple lawns nearly bare.

In the layout of residence grounds many things need to be considered in designing an effective scheme. There enters: The character and fitness of the grade lines, the expense and detail of the shrubbery, the inviting quality of the lawn portion, the directness as well as beauty of all paths, drives and so forth, the introduction of flower gardens and other pastimes, the problem of sunlight and shadows, the amount of use the grounds will get and the degree of companionability suggested. Grounds used and loved will make for America a varied and an effective architecture in landscape, while unused grounds will mean a succession and repetition of fads.

OBITUARY.

Edmund M. Wood.

We regret to have to record the death of Edmund M. Wood, at his home in Natick, Mass., December 12. As was generally known he had been in poor health for some time past but a fatal result was not anticipated and the report of his death came as a severe shock to his host of friends.

Mr. Wood had made the Waban Conservatories famous throughout the land, but though so deeply interested in floriculture and especially rose culture, they were but one of many business enterprises in which he was interested. He was the head of the great color manufacturing business of Henry Wood's Sons Company and held partnership or stock interests in several other manufacturing concerns. But though the management of the Waban Conservatories was largely left in the able hands of Mr. Alex Montgomery, Mr. Wood's love for flowers made this one of his ventures most interesting to him.

Mr. Wood was born in Brookline, Mass., June 18, 1837, and was consequently in his 65th year. He was very genial and kindly in disposition and was generous to a fault. He took a deep interest in all that tended to advance the general welfare of floriculture and was always ready to supplement his efforts in this direction by drafts upon his bank account. He was never happier than when entertaining a company of his friends, and he was an ideal host.

His administration as president of the Society of American Florists was marked by earnest effort to advance the material prosperity of the craft, and the trade was peculiarly fortunate in having the benefit of his wide business experience and sagacity.

He is survived by a widow, a son and two daughters.

TREES AND THEIR ENEMIES.

By J. A Pettigrew.

[Read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston Dec. 11.]

The intent of this paper is to call the attention and earnest consideration of the members of this club to the many enemies with which the trees in our streets have to contend.

It is well for our comfort and enjoyment that nature has imparted strength and endurance to so much that is beautiful: for were it not so our residential streets would be simply burning, glaring surfaces, confined by bare walls of brick and stone; such, for instance, as Beacon, Marlboro, and other streets in the Back Bay district. Contrast with these streets such tree-clothed streets as Melville avenue, Dorchester, and K street, South Boston. One of these streets is unpretentious in the architecture of its houses, yet the softening influence of the trees adds a beauty that architecture alone cannot give; and, too, what a sense of hospitality and comfort their shade engenders in the mind.

Trees may be ranked among the noblest products of nature. By many they are so valued; but there are others—careless, unthinking, or ignorant—who may be classed among the enemies of trees; for the enemies of trees, sad to say, are not confined to insects or lower organisms; the greatest mutilation of street trees is done by the hand or through the negligence of man.

An examination of the trees in the streets of Boston will show that one-half are injured by the gnawing of horses; one-third are injured, in addition, by the employes of corporations in stringing wires for lighting or other purposes. Others, again, are injured by contractors employed on various works in the streets or adjoining property—a contractor or a lineman seldom hesitates to use a convenient tree as a guy post, yet a tree cannot be so used without injury to it. Municipal employes, themselves, are generally without instruction to care for street trees, and, therefore, are careless of their well-being; in fact, will cut half the roots or branches from a tree unnecessarily and without thought or compunction.

The greater part of this destruction is caused by lack of knowledge or appreciation on the part of employers of labor, and of public officers, of the value of trees to a city. Of laws there are enough on the statute books, I have no doubt, if enforced to protect the trees from despoilment. Of what use are dead laws? The remedy for the evil is in their enforcement. Protection would be a simple matter were the police instructed to arrest wanton or careless destroyers of trees. This in itself would be an education. Trees would have additional value in the eyes of the masses were an interest displayed by public officials in their protection and care.

But what shall we say of those who, while not enemies of trees, do not plant trees when opportunity offers? As witness, the streets before mentioned—Beacon, Marlboro', Newbery, and other streets in the Back Bay. It has often been a source of wonder to me how so many cultured people could seemingly be of one mind in the exclusion almost of trees from these streets, resulting, as it does, in such inhospitable barrenness. To pass through these streets in summer, one ceases to wonder that the houses on either side are deserted; in the fitness of things it seems proper that from such conditions people should flee, seeking the shade and comfort denied them at home because of their own careless neglect of the advantages they might secure by planting trees in their streets. It may be, however, that the summer hegira from the aristocratic districts has something to do with the lack of tree planting; not being present during the heat of summer the great need of shade is not observed; yet it is not only in summer that trees are effective; in spring the swelling buds give an added charm to the delicate spray-like effect of the branches that is so beautiful in winter; while at all seasons trees lend a softness to hard architectural lines. Under competent management there is no reason why these streets should not be embowered with trees, and thus relieve the Back Bay district from its monotonous appearance.

Another, and an insidious, because unconscious, enemy of trees is one who would compel them to live under crowded conditions, who would not cut out, or permit others to cut out, a tree even though it were injuring or killing its neighbors. Greater injury to trees in Boston's streets and lanes has been wrought from this cause than from any other. This tree enemy is everywhere prevalent, and is largely responsible for much tree mutilation and destruction. Every city, nay, every street, every park, and every lane can point its victims. This enemy, as I said, is insidious and hard to overcome because well-intentioned. While striving to prevent trees from having the light and air that nature demands, this enemy may, perhaps, be one of a board of philanthropists tearing down buildings to make open spaces to bring roses into the cheeks of the children of the tenements.

While speaking on the subject of the crowding of street trees, I would remark that the general tendency is to plant street trees too closely together. It is neither necessary nor desirable to shut out all sunlight from the sidewalk or roadway; occasional glimpses of sunlight are life-giving and add cheerfulness and variety to street life. Sometimes trees are planted thickly in the streets for quick effect, with the intention of after-thinning. But this good intention of the planter is seldom carried out. It would be wrong, however, to say that this is not a good plan because its design is not carried out. For I believe the time to be at hand when the public in general will be sufficiently advanced in horticultural knowledge and in the desire to have its streets adorned with well grown trees, to take advantage of the best methods of bringing about this result.

That the desire to preserve trees is growing is proven by the passage of an act in 1899, by the Legislature of Massachusetts, "To codify and amend the laws relative to the preservation of trees." The statute makes it obligatory upon towns to elect a tree warden, and authorizes him to have the entire charge of public shade trees. Under the act the warden is clothed with authority sufficient for the purpose of properly protecting and planting trees in the public streets and highways. The clause relative to the raising of funds for the above purpose, and for fighting insect pests, is not obligatory in its terms; it simply says that "towns may annually raise and appropriate such sums of money as they deem necessary to be expended under the direction of the tree warden." This act is good, and is a step in the right direction. Leaving the raising of the necessary money to carry on the work to chance, as it were, however, rather hampers it in the execution.

As this statute only applies to towns, the trees of Boston are not within its scope of operation. In a measure Boston recognizes its obligation to the trees on its public streets. The recognition is so slight, however, that the most crude attention only can be given to their wants. If I am correctly informed, even the wire protection recently applied to many of the trees to protect them from the gnawing of horses, was the gift of a public spirited society.

Boston is not parsimonious in its appropriations for public works. Why, then, should it neglect a matter of such importance as the care of its shade trees, when their care stands for so much that is beautiful and of advantage to the city. In Washington they do these things better. Not but that the work there could be improved, yet so much better, that Boston's street trees (and streets, too, in consequence) suffer in comparison.

The trouble lies largely in the lack of knowledge, or the lack of attention given to the subject by the governing powers. Were the same intelligent interest taken in the matter of its trees that is given to its public libraries, hospitals, parks, baths, gymnasiums, or playgrounds, every street in Boston suitable for the purpose would be planted with trees, and provision made for their care. Then, instead of the misshapen, sickly and mutilated trees that we see on every hand, all would be equally beautiful, and contributing to the general effect.

I have said nothing about insect enemies, and I will not in this paper specify any, except the elm-leaf beetle. This is new to Boston, and was noticed for the first time this year. It is a pest of the most pernicious kind, and will, without doubt, work great destruction if not controlled or destroyed. The intelligence and energy of this club cannot be better employed in the interest of Boston's shade trees than by directing both against this destructive insect. It has been successfully combated by the use of the Paris green or London purple solution. This should be sprayed on the foliage as soon as it is expanded, followed shortly by another application should eggs appear. Timely application is valuable in that poisoned foliage is furnished for the first meal of the hatching larvae. Larvae descending to the base of the trees to pupate can be killed by a strong kerosene emulsion—1 to 5.

Several kinds of spraying machines have been fitted up for use in fighting this pest in other cities. A description of several of the most effective can be found in a reprint from the yearbook of the Department of Agriculture for 1896, by L. O. Howard, Entomologist. Where these machines have been tried, the cost has been as low as 22 and 32 cents per tree, where the conditions were favorable.

There are many other insect pests, but they can be left for another paper, as I feel that I have already prolonged this one beyond the point where danger may be apprehended.

PITTSBURG.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday evening, the 12th inst., at the store of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., 504 Liberty Street. It was the largest meeting of the year. Five new members were elected and seven new names proposed for membership.

We had two distinguished visitors with us, namely Dr. W. R. Hamilton, president of the Botanic Society of Western Pennsylvania, and John Shafer, secretary of the same society and curator of the botanical department of the Carnegie Institute. They were interested, delighted, astonished. The only criticism Dr. Hamilton made was—"but you don't give any of the botanical names." "No," replied our president, "that is not our mission, but if there is any plant, flower, or green in this room you wish to know the botanical name of we will name it for you."

The subject under consideration was Plants, Flowers and Greens used by florists at Christmas time, and an exhibition of most everything available in this line was spread upon the tables in front of the members, having been brought in by several of our florists. Indeed, it made up a beautiful and very interesting flower show.

Henry A. Dreer, of Philadelphia, sent some beautiful specimens of the pink flowering and compacta forms of begonia Lorraine to show their improvement on the common type. He also sent that elegant new palm Kentia Sanderiana, which threatens to supersede Cocos Weddeliana in general utility. And to show us the best kinds of small ferns for use in fern dishes, so much in demand at this time of the year, he sent us a collection of the hardest leaved and most lasting sorts. These included Lastrea aristata, L. chrysoloba, Pteris cretica and its varieties magnifica and albo-lineata, P. leptophylla, Wimsettii, palmata, hastata, Sieboldii, adiantifolia, intermedia and serrulata and its varieties, Onychium Japonicum, Polystichum setosum and coreaceum. Nephrodium hirtipes, Cyrtomium falcatum and Davallia tenuifolia stricta.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, N. Y., sent Otaheite Orange in ripe fruit and Ardisia crenulata full of berries, and some Christmas heather which were pyramids of myriads of little white flowers. "Sell them!" exclaimed Julius Ludwig, "Why, I could get $5 easy for that 'heather.'"

John Dunbar, assistant superintendent of the Rochester, N. Y., parks, sent a collection of sprays of hardy shrubs and vines loaded with red berries that was an eye-opener. It didn't take our astute florists long to note what a treasure these bright berry laden vines would be at the Christmas season used with asparagus or other green. They included deciduous holly, euonymus, Japanese and native celastrus, different berberis, long multi-panicled wands of red fruit of Rosa multiflora and many others. As the berries of several sorts were shriveled by the recent severe frost the president explained that had these sprays been cut before hard frost set in and hung up to dry in a cool but free from frost shed or room they would have kept in excellent condition for many a day. It was a real pleasure to note the glow of happiness on Curator Shafer's face when he was told to help himself to the crataegus and other berried twigs; enriching his herbarium was his aim.

Among the flowering plants exhibited were cyclamen, Chinese and obconica primroses, a little Himalayan yellow gem primrose—P. floribunda, Chinese narcissus, etc.

Cut flowers, aside from the staples of roses, carnations and violets, included stevia, poinsettia, Euphorbia jacquiniflora, Roman hyacinths, paper white narcissus, celosia, chenille plant, several kinds of begonias, and Zanzibar balsam.

Outside of holly and the Rochester material, Jerusalem cherry, celestial pepper, rivinia and mistletoe appeared among the berry material.

Foliage plants comprised Kentia Belmoreana, and Livistona rotundifolia among palms, red-leaved and green-leaved and Goldiana dracaenas, Pandanus Veitchii, araucaria, and Farleyense fern. And all manner of "greens" as galax, leucothoe, box, wood fern, lycopodiums, wild smilax, etc., were heaped upon the table in front of the lecturer, Julius Ludwig.

Like a Scotch minister who classifies the points in his sermon firstly, secondly, thirdly and so on, the eloquent man of Allegheny, arranged his material before him, taking up one thing at a time, and omitting nothing, he described its source of supply and uses and expounded its merits or faults. The long-leaved pine, he told us, has lost its hold, it is too stiff; palmetto tops shrivel too soon, American mistletoe is too ugly and there is no demand for it. But some folks think it is very valuable. Before coming to meeting he had been to see a gentleman who had just received some splendid big bunches of mistletoe from a friend in the south, and he sent for Julius, thinking the latter would jump for joy to give him a lot of fine roses and other flowers enough for a wedding decoration in exchange for this mistletoe! But he didn't. John Bader, E. C. Reineman, James George and several others added their quota of information.

Mr. Wm. Scott, of Buffalo, sent a letter telling us what plants and flowers are most in demand at Christmas in his city. They are great on poinsettias there. Cyclamen and Chinese primroses too are favorites. Heaths don't sell well and there is little demand for baskets of mixed plants. Mr. Scott believes in get-up and style in the flower business and in A1 material and high prices for it, and he repudiates the handling of second class stock in any way.

George C. Watson also sent a communication about the Christmas plants and flowers in Philadelphia. He is very sore on "the pernicious salting practice" in cut flowers. Cyclamen, poinsettias, ardisias, azaleas, Cape heaths, Lorraine begonias and Forbesii primroses and dracaenas, palms and ferns prevail among plants. And then he warms up because some enterprising folks went out into the Jersey meadows and gathered a lot of wild statice blossoms and sold them in Philadelphia like hot cakes under the name of "German heather," and he declares they "stunt for the dollar more ardently than they strive for righteousness." You know George is a Scotchman and Caledonians are apt to imagine that they and Oom Paul have a monopoly of the heather on this planet, but not so the ingenious Jerseyman.

Fred Burki showed magnificent Lawson carnations. He says the Lawson is the best carnation he ever grew. Mr. Burki is also sending in some of the finest and best colored American Beauty roses ever seen in Pittsburg. They are grown in his new place at Bakerstown, which is several miles away from the smoke and vitiated atmosphere of this busy city. And after this year he will not grow any more roses at his old place at Bellevue, because of the murky atmosphere in winter. P. A.

Christmas Stock and Prices.

Christmas comes but once a year, and if a vote were to be taken it would prove to be about as often as the average florist would want it to come. Not that all do not make money at this time, but the worry and mental strain upon the man who is obliged to look after orders, and see that customers are at least half way satisfied, is scarcely compensated for by the increased prices. But Christmas we have and so we can but make the best of it. For this year the prospects are fair for a good supply of stock. We have been having some good sunshine and it is coming in good time. Every mail brings its orders and, judging from this, there will be the greatest demand ever known in this market. As to prices —well, they will be high enough.

In roses, American Beauties will be very scarce and will range from $1.50 per dozen for shortest stems to $10 and $12 for select. Brides, Bridesmaids and Meteors will be in fairly good supply as several growers appear to be in with good crops; 8 to 12 cents is quoted on them with perhaps a very few extra select at 15 cents. There will be a few Liberty, but the supply of this truly great and vastly popular rose is not enough to fill one-tenth of the demand, and there is no telling where its price will finish. A few Golden Gates will be offered but scarcely enough to warrant mention.

In carnations the supply will be short, just as it has been all season. But, judging from some houses I have seen lately, some good, bright weather will do wonders, as there are thousands of buds just waiting for a favorable opportunity to open. Fancy grades will bring 6 to 8 cents; some medium, but really first-class flowers, 4 to 6 cents, and ordinary grades 3 to 4 cents in all colors.

There will be a good supply of bulbous stock. Valley, 4 to 5 cents. Romans 3 to 4 cents, narcissus 4 cents.

Violets, according to quality, both single and double, $2 to $3 per 100.

Decorative stock is quoted as follows: A. plumosus, 60 to 75 cents per string; Sprengeri, $3 to $5 per 100 sprays; ferns, $2 per 1,000, 20 cents per 100; galax, $1 per 1,000; leucothoe sprays, 50 to 75 cents per 100; adiantum, $1 to $1.50 per 100; smilax, 12½ to 20 cents per string. Bouquet green has been very uncertain as to price; all the way from $6 to $10 per crate is asked; holly is coming fairly good at $3.50 to $5 per crate.

During the storm last week W. Murphy had a house of Mrs. Joost carnation frozen. It will be a total loss.

George Murphy kept his place from freezing up by building fires in the walks. The wind blew so strong that panes of glass were torn off the houses.

I wish to compliment the writer of the Chicago notes in the December 12 issue of the Review. His advice to growers as to shipping stock is both timely and to the point. Let all growers follow this advice and not only will the mind of the wholesaler be resting much easier but the increased returns will make the grower happy. In connection with this I would like to call the attention of growers to the fallacy of holding stock for several days and then dumping it all on the market on Saturday. Saturday is generally a bargain day, so to speak, and when on the first days of the week his stock would have brought regular quoted prices, on Saturday it is sold out so as to clean up for the new week's business. Of course this applies only to small growers who cannot make daily shipments. They are in good numbers and as a rule need every cent they can get for their stock, so a little judgment in selecting the days to ship will mean much to them in a year's time.

Fred Gear is displaying a fine lot of Nephrolepis Wittboldii. They make a fine show and are selling well.

Coates & Garges have opened a store at 709 Central avenue. We wish them the best of success in their venture.

Among visitors this week were: Wm. Lodder, Hamilton, Ohio; J. T. Herdigen, Aurora, Ind., and Fred Weltz, Wilmington, Ohio.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The December meeting of the Florists' Club, held last Thursday afternoon, was not well attended. Only twelve florists showed themselves to be still loyal to the club. Something must be done to bring out a better attendance at the January meeting as a full vote will be required to pass on a very important question which was laid over until the next meeting of the club.

The exhibition committee could not make a report, as all the prizes were not in, but at the next meeting they hope to be able to make a full report. All prizes will be paid in full. The late show was reported by the committee a success in every way.

Mr. McClure, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, was elected to membership.

The rest of the afternoon was taken up with the World's Fair matters and a general discussion took place, which will be continued at the next meeting of the club, which takes place on the afternoon of Thursday, January 9, at 3 o'clock. A full attendance is requested by the president.

The Market.

Last Friday we were treated to real winter weather, the glass going down below zero and the growers had all they could do to keep the frost out of their houses. As usual a great many of the shipments came in frozen and all trains were late. The wholesale men claim this is always the case when the first real cold snap comes. A few large plant decorations had to be made that day for weddings and receptions and they could hardly have been made had it not been for Lehman's wagon heater, which is considered a good thing in this locality.

As the Christmas holidays approach we find the retailers busy with greens of all kinds for Christmas sales.

Unless all indications fail the supply of cut flowers for Christmas will be short. Although we have had some bright days the chances are that from now on we will have cold and cloudy weather.

The supply of violets in this market will be short, as the daily receipts show, and, as the demand for this flower is steady, there is no chance for them to accumulate. Carnations promise to be of fine quality but not overplentiful and the prices high. It is hard to say this early how the rose market is going to be, but it is generally believed that roses will be of fine quality but not any too plentiful from present indications. Romans and paper whites are and will be in good supply and will retain their present prices. Valley is in good demand and the supply good. Mignonette, poinsettias and stevias are coming just right and will be fairly abundant and of good quality. Our market has always been weak on these flowers at this time of the year; still some fine stock is now ready to cut. One thing more must be said—there will be no glut of anything unless some of the growers persist in holding back till the last moment.

Prices on stock the wholesalers say will be about the same as last year, with very little changes if any.

Frank Beyer, infant son of Robert Beyer, died Sunday. The funeral, which was private, took place Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Beyer have the sympathy of the florists.

Bowling.

On last Thursday night the Florists rolled three games with the Olympias and won two of the games. The boys averaged 865 per game. Carl Beyer was in extra fine form, rolling 198 per game; Ellison, better known as the "Kid," being second with an average of 177.

This ends the first series of thirty-three games in the league.

The second series of thirty-three games will begin this week Thursday, with three games between the Exchanges and Florists.

The following scores were made:

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The cold weather this week has a very beneficial effect on flowers, making bright prospects for good quality at Christmas. The supply has shortened, especially of first grade roses and carnations, and prices are advancing. Single violets are almost a glut, double are scarce and in active demand.

Indications for Christmas are that first grade roses will all be taken as fast as they arrive at good prices, with the poorer grades very plentiful at low figures. Carnations will be scarce; there certainly will not be too many good flowers. Double violets will also be scarce, with a probability that the single varieties will equal the demand. There will be a good deal of unusually fine valley, quite a lot of poinsettias, some fine mignonette and a good assortment of other seasonable flowers.

Greens are plentiful, excepting holly, which is poor this season. Lycopodium reported scarce early in the season will be in fair supply.

The plant market is unusually well stocked for Christmas. Besides the palms and ferns so well done here there are many flowering plants. Lorraine begonias are perfect. The finest being grown in large pans and literally covered with a sheet of bloom. Bayersdorfer makes a birch bark covering which finishes these pans nicely. Cyclamens are superb, with flowers of rich coloring. In azaleas, Vervaeneana, pink and white, and Simon Mardner, rose pink, are excellent. Mme. Van der Cruyssen, bright rose, the best color of all, is a difficult variety to flower in time for Christmas. Then there are poinsettias, Jerusalem cherries, ericas, geraniums, chrysanthemums, primroses, daisies and a new variety of peppers make an attractive list.

A good deal of attention is given to fancy baskets, made up with crotons, ferns and small pots of flowering plants. The baskets are tied with ribbon and when tastefully arranged prove ready sellers.

Various Items.

A visit to the places of the principal Beauty growers shows that while hardly any one will be in full crop for Christmas nearly all will have a good cut. Joseph Heacock has decidedly more than an average cut in sight for the holidays. His plants are in splendid condition, insuring flowers of high quality. His palms are also very fine, especially those in his newest house. There is a nice lot of Cypripedium insigne. Carnations are very healthy, promising well for next month. White Cloud, Joost, Lawson and Melba, his own variety, are the sorts grown.

Myers & Samtman have their Beauty houses in good shape. It is interesting to watch the grading of flowers on a large place like this; every six inches of stem tells, no unevenness or cutting down as is necessary on a smaller place. Sunrise is making sturdy growth here.

John Burton has both his places in the best of order, all the roses looking well. The features of the old place are a house of Brunners grown in boxes, well budded and timed. Two houses of American Belle well worth seeing and a house of cyps pronounced by experts the finest they had ever seen, one 5-inch pot having six large blooms.

About twenty years ago next month three leaders in our calling received some wonderful flowers of a new rose called American Beauty. They journeyed straightway to Washington and bought the entire stock, some 30,000 cuttings, from George Field, who had given a gardener five dollars for the parent plant, chiefly to get rid of him. Everybody tried the new rose and nobody could grow it, so Robert Craig wrote an essay on how to grow American Beauties, which George Field commended, and soon success began to follow. Now there are acres and acres of Beauties.

Leo Niessen is receiving some extra fine valley that commands $5 a hundred.

Myers & Desserable will vacate their Glenside place on March 1 owing to its purchase by the Harrison Estate. They will then remove to their branch place at Mt. Airy. They are cutting some fine maiden hair at Glenside.

David Anderson, of Garretsford, Pa., is pleased with his change from teas to Beauties. He prefers solid beds to benches, believing they produce better flowers.

E. Bernheimer is receiving some extra fine Lady Campbell and California violets.

Edwin Lonsdale had an experience on the night of Thursday, December 12. His regular night fireman was ill and the substitute disturbed an intruder in one of the houses and later saw three men carrying off Lorraine begonias and other plants. The fireman fired a shot, but the rascals got away, leaving the plants behind them.

Charles E. Meehan has a nice lot of white and yellow chrysanthemum Mrs. Jerome Jones for Christmas.

Henry F. Michell devotes a page of his catalogue to Howard & Sons' new star petunia, which is at last on the market.

The council of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society suggested a strong ticket to the members at their November meeting. This ticket was then nominated without opposition and elected on Tuesday evening last. It was as follows:

President, Jas. W. Paul, Jr.; vice-presidents, Jas. M. Rhodes, Edw. Le Bouttillier, H. F. Michell, Dr. Geo. Goebel; treasurer, Sidney W. Keith; secretary, David Rust; professor of horticultural chemistry, Dr. Persifer Frazer; professor of entomology, D. Henry Skinner; executive council, Robt. Craig, Saml. T. Bodine, Jno. W. Pepper, Jno. Westcott, W. K. Harris, Jno. McCleary, D. J. Chester Morris.

Chas. Fox has his conservatory filled with poinsettias.

Pennock Bros.' window had an enormous bunch of poinsettias and mignonette in the center.

An up town "novelty"—Christmas bells of red immortelles.

Many retailers have invested in spruce and retinosporas and potted them in from 6 to 10-inch pots for Christmas. These seem good stock. PHIL.

Receptions calling for an extensive use of cut flowers are frequent. Although having increased his greenhouse capacity from three to six thousand square feet during the last four years, the owner is a frequent buyer in the St. Louis and Chicago markets. Having established a fine trade in a dozen nearby towns, it will be necessary to build another range of houses, in anticipation of which the owner bought last year three more acres of land for this purpose. The establishment is located on principal street and only three blocks from court house; it consists of three greenhouses, a fine office and several other buildings; also a new seven-room cottage. A driveway leads direct to office; there is also a fine fountain, city water, etc. Business in the last few years has increased 65 per cent, as can be shown by owner's books. Owing to reasons, which will be given to a prospective buyer, the owner has decided to sell this very promising business, and any one looking for a well established and prosperous stand at a moderate figure will make no mistake in entering into correspondence with C. C. Wonneman, Mexico, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

John H. Vesey, brother of the popular judge of Fort Wayne, Ind., with whom he has had nine years of excellent experience, has taken the range of houses lately occupied by Mr. Short, of Kansas City, Kan., and intends to devote the entire plant to carnation growing for the local wholesale trade. He has already the place in apple-pie order and is cutting some fine roses from the stock left by his predecessor. Next season there will be only carnations, and he intends to give a good deal of attention to rooted cuttings of the best varieties.

Mr. Vesey is a young man, unmarried, of good habits and splendid training, and he gives promise of a successful career.

Paul Ducret is a native of Geneva, Switzerland, and like all his people makes an excellent American citizen. Mr. Ducret has been here nearly twenty years and is doing a good retail business. His four greenhouses at Union Cemetery are devoted entirely to his local and cemetery trade, and he grows about everything he needs.

Vanheinsbergen & Co., near Budd Park, have about 6,000 square feet of glass, where they grow plants largely for the retailers of the city. They contemplate an addition of two houses next year, and the new partner, Mr. Good Kolp, will add considerably to the financial possibilities of the firm. Mr. Van. has had experience in Fairmount and Troost parks and evidently knows his business.

The Humfeld Floral Co., corner of 9th street and Highland avenue, has conducted a large retail business from that center during the past ten years, having 25,000 square feet of glass heavily stocked with everything for the local trade.

The Humfeld brothers constitute the firm, but on July 1, 1902, Mr. E. A. Humfeld, the junior member, will sever his connection with the company and start a business of his own in one of the best residence sections of the city. He will build four modern houses, 25x100, as a modest beginning. Mr. Humfeld is a young married man of 33 years and a great favorite with the buying public.

The elder brother will continue the original business at the old stand.

One of the oldest florists here is John Schneider, who now does a large retail trade on Walnut street, but at one time had the finest range of greenhouses in Missouri, out near the Rock & Heite establishment, of which I told you in a former letter. Mr. Schneider knows something of the "ups and downs" of this precarious business, but is still "in the ring" and apparently as full of fight as ever.

Close to him is a new-comer, Mr. Ross, an Englishman, too, as, in fact, are 25 per cent of the citizens and 50 per cent of the florists here.

I visited the nucleus of a fine enterprise last week, about seven miles from the city. Ten acres of the finest soil, four fine modern greenhouses and a charming locality are the beginning of the Rock & Heite wholesale business. Already from their new houses they are cutting heavily. Next year the range will be doubled.

In a former letter R. S. Brown & Son were credited with only 25,000 square feet of glass. This should have read 55,000 square feet, as the new range of four houses built this year give them the larger space as above. They do quite a wholesale business here, especially in roses. And their shipments of plants, through catalogues, aggregate a very large number yearly.

Arthur Newell has plans completed for a $2,500 improvement in his store on Twelfth street, including a complete change in the front and sides of the place, with an abundance of plate glass, modern styles of ceiling, floors and conservatory, and a novel system of electric lighting.

Samuel Murray contemplates the addition of about 10,000 square feet of glass to his present growing facilities. He is a practical plant grower and will show grand results in time for the great show of 1902. AUSTIN.

MALTA, O.—W. C. Scovell reports trade as very good the past year, an increase of 35 per cent over the year previous. He has increased his greenhouse area about 50 per cent and thinks the outlook for a good season is better than ever. Prices range about 25 per cent better.

COLUMBIA CITY, IND.—D. C. Noble and O. H. Diffendarfer, composing the firm of D. C. Noble & Co., have dissolved partnership by mutual consent. The business will be continued by D. C. Noble under his individual name.

PLEASE discontinue our advertisement until further notice. We have enough orders to keep us going the next three months.—STABENOW BROS., Reading, Pa.

PAN-AMERICAN ECHOES.

Since retiring into "private life" I have had many communications from exhibitors about their premiums, and occasionally we notice a comment in the trade journals, one very ambiguous and ungracious one from poor "Vidi" in our New York contemporary. I am not going to waste time to reply to such feeble but uncalled for stuff. If some one at a distance and not knowing the programme here had offered some criticism it would have been quite excusable. However, it seems so much easier and agreeable for some little fidgets to criticise than to commend that it is a pity to hinder their natural bent.

It is quite possible that some exhibitors may have thought that I should have sent each one a report of their awards. In justice to myself I must be allowed to say that I received orders to "let nothing out" till it was passed on by the grand jury. About October 25 a full report of all awards in my department was handed to Mr. F. W. Taylor, the head of the Horticultural Department. We went over it carefully together and then left it in his charge to be passed along to the jury of awards. Who they were I don't know, but not horticulturists, I am sure. From that day I had no more authority over it or with it than Mr. D. B. Long.

The Horticultural Department was dissolved on November 1, but I gladly worked on till the 6th or 7th. I saw that every exhibit was returned or satisfactorily cared for and it is a source of the greatest pleasure to me that I have yet to hear of a single exhibit going astray, and some acknowledgements of my efforts to take care of exhibits to the end will always be the most cherished keepsakes I possess. But this is perhaps egotism and all I wished to explain was that the award business passed entirely out of my hands.

The Pan-American financially was a howling failure although a most beautiful and artistic display, as beautiful in its architecture, general plan and illumination as the world ever saw. If they had made $14,000,000 profit they would not and never intended to award the actual medals, and for advertising purposes they are not needed, although some exhibitors in the Horticultural Department richly deserved the genuine gold medal and several of them at that.

The show business is a show business and only those who have gone through it know what it is. I would like to see the Horticultural Department of the next big fair entirely divorced from all other departments for it is too clean and honorable a business to be mixed up with the general show people.

William Scott.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Demand seems to be fair only and we are evidently having the usual calm that precedes the storm. The talk is all about what we shall have and what we shall not have for Christmas. Christmas prices will go into effect soon after this issue reaches our readers and several Christmas price-lists will be found in our advertising columns.

There is some little variety of opinion as to the outlook for Christmas supply. The weather is still an important factor. Last Friday the big drop in temperature took place and the bitter cold has continued with only slight moderation. This condition has been tempered somewhat by an occasional bit of sunshine, but it is hard to say whether one has offset the other. On most of the roofs there is still a film of ice due to the severe freezing of the rain and slush on them when the tremendous fall of temperature came.

The general opinion seems to be, however, that unless present conditions change for the worse the supply will be adequate to fill fairly well all orders except on red roses and first class violets, with probably some shortage in carnations. Unless of course the demand should go far ahead of any previous Christmas.

At present local retailers seem to be buying only for pressing immediate needs and taking just as few chances as possible. Prices are at the top notch of last week's quotations.

One very unpleasant feature of the present cold snap has been the freezing of quite a few consignments while on the way to market. If the present cold weather continues the very greatest care should be taken to see that the stock arrives safely. And where the amount is considerable it would pay to send a man with the shipment to make sure the boxes are not left standing for hours on an open platform or otherwise exposed to injury.

Kennicott Bros. Co. sent out 500 long Beauties in one order a few days ago.

Various Items.

There seems to be a sufficiency of bouquet green to meet demands but there is a marked shortage in good holly. There was not too much anyway and the shortage has been aggravated by some little being frozen in transit during the past week. We are told that holly will recover all right from a severe freezing if the thawing is gradually done, but if thawed suddenly it will later turn black.

There is lots of good mistletoe in the market, also plenty of needle pines, palm crowns, sabal palm leaves, etc., and the winter berry is being received in large quantities. A vase of leucothoe sprays interspersed with twigs of the winter berry we noted at McKellar & Wintersohn's suggested that this would make a very good substitute for holly in case the latter was unavailable.

The chrysanthemums exhibited at the last meeting of the Florists' Club by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., were the variety Superba. They have found this the best late pink variety.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Souster, Elgin, Ill., were visitors last Monday.

There was no bowling last Tuesday night and there will be no more games till the first Tuesday in January.

FROM OUR ENGLISH EXCHANGES.

The Gardeners' Magazine.

Gloxinias as Annuals.—At the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society on Tuesday last (July 29), Messrs. Sutton & Sons exhibited a collection of gloxinias which attracted much attention from visitors by reason of the high quality of the strain and the fact that the plants had been grown from seed within a period of seven months. A display of gloxinias made early in the summer must of necessity consist of plants grown from corms of a previous year, as it is practically impossible to produce flowering plants of gloxinias from seed sown the same year. For some years past Messrs. Sutton & Sons have devoted their attention to securing a strain of early-flowering gloxinias, so that from seed sown in January and February plants suitable for decorative purposes may be obtained from July onwards, when the older plants have lost their freshness and finest flowers. The collection staked on Tuesday consisted exclusively of plants raised from seed sown in January last, thus proving to demonstration that not only may the gloxinia be treated as an annual, but that when so grown plants of great decorative value can be had within a period of seven months, thus saving a considerable amount of trouble as compared with plants of greater age. In addition to indicating the early-flowering characteristics of the strain, the collection illustrated the wide diversity of color it affords and the high quality of the individual blooms.

Fertility of Greenfly.—The wonderful fertility of greenfly is all too well known to gardeners, but the possible progeny from one fly in one season has been illustrated in a somewhat startling manner by a daily contemporary, which states that a single greenfly will produce ninety young, all fertile females. In a few days each one of these ninety will produce other ninety, each equally capable of replenishing the earth with greenfly. During the summer, about eleven generations of this interesting creature make their appearance. It will, therefore, be seen that at the end of the season the progeny of a single fly would number, barring accidents, three thousand one hundred and thirty-eight trillions two hundred and five thousand nine hundred and sixty billions nine hundred thousand millions! The accidents that fortunately prevent this consummation take the form of birds, lace-wing flies, ladybirds, and happily hundreds of other natural causes. If ten greenflies should weigh a grain (a by no means inordinate estimate), its descendants in the eleventh degree would weigh no less than one hundred and forty-five billion tons. Whether this is more or less than the whole planet weighs matters not. Mathematics are mathematics, and greenflies are greenflies.

The Value of Perennial Phloxes in the garden was admirably exemplified by the contributions of these flowers to the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society on Tuesday. It is evident that some weeding out of varieties is necessary, for while all that were staged are extremely beautiful there is a considerable difference in their relative merits, and it is desirable that those with but little space at their command should select the best. The spikes staged afforded an excellent object lesson to the visitors, and showed how greatly superior are the spikes produced by plants that have two or three stems only instead of a crowd, as is too often the case. One of the chief points in the cultivation of these attractive and fragrant flowers is to provide a deeply dug soil that has been liberally enriched with organic manure, such as that from an exhausted hotbed or the farmyard; and another is to remove at a very early stage of growth all but two or three of the rising stems, the most promising being as a matter of course allowed to remain. Unfortunately it is too much the custom to allow all the growths to remain, with the result of their producing a few flowers at the points, and these of obvious inferiority.

Lapagerias.—These climbers are as a rule cleaner than most plants if they are in a vigorous condition, but they are subject to insect pests, especially thrips, for the eradication of which frequent gentle fumigation is necessary, followed by good syringings in the infected parts. Once a year, about Christmas time, the plants should be taken down and thoroughly sponged and cleaned with warm water with a little soft soap added. In training the plants the strongest wood should be preserved and weakly shoots cut away, but not having very large foliage more growths can be laid in than of most other climbers, but it is better not to let the shoots be overcrowded. As lapageria flowers are produced from the old wood as well as from the new shoots, this must be remembered in pruning, and only short pieces cut away where the growth is too thick. Strictly speaking, the propagation of lapagerias is a nurseryman's business; they usually layer them.

Failure with Asters.—China asters have an unpleasant way of collapsing just previous to flowering, and at present no satisfactory solution of the difficulty is forthcoming. It is probable that the strain of producing flower buds, together with a check such as hot, dry weather produces, renders the plants liable to a canker-like disease that attacks the stems at the ground line; this quickly works through the bark, cuts off food supplies, and brings about the collapse. Such cultural methods as insure robust seedlings and prevent checks to growth should be followed, but at all times it is necessary to have a reserve stock, so that gaps in the beds or borders may be filled up as soon as the blooms show color, for curiously enough asters can, if they reach this stage, be lifted, planted, or potted up with success.

Spot on Pelargonium Leaves.—The spots on your pelargonium leaves are caused by a fungus which attacks plants grown under too close and moist conditions. It very frequently happens that when old plants are restarted water is freely given in the hope that growth will be rapid and strong; the effect is, however, entirely opposite to that desired, for the new growth presents little evaporating surface, and the young and tender rootlets find themselves in such cold and wet material that the majority die, leaving the plant a prey to insect and fungus attacks. Burn all affected leaves, reduce the water supply, and provide a healthier atmosphere.

NEW FORCING ROSE HELEN GOULD.

READ WHAT OTHERS SAY:

"Has no Hybrid Tea faults and never goes dormant. A very rapid grower, an excessive bloomer, as free as Golden Gate, a beautiful deep pink color, almost cherry red; flower full double to the center; plentiful foliage. An ideal rose for the grower who retails. We have a house of it 240 feet long, making a most wonderful growth. The commercial grower who buys Balduin for Helen Gould will be badly 'done.'"—AMERICAN ROSE COMPANY.

"Freely tested by us last winter and proved to be a gem. Remarkable for vigor, color, size, form, fragrance and keeping qualities. The demand for it will be large."—WABAN ROSE CONSERVATORIES.

BUY IT DIRECT FROM THE INTRODUCERS.

We have 40,000 plants of this superb new Rose ready for delivery. It will take first rank among great roses. It produces more perfect salable flowers to the square foot than any other rose of its color now in commerce. It has no weak spots. Blooms all the time. No rose in the list can compare with it in vigor of growth. The flowers are as beautifully made as Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. Grand foliage. A splendid keeper. Every grower should have it. Of the many famous roses we have introduced we believe HELEN GOULD will prove to be the most valuable in every way, especially for forcing. This statement bears greater significance in view of the value of the varieties we have already introduced. The price is so low every grower can afford to give it a trial. ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting and annual election of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held at its rooms in Orange on the 4th inst. The topic for discussion was furnished by the chair, inspired as it were by a letter from the National Florists' Society, "What Should Be the National Flower?" It was opened by W. A. Manda, and many took part in the discussion. It was not put to vote but brought out so much that was interesting to the flower grower that the subject was laid over for a future meeting.

In the business portion of the meeting reports were made upon the final returns from the flower show, which through the kindness of friends the society came out free from all debt. All donations were suitably recognized by votes of thanks in the usual way, as also was the kindness of the mayor of Orange, who opened the exhibition and gave it the benefit of his own and wife's presence.

The election resulted in the election of: President, John Hayes; vice-president, Jos. A. Manda; secretary, George Smith; treasurer, Malcolm MacRorie; arbitration committee, Jos. B. Davis, Jos. A. Manda, Wm. Bennett, Oscar Carleson and Isaac Vanee. J. B. D.

Crystal Springs, Miss.—The seventh annual chrysanthemum show of the Crystal Springs Foral Club was one of the most successful ever held here. There was a large attendance from outside points.

The Florists' Manual, by Wm. Scott, is a whole library on commercial floriculture. It costs $5.00 and nothing would be more appreciated as a Christmas gift.

Please omit my pansy adv. from the Review, as I have sold all the plants through your valuable paper.—A. Wenisch, Williamsbridge, N. Y.

Enclosed is $1.00 for the Review. Can't keep house without it. Let it continue.—Allen Greenhouses, Blairsville, Pa.

Dreer's Special Offer of Decorative Plants for the Holidays

AND OTHER SEASONABLE STOCK.....

Never has our stock of Decorative Plants been in better condition than this season, all are clean, healthy, well grown plants that will sell on sight. Our display at Buffalo, at the meeting of the S. A. F. and O. H. was awarded the Silver Cup, offered by the Buffalo Florists' Club, for the best exhibit of commercial sizes; the Society also awarded a Certificate of Merit for the same display, and the Pan-American Exposition awarded a Gold Medal to our display of Palms in the Horticultural Building, and we are daily sending out the same class of stock.

Trade Conditions for Dec. 9–14.

Trade was very slim and I know of no reason to assign therefor except the approach of Christmas and the consequent withdrawal of all the money into channels of other lines of trade.

Material of all kinds has really not been at all plentiful. A good demand could hardly have been supplied at any price, but as things were nothing was really out of the market for a moment and pink and white roses, chrysanthemums, hyacinths and narcissus were altogether too much in evidence. Red roses and good carnations held their ground very well at quite fair prices, but prices on everything else were very uncertain.

Naturally conditions for Christmas depend almost altogether upon the weather during the intervening time and a forecast can be of but little value. But in these days of sharp competition if normal weather conditions prevail it will seem strange indeed to me if there is not a full supply of everything seasonable after all. And I hardly think the wiser salesmen will hold up goods for more than a fair figure. But is it not a hard proposition to decide as to just what constitutes a fair figure?

Prices run so low during a large part of the year that growers must surely obtain every cent possible at other times in order to maintain a living average. Every salesman who handles anything like a large amount of goods will have a few customers who pay a fair price and purchase quite heavily when goods are plentiful. These customers of course insist upon being partly supplied at least at scarce periods at some price that seems fair to them under the circumstances, and the chief trouble comes in the fact that after they get half what they really need and ought to have, the salesman has nothing left with which to furnish the man who made him accept low prices for his surplus at the last flush period. Can a salesman help remembering both his friends and his enemies at such a time?

Various Items.

December 12 was marked by the death of Edmund M. Wood, the head of the Waban Rose Conservatories, and a leading citizen of Natick, being principal owner of the Henry Woods Sons Paint Co., also of the Geo. H. Wood Rubber Cement Manufacturing Co., a director of the Bay State Ice Co. and of the Tremont Nail Co. To his enterprising business energy must be credited a large part of the vast improvement in the quality of roses sent to the Boston market during the past ten years. Under the able management he saw fit to employ his conservatories set the standard which others must attain. He leaves a wife, one son and two daughters.

A telephone message arrived this morning (Dec. 16) to the effect that the boiler house and some other buildings at least at the fine large greenhouse plant of H. N. Eaton, at South Sudbury, are burning. Particulars cannot yet be obtained. J. S. Manter.

Although I am a busy man I always take time to view the Review, and I always find something to interest me.—F. J. Fillmore, St. Louis, Mo.

THRIPS ON ROSES.

I notice in the issue of the REVIEW of Dec. 5, Ribes, who writes your rose notes, suggests Cayenne pepper as a cure for thrips on roses. Having a bad dose of it and having used tobacco extract constantly for over a month by vaporizing almost every night, I of course tried the pepper remedy and have constantly used it since about Dec. 7, every second night, and still find no, or at least very little, relief.

I put a mulch of rotted cow manure on my roses in September and I find this mulch is full of thrips. Of course I can't kill them in the soil by fumes but it is the first time I knew they lived in the soil or manure. I suppose the best thing to do is to take off that mulch, but would it not harm the plants by removing it, or would it be advisable to renew it now?

I have had a terrible time with thrips this time, sure. I have had it before in the spring or fall but never knew them to harm any in mid-winter. They are especially bad on my Beauties and I have cut very few real good flowers off my plants all fall.

If your Mr. Ribes will give me a little light on this subject he will confer a great favor on one of the REVIEW'S ardent admirers, and if possible in any way I am able to repay him or your valuable paper I shall gladly do so.

J. F. AMMANN.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

Mr. Seth Miller, the former president of the Texas Seed & Floral Co., has purchased the greenhouses and grounds of the old firm and will continue the plant business under the name The Haskell Avenue Floral Co. Mr. F. A. Beach will remain as superintendent for the new firm. Mr. Nicholson will continue the seed store business. Another new house is under way and will be finished in a couple of weeks. Several more houses will be added another year. The new firm will push the mailing and shipping trade in plants to its uttermost. Plenty of capital and lots of vim will convince the Texas people that flowers can be grown in Texas as well and better than anywhere else for southern planters.

The stores report a good trade and business is good all along the line. A couple of "northers" have been loafing around the past week and the trees are bedecked in their autumnal hues. Our Texas winter is approaching and the wild steer will hunt the south side of the tree when he wants to scratch. B.

LIVINGSTON'S BEAUTY TOMATO

Prof. W. J Green of the Ohio Experiment Station, says:

"I am fully satisfied that Livingston's Beauty Tomato is the most profitable variety of all for growing under glass."

Prof. W. B. Alwood of the Virginia Experiment Station, says:

"Your Beauty Tomato was superb, as usual, and gave us magnificent fruit. We consider it the standard by which comparison of other sorts is made, and are using it now exclusively for winter forcing."

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

We have had such a siege of dull, dark, muggy weather that it has seriously curtailed the cut of flowers for the holidays. So dark has it been for days that the down town stores were lighted up all day, something unusual in this city.

Carnations have soared skyward in prices, while roses have moved up just a little. The demand from shipping orders alone is sufficient now to use up any possible cut between now and Christmas. Regular customers only are getting flowers; new customers are greeted with, "Sorry, but everything is ordered."

Violets, even, are not blooming well for the same reason and are in great demand. The outlook for a good holiday trade is excellent, if we could only have some bright weather. Carnations are 60 to 75 cents per doz.; roses, $1 to $1.25; violets, 25 to 35 cents per doz.

There will be the usual enormous quantity of holly used from all appearances, and it is to be expected that at the last moment many will be obliged to use it instead of flowers.

There will be some fine poinsettias, primroses and azaleas for pot plants, also a few paper whites, romans and stevias. G. F. C.

KANSAS CITY, KANSAS.

Here is a city of 75,000 to 100,000—the latter nearer the correct estimate—with but one retail flower store, and that one "in the market."

Mr. J. S. Short has a very neat little store here, with a convenient conservatory in the rear and has had seven years' experience there. His range of greenhouses in Kansas City, Mo., he sold in October to Mr. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, realizing that a retail store in one city and greenhouses ten miles distant in another, with "one more river to cross" to get to either of them, is an "enigma" which more than he have found unsolvable. Mr. Short's retail business is good and is a practical monopoly.

His stand at the Union depot he sold some years ago to Mr. Freudenthal. This latter gentleman has been quite successful there, and contemplates, I am told, a more pretentious effort in a popular Walnut street locality. Austin.

Morris, Ill.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed in the United States court by E. H. M. Lannowe, for the Morris Floral Company. Geo. W. Anderson was appointed receiver by the court. The liability of the concern will amount to about $7,000, while the assets are nominal. It is understood that arrangements are expected to be made with the creditors whereby the business of the company may be continued.

Certainly we want the Review continued. Wouldn't know what to do without it.—St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, Ill.

Am very well pleased with the Review and enjoy it very much.—Jos. Coenen, Louisville, Ky.

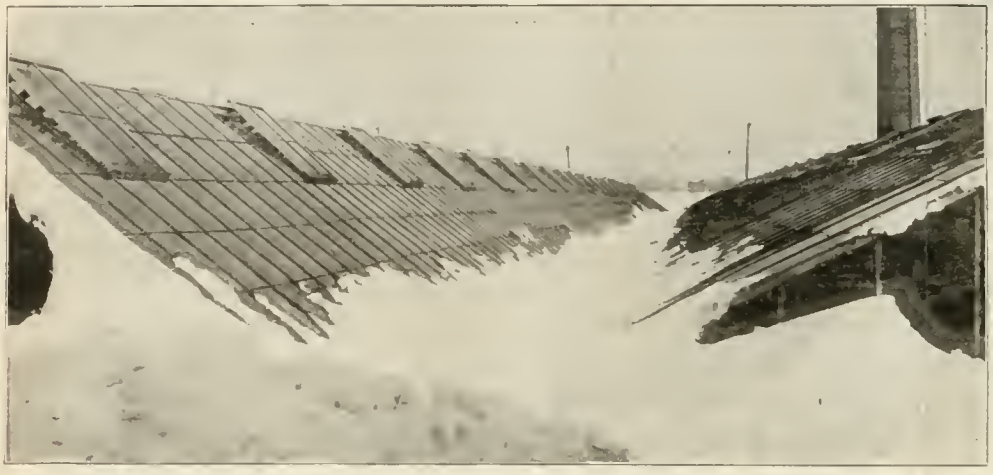
Snow on the Roof is expensive just now as it shortens the Christmas Crop. With flowers at the highest prices of the year, every square foot of light means dollars.



This view shows how the snow lay in the valley between the wooden gutter houses.

IF YOU HAVE WOODEN GUTTER HOUSES YOU CAN'T AVOID IT THIS YEAR, BUT YOU CAN AVOID IT IN YOUR NEXT NEW HOUSES BY USING THE

Garland Iron Gutter

These two pictures tell the story. One shows a wooden gutter house and the other an iron gutter house at the same establishment and photographed at the same time.

This view shows what was left of the snow in the valley between the Garland Iron Gutter houses at the same time, the two photographs being taken within a few minutes of each other.

What makes this difference? It is simply because iron is a better conductor of heat than wood. The iron gutters absorb the heat from the inside of the house and this starts the melting of the snow at the gutter instead of at the ridge, and starts it at once. Wood doesn't absorb enough to have any appreciable effect.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Christmas is one of our big clearing out days and more especially of late years, when so many flowering and ornamental plants are sold. The majority of us have little time for much gardening until New Year's is past and then there is a great clearing and cleaning up.

As you have likely been keeping up a rather high temperature in some of your houses to bring out the flowers you should drop it to its proper temperature at once. It is surprising how the blossoms open as soon as the demand decreases.

Azaleas.

All azaleas that have not sold and are still in good order will last a long time if kept in a cool house and never allowed to want for water. Any azaleas that are showing an inclination to flower before Easter may as well be brought along in a house of about 50 degrees. There will be always a use for them. But keep your Easter plants as cool as you can. They will endure and thrive in any temperature above freezing, and several of the best varieties will be too early if given 50 at night, although much depends on weather, and as Easter is very early it will suit azaleas better than usual. They simply want watching, and some want more heat than others.

Azaleas that have been used for decorating and cannot be sold should have the faded flowers and seed pods picked off and be kept in a very cool house for at least two months. You don't want them to start growing yet for a time.

Stevia.

Don't forget to put a few old plants of sweet stevia in some light cool corner after the top is cut down and sold. They will give you cuttings later on and this is always a useful plant.

Poinsettias.

If your poinsettias have been grown in pots you are sure to have some that have been cut for the flowers. Lay them down beneath a dry warm bench where they will not get a drop of water till next April. Unsold poinsettias you can't put into a cool house to prolong their keeping, as they would soon drop their leaves, so keep them in a warm house and there is sure to be good use for them before Lent begins. The bracts (so often called the flowers) remain in good order for two months.

Tulips.

As soon as you have time after Christmas you can bring in the first installment of the really good tulips. I dare say that some have forced the Duc Van Thol type for Xmas, but it is not worth while. I can remember many years ago when tulip growing was a mystery and a guess with many of us, but that time is past, yet there may be beginners who do not "know all about it," and for those I write.

If you got your tulips and Von Sion narcissus into the flats soon after they arrived, or at least a portion of them, they will now be well rooted, which is the first requisite to early successful forcing. The requisites to produce good flowers are for January and February forcing a steady temperature of 80 degrees top heat; a strong heat at the roots is not necessary. Few can afford to keep a whole house at 80 degrees unless they force very large quantities, so a portion of a bench is used for the purpose. Contrive to confine the heat about the tulips. This can be done by the covering of cheese cloth or thin shutters, which it is necessary to have over them, a foot or so from the plants. Without this shading the earliest forced tulips would have no length of stem.

A moist atmosphere should always surround the tulips, so syringe two or three times a day and water the flats once a day. When the flowers are about fully developed remove the flats to a cool light house, but don't do that too early or you will not get them out. If you bring in regularly what you can use every week on a certain day you will never find yourself out of them. The trouble is you are liable to forget or put it off some weeks and there is a miss.

The varieties have been so often written about it seems needless to mention them, and if you don't have them you can't force them, but you may have some that are not suitable. Don't bring in any of the double tulips till middle of February. The varieties that will force now with certainty if conditions are right are La Reine, Vermillion Brilliant, Cottage Maid, Proserpine, Yellow Prince, Joost Van Vondel and a few others of similar color. The Von Sion narcissus is even more desirable than the tulips and forces now easily.

Lily of the Valley.

From New Year's on the new crop of valley can be forced successfully. The conditions are just about the very reverse from the tulips. For several years past we have had uniform success from this date till middle of May by placing them in a bed of six inches of sand over four four-inch hot water pipes. The bottom of the bed is slate and the sand is usually about 85 to 90 degrees. The atmosphere is about 55 to 60. If it was 45 I believe the growth and flower would be just as good. Never wet the flower spike after the bells can be seen.

The first ten days we cover them with a wooden shutter, after that with a frame covered with cheese cloth and for a few days the full daylight. By planting say 500 pips every week, or whatever your requirements are, you are never without flowers. Don't cut the roots off too short. I have seen them chopped off to within three inches of the pips. This is wrong. They show little evidence of making fresh roots, but I believe the more roots left on the better.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

AN INDIANAPOLIS STORE.

We present herewith exterior and interior views of the store of Messrs. A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis, Ind.; also interior of the conservatory attached to the store. As will be seen by the exterior view, Mr. Wiegand believes in showing his goods to the public, and has freely decorated the space between the street and the greenhouse adjoining the store. It is certainly an excellent way of attracting attention, and a tribute to the character of the Indianapolis people that the display has not been pulled to pieces and largely removed some dark night.

Store of A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis, Ind.

The store interior seems well arranged and will no doubt be suggestive to others.

The use of rock work to define the center bed in the conservatory is worthy of imitation. The use of the electric light in such show houses is now a necessity, especially at such seasons as Christmas and Easter, when night as well as day must be utilized to enable one to care for his trade.

Mr. A. F. J. Baur has favored us with the following facts regarding Anthony Wiegand, the senior member of the firm. He was born in Saxony, Germany, 70 years ago, and came to this country when he was 19 years of age. After working at the business for ten years on various places, both commercial and private, he embarked in business for himself in this city in a small way, gradually adding as his business grew. He started in the southern part of what was then a small city, and success attended his efforts from the beginning. He remained there until 22 years ago, when he bought land north of the city, where he has been ever since.

There were corn and wheat fields between his place and the city then, but now the city has grown several miles past it, thus making his ground very valuable. On account of his straightforward business methods Mr. Wiegand's business has grown about as fast as the city has, and he now has one of the largest, if not the largest, retail business in the state, and the stock they carry is always the best the market can produce. During the past few years Mr. Wiegand, Sr., has been taking life easy, while his two sons, George and Homer, who are now associated with him, are managing the business.

Mr. Wiegand is a member of both the national and the state societies of florists, and takes a great interest in the work of both, seldom missing a convention of the one or a meeting of the other. He likes to talk about the times they used to have before hot water and steam and water works were brought into use in the greenhouse, and of his old friends, among whom are most all of the old-timers all over the country, many of whom have passed away.

Mr. Wiegand is a good example of what honesty, sobriety and integrity will do for a man, and thanks to a rugged constitution and moderate living, his 70 years rest lightly on his shoulders, and we hope to have him among us many more years.

WHEN IS HE A FLORIST?

In conversation with some of the wholesalers regarding the claim made by some readers that they sometimes ship to people who are not in the trade, it appeared that there is frequently difficulty in determining when a buyer is in the trade and when he is not. The undertaker of today may be a florist tomorrow, and as is not infrequently the case, may be both at the same time. The ranks of the retail dealers are being steadily added to from other lines of trade, and though some of these start in a very small way, these same people may develop into large trade buyers.

It is admitted that a private party may occasionally obtain flowers at wholesale rates for his own use when he needs a large quantity, and it is suggested that the best way to minimize this evil is to make the local express agent understand that he is putting himself in a dangerous position by giving to private parties the names and addresses of the wholesalers from whom the local florists receive shipments of flowers. An investigation of one case resulted in the discovery that the local express agent had suggested to the private buyer that when he wanted to buy a quantity of flowers he could show him how he could save considerable on the price, and when the party was ready to buy, had given him the name and address of one of the wholesalers from whom local florists receive shipments.

Such agents could be taught not to interfere with the business of the local florists through a complaint to the manager of the express company if they failed to desist after being warned.

The wholesalers are constantly receiving correspondence and orders from new people and as it costs only 50 cents or $1 to have a bunch of business cards printed, this is not satisfactory evidence that a party is in the trade. In fact, it is now known that some large private users of flowers have had cards printed, representing themselves as florists merely to use for the purpose of getting the wholesale rates. If an order comes in from an unknown party, accompanied by a remittance, with instructions to ship on a stated day and train, usually an hour or so after its receipt, the wholesaler must make his decision at once; there is no time to investigate. If he doesn't ship he may antagonize a man who would later become a large trade buyer, and if he does he may work an injury to a trade customer. He simply has to guess, and his decision will probably be somewhat influenced by the amount of stock in the market.

If he had positive, definite information in the matter he would know exactly how to act. It is a matter in which the wholesaler and the retailer should act together. Their interests are mutual. If you think flowers are being sent to private parties in your city at wholesale rates, send your dealer a complete list of those in your city who are then in the trade and tell him that only these are entitled to trade rates. He will thank you for the information. But don't let any local prejudices cause you to be unfair. Anyone who makes a business of buying flowers to sell again ought to be included.

ROSE NOTES.

Perle des Jardins.

This old favorite is not now grown by the hundred where it used to be grown by the thousand; it seems to have lost its hold on the public fancy. The reason is partly because of its poor shipping qualities. Growers also complain that it has so deteriorated as a winter bloomer that there is no money in it any more. Those growers who do a retail trade still find it and its sport, Sunset, good sellers. There is, as yet, no yellow rose in shape of bud, color and fragrance to equal it.

In some soils it does seem to have gone back as a winter bloomer, but in other soils it is just as good in quality of bud and productiveness as ever. With its fall from favor it is liable to be neglected in its culture and will then surely deteriorate. In some markets in the east and the far west it is still a favorite and will, no doubt, resume its place among the others in the future.

Cuttings of this rose should be made from wood that would not be likely to make extra strong canes as these have a tendency to produce bullheads during the winter. Select medium sized, blind wood, making the cutting with only one eye. The soil best suited for this variety is a light loam without any semblance of clay, using very little manure and no bone in the compost. If the soil is too heavy it should be lightened by an admixture of sand. In disbudding during the winter it is better to take out the crown bud of any extra strong stem and allow one of the laterals to develop, thus minimizing the chances of having bullheads.

In tying up the stems care should be taken not to tie the strings tight around the bark, as this rose, like all other yellow ones, swells its wood quickly, the string will then cut into the bark which will grow over it, leaving unsightly callosities which retard the flow of sap. In the spring, when the danger of bullheads is past, mulching and liquid feeding help materially to perfect the crop. Sunset, which is a sport from Perle, requires the same kind of soil and treatment.

Ribes.

THRIPS ON ROSES.

Replying to the inquiry of J. F. Ammann, this pest seems to be more annoying this winter than usual and it is only by keeping persistently after them that they can be eradicated.

View in the Store of A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis, Ind.

A short description of this pest and its habits may in the present case be of some value. The larvæ and pupæ, which are as large as the perfect insect, are yellowish white and may be found in groups feeding on the under sides of leaves where undisturbed by the syringe. The recently hatched but perfect insect either lies close to the ribs or roves about in search of a mate. The color of the perfect insect is a dull deep black, with the point and sometimes the whole of the abdomen of a rust color. The wings are dirty white, the horns and legs yellowish and the extremity of the horns black. It attacks the plants by piercing the under sides of the leaves, but when it attacks a bud any part of the petals seems to suit it.

On examining it with a glass a globule of blackish fluid will be noticed at the tip of the tail. This fluid when deposited on the leaves closes up the pores and portions of the surface become blotched; when deposited on the buds it seems to entirely stop that part of the petal from further development.

In rose houses where they are continually disturbed by the syringe they are usually found in the soil or mulch during the day and only ascend to feed during darkness. By fumigating or vaporizing after dark at night or before daylight in the morning a certain per cent will be destroyed at each operation. Patience and persistence are needed in large quantities to effect their destruction. Some authorities claim that Scotch snuff applied to soil and foliage will destroy them; this I have not tried. Frequent dustings of air slaked lime is worth a trial. There are numerous termites which are frequently mistaken for thrips as they very much resemble the larvæ.

To remove the mulch at this time would expose and destroy the feeding roots which it has encouraged to the surface and most certainly harm the plants. The mulch is not the cause of thrips but only a convenient hiding place.

RIBES.

ROSE TROUBLES.

I have a house of Brides and Maids that were planted out of 2-inch pots the second week of July and that are not up to my expectations. They are bearing a good crop but the blooms are under size with comparatively weak stems.

The compost was chopped and stacked the fall previous, rather light than heavy, with one part of good, strong, well decomposed cow manure to five of the soil. A good sprinkling of bone meal and a little slaked lime was mixed in before planting, and the compost was about four inches deep on the bench.

I also top-dressed in November with about half an inch of a mixture of half loam and half manure with a sprinkling of bone meal added. I fumigate three times every two weeks and syringe every favorable day. Night temperature, 55 to 58 degrees as nearly as possible, with a rise to 70 or 75 during the day with sun heat.

What can I do to remedy the trouble?

M. D.

Brides and Bridesmaids planted in the middle of July and from 2-inch pots are not the kind of stock to expect high grade blooms from in December. The stock would in all probability be in a stunted condition as it would be almost impossible to have rose plants in 2-inch pots in any other state after six weeks of hot summer weather.

The soil being light one part manure to four of soil would not make it too rich. Using bone meal and lime in the compost at planting time is very detrimental to the rose as it releases more ammonia than even strong vigorous plants require. There is no condition in the life of a rose plant when such a mixture can be used with safety.

M. D. does not say if he cultivates regularly and this is one of the most essential elements to success. Otherwise his treatment of the stock is right and had his plants been strong and benched three weeks earlier, he would without doubt be cutting some fine blooms by this time. By being careful in his watering and not pushing his stock too hard he will later on get some good results.

RIBES.

LETTUCE FORCING.

Referring to the experience of "Max" in growing lettuce in a carnation house it may not be amiss to give my experience, which may be a slight help to others.

I do not grow lettuce as a regular crop, but merely to occupy space that I need towards spring for bedding stock. The house I grow it in is an even span house 22 feet wide, having two carnation benches six feet wide and two side benches three feet wide. The north side bench is where I grow lettuce. In the early summer I clean out the soil and let the bench dry out, then fill it loosely with the soil from the carnation bench and by stirring it up occasionally during the summer it dries out thoroughly.

When housing carnations in September I add to the soil in the lettuce bench about one-sixth of stable manure, well rotted, with some sand and a pint of unleached wood ashes to six feet in length of bench. All this is well mixed and leveled off, where it remains until the lettuce, sown in flats Sept. 15, is ready to plant. The soil is then watered and stirred thoroughly and allowed to stand a day or two, then planted. I plant in rows four inches apart, or seven plants across the bench, and five inches between the rows.

The only cultivation given is by means of a strip of board two inches wide through one end of which is drawn two 8-penny wire nails an inch or so apart. With this the surface can be thoroughly scratched an inch deep. When the plants fairly cover the ground I give a sprinkling of dry ashes between the rows, letting it stand a day before raking in. This is all the fertilizer I use and the crop is in first-class condition for Christmas. I am careful in watering, using a can with a spout that I can get between the rows.

I have plants in flats ready and when the bench is emptied I shovel over the soil and allow to stand a day or two, according to the weather, then add some pulverized manure and a little ashes, stirring and leveling off as before, watering as needed and replant, getting a good crop for Easter.

The bench is then used for plunging bedding stock, mostly late geraniums, which seem to do well on a north side bench.

I may say that I keep a night temperature of not more than 50, preferring 48. The carnations, Scott and White Cloud, do finely, the White Cloud on the south six-foot bench with two pipes under it. I heat with hot water in four-inch pipes.

I have grown Black Seeded Simpson and Grand Rapids and never lost a plant by rot or anything else.

FORCING PLANTS BY ETHERIZATION.

In a recent issue of the New York Literary Digest appears a translation of an article under the above title which appeared in the French periodical La Nature of Nov. 2 that is of special interest to florists. We reprint the major part of the article below:

In forcing flowering plants to blossom out of season, as florists are continually obliged to do, they find it necessary to give the plant a period of rest, analogous to that which they have naturally in winter. This is brought about by depriving the plant of leaves, usually through the action of frost. When the plant is afterward warmed and cultivated, the buds will swell and open as they would normally in the spring. To expose a plant thus to cold, however, is a delicate matter. Besides, this method generally requires special refrigerating apparatus, such as is at the disposal of large establishments only. In 1895 Professor Johannsen, of the Danish Agricultural School, announced that the same result can be obtained by exposing the plants to the fumes of ether. According to recent experiments described by Prof. Albert Maumene in La Nature (November 2), this process is susceptible of practical use. Says this writer:

"The ether used is the same . . . that is employed in medicine as an anæsthetic. When employed for the treatment of plants, its properties depend on the fact that it appears to hasten the combinations and exchanges of nutritive and other material that take place in the tissues of plants during the period of active life, from March to October, and to arrest the circulation of sap.

"If we place under a lilac, an azalea, a hortensia, or some other shrub, a flask of ether, the following results take place: The vapors of this very volatile liquid envelop the branches, cause the leaves to droop, and hasten the growth, which, at a given moment, comes to a stop as if under the influence of cold. Under these conditions the ether shortens the vegetative period and produces practically the same effects as the first frosts, which cause the leaves to turn yellow and fall off, and interrupt the flow of sap in the parts exposed to the air. . . . . .

"The effects of etherization seem to give the best results from July to the beginning of September. Experiments tried in October seem to have been less conclusive."

It is necessary, Professor Maumene tells us, to keep the soil under the plants dry, so that the ether shall not penetrate to the roots. The plants are best placed in a tight box whose temperature is kept not lower than 17 degrees C. (63 degrees F.). The ether is put in a receptacle hung in the interior, and is supplied daily. After the plants have been exposed to the vapors about 50 hours, during which time the buds may often be seen to swell and begin to open, they are taken from the box and watered in a warm atmosphere when they flower rapidly. Says the writer:

"Johannsen has caused lilacs to blossom during the first half of September, by etherizing them a month previous, and M. Franz Ledien, director of the Dresden botanical garden, obtained in the early part of last December lilacs in perfect flower and covered with leaves, while the buds of those that had been forced without the aid of ether were not even open. The same was the case with snowballs, which on December 14 had fully opened, while the buds of those that had not been etherized were entirely closed. . . . . .

"In fact, besides limiting the vegetative period and causing shrubs to flower as soon as the buds that contain rudimentary flowers are fully formed, etherization considerably shortens the period of forcing for shrubs that have already entered the stage of repose. . . . This will bring about a revolution in the production of cut flowers and plants in pots, since it will enable us to invert the order of the seasons, and to produce several successive series of flowers with the same material and without more expenditure of heat.

"But these results can not at present be obtained except with plants whose flowers, opening normally in the spring, grow on the wood formed the year previous, and are in their envelopes in a latent state as early as July. These are such shrubs as the azalea, spirea, snowball, lilac, xanthoceras, deutzia, etc., which have been experimented upon, and have given the results noted above."

OBITUARY.

Charles F. Klunder.

Death has put a period to the remarkable career of Charles F. Klunder, at one time the most widely known retail florist in America, when he was at the zenith of his business success in New York City about twenty years ago. He was found dead in a rear room in his store at 2202 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Saturday last. (Dec. 21) by his son, and there was every indication of suicide as all the gas jets in the room had been turned on and the crevices around the doors and windows had been stuffed with paper.

Mr. Klunder was born in Germany and was 65 years old at the time of his death. He came to New York many years ago, and starting at first in a small way, he developed his business to remarkable proportions, having the cream of the trade in that city for many years. He frequently received very large sums for single decorations for the social functions of New York's most exclusive society, and demanded and received phenomenally high prices for his creations in flowers.

Three Houses of the New Pink Carnation Cressbrook, at the establishment of Mr. C. Warburton, Fall River, Mass.

He accumulated a considerable fortune, but finally reverses came, generally said to be due to speculation in Wall street, and his business dwindled away until he finally left New York and after ineffectual attempts to re-establish himself in Newport and other eastern cities he came to Chicago. Here, after being for quite a number of years in the employment of various local florists, he started in business for himself, but did not succeed in getting it satisfactorily established.

He evidently became completely discouraged and sought refuge from his troubles in death.. It is a sad ending to a career that was for years notable in the trade. He was undoubtedly the first to educate American buyers of flowers up to paying an adequate price for art in arrangement as well as for high quality. He stimulated the growers for the New York market to make effort for extra grade stock, and was always ready to pay a fancy price for anything that was really worth it.

His was an interesting personality and in his life was well illustrated the ups and downs to which business men are subject. His relations with the Vanderbilts were said to be at one time so close that he was able to borrow from members of the family such sums as $10,000 on his simple I. O. U. and since then he has worked for Chicago florists at an exceedingly moderate weekly salary. Though he had his faults, as we all have, all who knew him will regret that adversity forced him to seek rest from life's troubles and none will fail to feel sympathy for the man who struggled so long to regain his former position in the business world.

CARNATION CRESSBROOK.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of three houses of the new pink carnation Cressbrook at the establishment of the originator, Mr. C. Warburton, Fall River, Mass. The photograph was taken Dec. 7 and the plants in the house at the right have been cut back for propagating purposes. Mr. Warburton has another house planted with Cressbrook. It is 26x162 and does not appear in the photograph.

As will be seen in the picture, the houses are of iron frame construction and thoroughly up-to-date in their appointments.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions for Dec. 16-21.

Lots of smoke, but not much fire! Preparations for a big battle in rapid progress. Plants and Christmas greens being delivered rapidly, both wholesale and retail. Cut flowers, perhaps with the exception of stevia and bulb goods, being held up naturally as hard as possible, consequently but few coming in and prices gradually rising. It looks as if fully as good figures will be realized as ever before and perhaps the record will be broken on all kinds of roses and very best grades of carnations. Figures may never lie, but they may fearfully misrepresent sometimes, and I never like to use them in this connection; but handlers of American Beauty roses claim all the way from $1.50 to $18.00 per dozen, and up to $6.00 on pink and white among their promises for next week. White pinks have been more scarce lately than colored ones and prices have been somewhat spasmodic, five cents being the tallest I have actually been aware of upon recent deliveries. These not being specially good, I presume much better terms have been allowed upon better ones.

Various Notes.

The fire at H. N. Eaton's South Sudbury plant did not prove so utterly disastrous as was feared it must be at the time. The large boilerhouse and accessories were burned away in a particularly clean manner, but fortunately the boilers were left in working order, so that frost did not get into the houses to any great extent and injured only a few small plants, leaving his huge lily delivery for Christmas in fine shape. A large pile of coal was added to the loss, so that it footed up something like $1,200, half of which sum it is hoped will be covered by insurance. This leaves things bad enough, but Mr. Eaton rejoices with the rest of us that it is no worse, instead of repining at its seriousness. J. S. MANTER.

CHRISTMAS TRADE.

Readers are requested to mail us a report of their Christmas trade as soon as possible after the receipt of this issue of the REVIEW. We wish to print next week a full report of the Christmas trade all over the country and we can make this full and complete only with the assistance of all our readers. Please do not fail to mail a report of the Christmas trade in your city as you found it and much oblige the editor of the REVIEW.

CHRISTMAS is a busy rather than a merry time for florists and they generally have to rest up a bit after the holiday before they can enjoy the pleasures of the season. Reports already received indicate that the Christmas trade has this year broken all records and this will be the most satisfactory kind of a Christmas present to all. The REVIEW begs to acknowledge the many kind wishes expressed in the letters recently received from subscribers and sincerely hopes that one and all will have a happy and a prosperous New Year.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Welch & Cole are building the new greenhouse for the Minneapolis Floral Co. at Thirty-fifth and Irving avenues S. It will be 36x185 and will cost $4,000.

ON THE ROAD TO MANDALAY.

"Say, Jimmy, is this one o' your pals?" inquired Tommy, appealing to the fireman, a lone exile from Chicago. "Here's a note in the paper about a farmer in Illinois as has tame rattlesnakes to keep rats away from his chickens. Says as he tamed the snakes so they'd watch out for rats and be friendly with the family."

"Nothink strange about that," observed Jaggs, jerking out a broom straw with which to clean a venerable pipe. "Snakes is domestic animals, if you only look on 'em that way. Whose bloomin' pipe is this, hanyway—" breaking off in the midst of his remarks. "It 'ud take a yoke of oxen and a traction engine on top o' that to make it draw."

"Never mind the pipe, old man," said Jim, with a cheerful grin. "Drive ahead with those domestic snakes you were talkin' about."

"It seems to me," grumbled Jaggs, "as you chaps is precious improvident with your bacey. There ain't a grain in this 'ere bloomin' old vault," holding up a tin canister marked "Best Ceylon Tea," which served to contain a mutual benefit store of the weed. "Ain't there nobody as laid somethink by for a rainy day?"

Tommy laughed and threw over a tin-foil package whose contents diffused a fragrance like the fumigating pot after a hard winter's service. Jaggs filled his pipe and leaning against the dusty wall, began to puff out as much smoke as an East River tugboat.

"I reckon I told you chaps about the time I was up in Burmah tryin' to get 'old o' some big Nepenthes—"

"Them Nepenthes as broke loose and eat a bull dog?" inquired Tommy frivolously.

"There you go, misleadin' people as usual," retorted Jaggs indignantly. "I did collect some Nepenthes as eat bull-frogs and liked raw beef when they could get it, but it's chaps like you, Tommy, as gives plant collectors a bad name with them reckless exaggerations, like deadly upas tree and all such rot. Not but what I 'ave seen things in the plant line as would make any old upas look like a bowl o' skim milk."

"It was snakes you were startin' in to tell about," suggested the fireman.

"That's so," said Jaggs, "domesticated snakes. Any quantity of 'em through Malaysia and thereabouts. They uses 'em instead o' cats—nobody's 'appy 'ome is complete without a few galumphin' around the ceilin's. Show him a rat and a green boa'll catch it in two twos, but he never makes a chap feel domestic, like a nice, sociable tabby. It's surprisin', though, how much them snakes knows. When I was stayin' at Jao Jalu, after I come from Burmah—"

"Say, old man," asked the fireman, anxiously, "is that down in Jersey?"

"It's in the Sulu group," continued Jaggs, "so I reckon it's in the United States all right, if them bloomin' congressmen didn't forget to tie a string to it when they was picnicking around there. I was stayin' in one o' them bamboo roof gardens as the Sulus build and though there wasn't no rats, I kept a snake as I was intendin' to take 'ome to Jamrach's, in London. Seemed as though the snake 'ud got precious fond o' me—I don't know why."

"Seems 'ard to account for its taste, don't it?" remarked Tommy thoughtfully.

"I give the snake free run o' the premises," continued Jaggs, ignoring Tommy's comment, "and settled down to sleep. First thing I know I was waked up by a most tremendous racket; sounded like an old fashioned shivaree. I strikes a match and what do you suppose I see?"

Jaggs made a dramatic pause, broken only by Tommy, who was heard to murmur that possibly the noise was caused by Jaggs' tame snake in its efforts to set the table for breakfast. Jaggs paid no attention to the suggestion, but continued his narrative.

"The snake was a pretty sizable one; I reckon he was a matter of 20 feet long. What do you s'pose that sagacious reptile was a doin'? He was 'oldin' a burglar—a naked Sulu what had swarmed up the bamboo poles the shack stood on—with one coil around a beam and two around the burglar, till the poor chap was trussed like a chicken. Then the snake picked up one o' my old boots—"

"Picked it up?" inquired the fireman, incredulously.

"Picked it up," responded Jaggs, firmly, "by hitchin' its tail around it and started a regular drum corps on a tin pan. You see, the snake knowed as I ought to be woke up, as there wasn't no policemen 'andy, so I bagged the burglar and the snake seemed tickled to death over it. Nobody can't tell me as animals can't reason—that is, if snakes is animals."

"Surprisin' as Barnum never got on to such a snake as that," observed Tommy after a brief pause. "What become of 'im?"

"Died afore I got back 'ome," said Jaggs, sadly. "I reckon as intellectual snakes, like intellectual people, is often a bit shy on constitution. I lost some o' my pet orchids, too, the same trip. There was one as seems lost to science, too. I don't reckon as any other collector ever 'ad it."

"Somethink choice, I suppose," said Tommy.

"It was that," remarked Jaggs, firmly. "I don't collect no trash. It was in Celebes as I struck it; I s'pose none o' you chumps know just where that is, but it's there all right. I see a good many things there as was a bit uncommon, includin' tree toads the size o' dinner plates, but I didn't see nothink to equal them orchids nowheres, nor nobody else; they'd ought to be named somethink-or other, Jaggsii by rights. But then, if all the plants as I've had a hand in was named after me, them botanical dictionaries would be as full of jays as a county fair."

"Well, as I was sayin', we hiked along, sometimes goin' up rivers in them bloomin' prahs with a lot o' sulky Sulus (at least they wasn't exactly Sulus—some kind o' coffee-colored citizens as wore precious little except their complexions) and sometimes trampin' through the woods, as looked like the tropical stove 'ouses at Kew let loose out o' doors. What with dodgin' snakes and shakin' tree leeches out o' my trousers, I didn't take no interest in the scenery, though it did make my mouth water to see Vandas and such like by the acre, like daisies at 'ome."

"It's a wonder you didn't bring a few tons of 'em home," remarked the fireman, thoughtfully.

"P'raps it didn't occur to me," responded Jaggs, with dignified sarcasm. "O' course, it's dead easy to carry a lot o' truck when you're skatin' down rocks, and slidin' over cataracts, and dodgin' volcanoes and man-eatin' leopards. However, when I see that orchid I made up my mind as I'd have it, no matter what happened. We was paddlin' along the river when I see it first settin' on the branches of a big tree. There was big spikes o' dark blue flowers, shaped somethink like Vanda Sanderiana, and as soon as I see it I says 'Jaggs, old man, this is the biggest thing you ever struck.' I wanted to go close up to it, but the chap as was rowin' began to jabber like one o'clock, and wouldn't stir, so I had to fetch him a wipe with the paddle afore he'd listen to reason. O' course, I only done it for his own good. I couldn't get as close as I wanted to, because there was a nasty current there, and bein' spilled into the drink along o' the crockydiles didn't suit my book. I reckoned then as I could corral the plants from the bank, anyway. Well, when I get near I see as each plant had a long stem or root hangin' down into the water; the stems was about the thickness o' my thumb, and blest if it didn't look as though them plants had all heaved out an anchor, or thrown out a line for a day's fishin'. While I watched 'em them stems begin to move up out o' the water. I couldn't believe my eyes as I see them curling up like a watch spring, but I felt like it was a pipe dream for sure when I see the plants twist them curlin' stems around like they was greenhouse hose and begin to sprinkle themselves!"

There was a momentary pause, while Jaggs tamped down the dottle in his pipe with a scientific finger. The boss's parrot, hunched up on a pile of wire frames, opened one cynical eye and remarked, "Lor' bless us," whereat Tommy relieved his feelings by firing a crust at Polly, who subsided into muttered profanity. With an air of beaming candor Jaggs continued.

"Talk about the wonders o' nature—them orchids just about eaptured the whole bakery. When they gets a bit thirsty they lowers this here suction tube and fills it with water; then coils up, twists around and sprinkles theirselves as good as any hired man could do it. The natives tell me as when one o' them orchids needs a bit o' topdressing it just reaches out with this here trunk and grabs a bit o' sphagnum, but I never seé that, and o' course, it's likely as some o' these chaps ain't as careful o' the truth as they might be. I like to see a thing for myself afore I tries to tell people about it."

"Don't seem to me as I recollect seein' a notice o' them self-feedin' orchids in the Kew Bulletin," remarked Tommy.

"No," said Jaggs, "after the sort o' luck I had it warn't likely as I was goin' to tell some brand new hanky-pank botanist as would take all the credit his own self. One o' these days," concluded Jaggs, as he opened the potting shed door and lit out for his peaceful dormitory, "I'll tell you a bit more about Celebes—somethink as'll improve your minds a bit!"

HOWARD'S STAR PETUNIAS.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of some flowers of the new strain of petunias that originated with A. B. Howard & Son, Belchertown, Mass. As will be noted, a peculiarity of the strain is a clearly defined star in each flower.

It is really remarkable what Mr. Howard has done with the petunia. Many of the colors are as deep and rich and the texture as velvety as in the finest pansies. The ground color is generally dark crimson maroon with violet veinings, the stars being light blush pink and some almost white.

The strain illustrated is now being introduced, but Mr. Howard has a number of seedling variations that he is working on that are even more interesting. We confess that the flowers we inspected were a decided surprise to us. Such a patient, careful and conscientious worker as Mr. Howard is assuredly entitled to much credit, and we have pleasure in thus publicly recognizing it.

READERS will confer a favor by sending in items of trade interest.

PHILADELPHIA.

The regular column is replaced this week by a description from headquarters of one of the most interesting places near this city, and the regular writer first wants to say he hopes you all had a prosperous Christmas and that the New Year may prove a happy one.

PHIL.

The Floral Exchange's Place at Edgely, Pa.

The rose growing establishment of Edgely was founded back in the '70s at the summer home of Dr. E. Morwitz, and has been under the management of Mr. D. Fuerstenberg since its inception. It is now an incorporated company, with Mr. Fuerstenberg as president, Henry C. Geiger, secretary, and Harry Simpson, superintendent. From a small beginning the place has now grown to thirty-six houses, many of them of large size and embodying the newest inventions and labor-saving appliances. The firm has won a great deal of notice by the very wide house, single span of 54 feet, built last year, 307 feet in length, and where the roses are planted in the field without any artificial drainage or extra preparation. The house is a great success and the firm are now planning for another house still wider than the one just built, which will use 35-foot bars and be 64 feet wide. The great saving in heating pipes of such a house, together with cheaper construction and advantage of cheaper working and better growing atmosphere, make a house of this type very desirable.

There are many things of great interest to the grower on this place, where the low situation has made it difficult to secure the best return of condensation, though now the boiler house, with its four enormous marine boilers and its complete system of pumps and receiving tanks, etc., works perfectly and is one of the most interesting places of the establishment. The coal pile in these wintry days must be a great consolation to the firm, for all the bunkers around the boilers are kept running over and a reserve pile of nearly 1,000 tons is piled up outside. No danger of a coal famine there.

From coal to ice is a natural jump, and adjoining the coal heap is the new ice house just finished, where 250 tons of ice, cut from a lake excavated immediately in front of the house, supply all the cooling material needed for the great shipping list of the year. This thought leads us to the complete shipping department, where everything is handy and where the cooling room is as near perfection as one can expect, the walls always being so dry that you can strike a match on the wooden linings. This department is lighted by acetyline lights and we noticed that extensive experiments are being made with this light in several houses to determine if anything can be done to overcome the bad effects of cloudy days in winter time. These experiments have been going on for a short time and it is yet too early to report as to the results.

The firm is fortunate in possessing a fine spring of water, very copious and in which the temperature never varies from 58 degrees, summer or winter, enabling them to syringe the houses direct from the spring at all times of the year. Lately they have added a fine soup kitchen, if we so may call it, where a mixture of rich cow manure and water is brewed and applied to the plants with excellent results, as the rather porous nature of the soil of the beds on the ground admits of good drainage.

The demand for the Queen of Edgely has far exceeded the ability of the firm to supply, though four large houses are planted to it and this coming year 50,000 feet of glass will be added to grow the Queen and a few more Beauties. As per the trade reports in the journals, the Queen of Edgely is bringing in Boston and Philadelphia exactly the same prices as American Beauty. At the present time these two cities take up every flower of the Queen and could use many more if the supply was larger. Meteor is also largely grown at this establishment, together with Bridesmaids, Liberty and Golden Gates, all with equally good results. All of the newest roses and some of the old-time favorites are being tested under the new conditions.

We are sure it will interest the florists who have been watching the large house to know that it has withstood the severe gales of the season without the least damage and no glass has been broken, although all of it is 16x24, laid the 24-inch way. For the past five years all glass has been put in that way with gratifying results.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

It is two days before Christmas at this writing and, of course, too early to give a report of the trade; but, as every florist in the city is busy taking orders for Christmas delivery and selling plants, greens, etc., everything looks lovely for a splendid holiday trade.

Sales on holiday greens are more than satisfactory. The demand for holly is ahead of all previous demands, owing to its being scarce and high-priced. Ground pine is not so scarce as first reported and can be bought at $6 per crate of 100 lbs. Mistletoe is, as usual, coming in in bad shape.

Among the plants for holiday trade, those which have the call are cyclamens, azaleas and poinsettias. Of the latter Mr. C. C. Sanders has about the finest lot that was ever put on this market for Christmas sales. Pots of begonias, stevia, primroses and a few lilies, also foliage plants, have a good demand with the West End florists.

Prices on stock of all kinds went up the past week, with a fairly good supply to select from, considering the zero weather and snow-covered houses. We have nothing to complain of as to the supply at the wholesale houses. The only bad feature was the lateness of the trains each morning. The retailer had to waste a whole morning before he could get his supply and this often made him too late to fill orders for early funerals.

The wholesale prices for Christmas which go into effect today (Monday, the 23rd) will be like this:

Beauties, fancy long, very scarce, from $10 to $15; shorts, $3 to $5 per doz.; Meteors, $10 to $15; Maids, Brides, Perles and Gates, $8 to $12 per 100. Carnations, fancy, $5 to $7; common, from $3 to $4 per 100. Carnations will not be over-plentiful. Violets will be very scarce and from $2.50 to $3 per 100 will be asked for them. California is the only variety in this market just now; perhaps a few double will be in the market by Wednesday. Valley, fancy $5; seconds, $3 to $4. Romans and narcissus, $3 to $4 per 100. Stevia, $1 per 100 in bunches of 25. Smilax, asparagus and adiantum have a good call. Bronze galax is selling well at $1 per 1,000.

World's Fair Notes.

Friday was ground-breaking day at the World's Fair site. A large crowd attended, but owing to the very cold weather there was no parade and the ceremonies were held in the Exposition Building in the afternoon. President Francis took out the first shovel of dirt, followed by all the other officers of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. Quite a number of large bouquets were used for the occasion.

It is now a settled fact that Mr. F. W. Taylor, late of the Pan-American Exposition, will be the head of the Horticultural Department at the coming World's Fair. Mr. Taylor and family live out in the West End near the grounds and he can be seen each day at his desk at the headquarters of the Fair in the Laclede Building.

Bowling.

The Florists again met defeat at the hands of the Exchange team, losing the first game by one pin and winning the last by 37 pins. Beneke and Kuehn were high for our side.

No more games will be played until January 2 when we meet the famous Diel's Stars at the Grand alleys.

The following scores will show how the games were lost:

BUFFALO.

Christmas eve in the morning is a little early to say what our Christmas trade will be, and my friends may wonder that any retail florist can find time to say "good morning," much less have an opportunity to record his impressions of this harvest time. According to that wonderfully written, if visionary book, Bellamy's "Looking Backward," when a man gets the wrong side of 50 he should be only nominal superintendent of industries and take no very active part or any part laborious in the commercial or financial management of the world. So I am relegated to simply punching the cash register, and that is not so incessant but what it leaves a few moments' interval. If any part of my remarks today should seem light in vein you will know that there has been a series of 35c and 50c sales. If a deeper and heavier tone is observed a few hundred violets have been sold at $4 per hundred, or an azalea for $7.50.

Some firms have a reputation for cut flowers or some particular flower and other houses are known to have the largest assortment of plants and are naturally patronized for these respective articles, so it is difficult to say just now how the business is divided. At present I would say that much the largest amount of money is spent on plants, and Buffalo is well supplied with them. There was never a better quality or quantity of azaleas, poinsettias, begonias, cyclamen, heaths and lots of other things. In cut flowers roses seem in fair supply. American Beauty as usual is so lofty in price that but a moderate quantity is needed.

Carnations are decidedly scarce. Mrs. Lawson is so much better in all round quality that you can easily ask and get 50 per cent more than for any other variety, and just here allow me to notice that when our good friend Albert Herr was discoursing in a contemporary some two weeks ago on his experience this winter with the new and newer carnations, he did not even mention this wonderful variety. It is hardly possible that he does not grow it, and yet if he does grow it, it would be more impossible for it to be a failure with him. Violets are high in price, but fine in quality and enough to go round. In cheaper flowers there is an abundance for all who want them.

Holly does not seem to have come to town in overwhelming quantity, but there is plenty and on many corners of the streets the huckster is planted and is retailing it to those who think they can get a bargain. I don't believe the demand for holly is equal to last year, and decidedly people are getting tired of the bouquet green roping. Where roping is asked for in decoration the laurel wreathing is now the favorite.

If I were to mention any innovation of this year it would be the Porto Rican mats in many colors. They are the prettiest, neatest and best thing up to date to cover the pot and make the plant attractive that has yet appeared. They can't quite be thrown in without charge, as the colored tissue paper can, but you can easily get all they cost and more.

There has lately been a permanent addition to our Main street stores and this one has started off in good style. Miss Rachel Rebstock, so many years her brother Joseph's right bower in his store, has opened a good looking shop at 614 Main street. The cleverness, affability and thorough knowledge of the business possessed by Rachel is so well known that it is impossible for anything but success to ensue. If a gentleman goes into her emporium with the intention of spending two dollars and gets out without leaving $4 he will be a remarkably cold and stolid man. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Christmas Trade.

Averaging the reports of the wholesale cut flower houses we would say the Christmas shipping trade averaged fully 20 per cent larger than last year and has therefore broken all records. The supply probably averaged but little larger than last year, but prices on shipping grade stock held fully up to quotations and sometimes even exceeded them on special selects, especially on carnations.

Quality averaged very good and there was evidently less "pickling" than usual, though some aggravating cases were reported. On Tuesday we were shown the stems of several hundred long Beauties that must have been fine stock when cut, but had lost their heads while on the way to market. Also carnations that were so completely asleep that they were unsalable at any price, though they would have brought $3.00 a hundred quick had they been sent to market a week ago. It is gratifying to note that there was less of this tom foolery this year than heretofore, but why not eliminate it entirely? It hurts everybody. It hurts the grower most, but it hurts the dealer and the retailer, too. No one gains anything by it. And the man who couldn't ship any carnations on Monday but sent in several thousand on Tuesday was also with us. As a result there was a surplus of white carnations in the market on Tuesday. Had these flowers been sent in when they were ripe and when the market was almost bare the week before Christmas they would have brought the grower twice as much as they did. Remember that white is the color most likely to be in excess of demand at Christmas and keep your white worked off, whatever you do with the other colors. On Tuesday white roses were also rather too much in evidence.

There seemed to be enough of everything to go around except of first-class violets and red roses. Poinsettias were a little slow in moving in some quarters. First-class carnations were in especially strong demand. Kennicott Bros. Co. received a consignment of Schramm's Cranes, Bradts and Irenes containing 500 blooms and sold the lot to one buyer for an even $50.00. And $4.00 was practically the bottom price on any decent sort of carnation. The carnation is decidedly in it.

But in spite of the drawbacks mentioned the shipping trade averaged away ahead of any previous Christmas. A very fortunate thing was that before the time for the main shipping the weather moderated wonderfully and with the thermometer above the freezing point there were none of the losses that would have been sure to be made had the bitter cold weather of last week continued.

The trade in holly, green, etc., was enormous. While there was none too much holly at the last orders were very well filled on the whole, while of green the supplies were ample, though no real surplus. It was very satisfactory all around.

At the Anderson Floral Co.'s: A large wreath of lycopodium overlaid with short leucothoe sprays, from among which sprigs of winter berry stood out, the wreath tied with ribbon to match the berries.

At Schubert's: Wreaths of bronze galax leaves with cluster of leucothoe foliage interspersed with winter berry twigs. Lorraine begonias in camp kettles, the wire tripods decorated with asparagus.

At Friedman's: Pots of ardisia with covers of crepe paper. Small holly trees in pots.

At Hanswirth's: A whole window full of poinsettias. He made a special push on these and sold large numbers in addition to other cut flowers.

At Fleischman's: Azaleas, the pots, and sometimes most of the plant, covered with plain and figured crepe paper. Rather a disappointment to one looking for novelties.

At Mangel's: Many Lorraine begonias in all sizes and a fine display of orchids and other flowers.

CAPILLARY WATER OF SOILS.

The water contained in soils may be referred to three forms, which are known as free, capillary and hygroscopic, and in a study of soil in relation to plant life it is advisable that you should make yourself familiar with the characteristics of the three forms. For a full study of the water in soils it will be necessary to consult one of the more advanced text-books on the principles of agriculture; but the points of chief importance to cultivators can be described in a comparatively few words.

The free water of the soil is that which by the laws of gravity passes through it, and is in part carried away by drains and in part passes down through the lower strata and contributes to the springs and wells in the neighborhood. Free water is not used directly by plants, but it becomes of great service to them when at a proper distance below the surface, because it forms a reservoir from which plants may obtain supplies of moisture by capillary attraction. Capillary water, on the other hand, is that which is held by adhesion to the soil particles. It is not influenced by gravity, but passes from one part of the soil to another and tends to maintain an equal degree of moisture. Capillary water is directly utilized by plants, and its importance in the economy of cropping is very great. Hygroscopic water is that which surrounds the soil particles, and is not influenced by the laws of either capillarity or gravity.

As the chief source of the supply of moisture to plants during periods of dry weather capillary water is of great importance. By the action of capillary attraction water passes from one layer of soil to the other to supply the place of that which has been taken up by the plants or has been evaporated from the surface. The rapidity with which the water passes from one layer of soil to another, and the power by which it is held by the particles, depends upon the character and condition of soil. Briefly speaking, capillary water will pass most rapidly through soil in which the particles are rather large, as in the case of gravelly and sandy soils, provided they are compact, but such soils have little power of retention. Finely-divided clay, on the other hand, does not admit of the water moving rapidly, but it has great power of retaining it. The latter may, indeed, become so fine that the spaces disappear, and the passage of water and air through it becomes impossible.

You might obtain some useful lessons in the capillary attraction of soils by obtaining half a dozen or so of glass cylinders from one to two inches in diameter and from two to three feet in length, and filling them with soil of different descriptions and of varying degrees of fineness, and standing them in a vessel containing a few inches of water. They should be placed in an upright position, in which they can be retained by a light wooden support. These after a short time will show how the height of water in soil is determined by its compactness. By this simple experiment you can also determine the quantity of water a given bulk of each description of soil will take up by capillary attraction.—Gardeners' Magazine.

Trade Notes.

During the past ten days we had just the kind of weather we wanted to bring our crops into good condition for holiday times; consequently roses, carnations and violets were more plentiful than we anticipated. The demand for carnations and roses, particularly Beauties, was away ahead of last year. Wholesale prices for prime stock in carnations were $6 per 100; Beauties, long-stemmed, brought $12 per doz.; good Meteors, $8 and $12 per 100; Brides and Bridesmaids, $7 to $10; violets, $2.50 per 100. Retail demand and prices being equally good. In pot plants, poinsettias, cyclamen, primulas and azaleas were of a high grade and brought good prices.

The Dunkley Floral Co. were in fine shape to handle their numerous customers, wholesale and retail.

Sam Batson had some fine cuts of carnations which he shipped to Cincinnati.

The Van Bochove Bros. were right in the midst of a fine crop of carnations and roses, but the demand on them was so large they had hardly enough to go round. The calls on them for Beauties were unprecedented. Violets with them while of most excellent quality were about a week from full crop. They report this as their best Christmas.

The demand for winter green, holly, wreaths, etc., was good. Altogether the florists here have every reason to be entirely satisfied. RIBES.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

This week finds the market active in every department, florist and grower alike making great preparations for our busiest season of the year, Christmas.

Some fine Gloire de Lorraine begonias in 5-inch pots done up in colored crepe paper make one of the prettiest pot plants ever seen in our market. They are really a novelty, this being their first appearance in San Francisco.

The poinsettia has gotten to be a great favorite with the flower-buying people of our city, and a few of our retailers are going in heavily for them this year. They sell best in the cut state.

Roses are now to be seen of fine quality and are better than they have been for some time, the few that have been seen at the stores being mostly short-stemmed. E. W. McLellan expects to cut a fine lot of long-stemmed Liberties for Christmas. Beauties, Maids and Carnots are of fine quality and will be in in fair quantity; Meteors are very scarce.

Carnations are fairly good, but very few can be seen; the growers are no doubt pickling them. Let them go ahead. They might as well pickle the stock as the retailers, who know how to pickle, and most of them in this city do it, too. There are only a few days in the year that the grower can command his own prices, so let him seize the opportunity; he works hard and deserves all he can get.

We have had a few sharp frosts lately which makes the weather seasonable and helps to stiffen prices a bit. Outside chrysanthemums are very scarce with prices high for mere rubbish; inside chrysanthemums are not plentiful. Violets are very scarce, owing to the frost, and are high priced.

Prices: Beauties, $3 to $5; Brides, Maids and Meteors, 75 cents to $1.25; Kaiserins and Carnots, $1; Perles, 50 to 75 cents; Brunners, 15 to 20 cents; Liberties, $1.50; short-stemmed, 50 to 75 cents per doz. Carnations—Hobarts, $1 to $1.50; Crockers, 75 cents; Hills, 25 to 50 cents; Scotts, 50 to 75 cents; Portias, 35 to 50 cents; mixed fancy, 50 to 75 cents. Chrysanthemums—inside, $2 to $3; outside, 50 to 75 cents per doz. L. Harrisii, cut, $3; in pots, $5 per doz. Valley, 75 cents per doz. Hyacinths, 35 cents per doz. Paper white narcissus, $1.50 per 100. Violets—Princess of Wales, $1.50 to $2 per dozen bunches; California, $1 per doz.; Marie Louise, $1 per doz. Poinsettias, cut, $3 per doz.; in pots, $5 to $6 per doz. Smilax, 10 cents. Asparagus, 15 to 20 cents per string.

Mr. Thomas Bennett of Alden has dissolved partnership with his brother and has gone into partnership with a private party, having bought a two-acre tract of land near The Hermitage, Fruitvale. Mr. Bennett will not grow carnations; he thinks they are overdone in this market, but will grow pot plants such as calceolarias, cyclamens, primulas, palms and ferns in variety. Some prize winners can be looked for by and by.

The Shanahan Floral Co. were the first to make their window bright and gay for Christmas. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in pots, and poinsettias in pots and cut, with the usual fine grades of other stock, made one of the finest windows to be seen in 'Frisco, and was the admiration of every passer-by.

J. N.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Plant Registration.

A. C. Zvolanek, Grand View, N. J., registers sweet pea Christmas Comtes (Improved Christmas x New Comtes). Clear lavender; average three flowers to the stem; plant five feet high; stems long. Also, Christmas Captain (Florence E. Denzer x Captain of the Blues). A self color blue; three to four flowers on each stem; height, six feet; stems long. WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

CARNATION ESTELLE.

Mr. Wm. Murphy, Cincinnati, O., kindly sent us a box of Estelle carnations the day before Christmas. The flowers were decidedly fancy, being of large size on fine long stems. The color of this variety is wonderfully deep and rich, having that velvety bloom that gives it great depth. And it is a good keeper, too.

A DAY LATE.

As Christmas came on Wednesday, the day we usually go to press, the REVIEW will this week be printed on Thursday instead of Wednesday, and be mailed on Friday instead of Thursday, and will therefore reach our readers a day late.

NEW IDEAS AND NEW THOUGHTS

For the Progressive Florist in

Ribbons, Cords, Tassels

OUR business in Ribbons is extensive. Why? Because we have supplied the trade with correct shades, best of qualities and at the lowest prices.

The price of raw silk changes and hence prices of ribbon change. During September and October we took advantage of the Low prices, and our stock of all brands is now practically complete, and we offer while our present stock lasts:

HOLLY BRAND

Number	Inches Wide	Special Price
1	1/16	$0.25
1½	¼	.30
2	½	.45
3	¾	.58
5	1	.72
7	1¼	.91
9	1½	1.17
12	2	1.49
22	3	2.15
60	4⅔	3.30

This is the very finest satin and gros grain ribbon made. Full 10-yard bolts. All shades supplied in this brand. For Beauties we have had an exact shade manufactured especially for us, and we recommend No. 22 and No. 40 as correct widths to use. No. 1½ in Lavender is very swell for Violets.

ORCHID BRAND

Number	Inches Wide	Special Price
1½	¼	$0.25
2	½	.28
3	⅔	.38
4	¾	.45

22	2⅔	1.43
30	3 1/16	1.67
60	4½	2.38

Full 10-yard bolts. The best every-day ribbon. All shades supplied. This is by far the most satisfactory of all for ordinary use. It fills the bill for almost all vocations, and the above prices cannot be duplicated anywhere, quality considered.

This quality has met with great favor among the home trade in Chicago. The trade here declare it the best ribbon for bows ever used.

Per dozen, $1.00.

No. 5—Same as No. 3, but larger and more effective. We want every customer to try at least a dozen of these. Such goods make customers for you and for us.

All colors supplied in No. 3 and No. 5. A fine silk gauze ribbon. Full 10-yard bolts. Toe newest and latest thing for use on Violets is the Lavender shade in Nos. 3 or 5, using about three yards for bows of about four loops. All shades supplied in these widths, and it is very fine when artistically used. In the other widths we can supply only black and white except No. 22 American Beauty, of which we have a few bolts on hand.

E. H. HUNT, 76-78 Wabash Avenue, CHICAGO.

CINCINNATI.

Various Items.

With its rush and bustle and general mix-ups Christmas business is now over, and it is with considerable pleasure that I report that never has it been done with more satisfaction to all concerned. Of course there was not enough stock to fill orders. I don't believe there ever was, or ever will be enough to do this. But the quality of the stock was first-class and way ahead of that received at any other Christmas in my experience.

The immense business done by the express companies prevented the prompt picking up and delivering of packages and caused no end of worry. The wholesale houses were obliged to send to the railroad stations to meet incoming trains, this being the only means of obtaining immediate possession of stock. The weather moderated on the 22d and thus saved the freezing of many shipments which would undoubtedly have happened had the weather remained as it was for the last week. The coldest weather was reported by W. K. Partridge at 16 degrees below zero on Saturday last.

Christmas prices as quoted in last week's notes were well sustained, and the supply was about as predicted. We now have New Year's before us, and this day uses up a great quantity of flowers and at Christmas prices. But stock is generally very scarce, so the grand total does not amount to much in dollars.

It is a little early as yet to say how much increase in Christmas business there was this year, but that there was an increase was easily seen by everyone. The flower business seems to be ever increasing and expanding year after year. In fact, it seems that civilization, education, and the florists' business grow apace. But then this is easily explained for is not the flower the emblem of peace, prosperity and good will?

A personal letter from Mr. Albert M. Herr, secretary of the American Carnation Society, announces a special rate, of one and one-third, on the certificate plan, he has obtained to the carnation meeting at Indianapolis. He asks every one going to the convention to be sure and take advantage of this rate.

Tom Windrow returned from his hunting trip in Oklahoma last Sunday. Tom is full of hunting stories about wild animals, etc., and some of them are hair-raisers.

The boys at Dick Witterstaetter's place were treated to a Belgian hare feast. Every one present is satisfied that roast Belgian hare is a fit dish for a king.

Visitors were: Mr. H. M. Altiek, Dayton, O., and Mr. E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind.

C. J. Ohmer.

Tiffin, O.—Lewis Ullrich had a narrow escape from very serious loss last week. Last Friday morning a steam pipe located under the 100-horsepower boiler sprung a leak and threw the whole heating system out of gear. The 50-horsepower emergency boiler was at once pressed into service and by hard pumping the temperature in the greenhouses was kept above the danger point until repairs could be made, which were completed by midnight. But for the emergency boiler the results would have been disastrous.

A PRO-BOER LILY.

Mr. James Morton, Clarksville, Tenn., sends us a page from the London Black and White Budget of Nov. 30 last, containing a picture of the "Pro-Boer Lily," which is accompanied by two descriptions that are very amusing. We print them below:

BRITISH VERSION.

With the cunning of his race, a Hollander endeavored to hoodwink the British authorities into naming a flower after Louis Botha, the greatest enemy to British prestige in South Africa. A spurious tale, together with the bulb of a lily, was sent to the curator at Kew Gardens to the effect that this was a lily grown by Louis Botha and blossoming blood red; as this was a specimen hitherto unknown to the botanist the giver hoped that it would be named after its grower, General Botha. The authorities at Kew, however, wisely waited for the flower to blossom, with the result, only to be expected, that the lily turned out to be of a species already named and by no means rare. It is white with a pink rim, and though by no means an unwelcome present hardly deserves a separate appellation.

PRO-BOER VERSION.

Even the flowers of the field protest against the tyranny of this infamous jingo government. Field Marshal Louis Botha, the greatest patriot the world has ever known, spends his days during time of peace in growing beautiful lilies. He has succeeded in creating a specimen with a magnificent blood-red blossom, and with his characteristic generosity presented, through the medium of a friend, a specimen to Kew Gardens. It would have been only courteous to name this specimen after Field Marshal Botha, but at the jealous instigation of that tyrannous orchid grower, Joseph Chamberlain, the Kew authorities kept the flower and refused to name it at all for the present. Treachery, however, always meets with due reward, and the lily, out of pure disgust, grew up not red but a common pink and white.

EPIPHYLLUM TRUNCATUM.

(Lobster Cactus.)

Nearly every retail greenhouse establishment is sure to have a few of these old favorites and those who have resurrected them and brought them to the front are getting good returns for their trouble. A well grown and evenly flowered plant at Christmas or New Year's sells well and by many they are much prized on account of their adaptability to house culture.

Though the pereskia stock is good to graft on, they do well on any tall growing, long lived member of the cactus family, the cereus section being most useful, especially C. grandiflora.

For early flowering they should do their growing in the early spring and become well ripened out of doors in summer, after which we can soon tell how to treat them by the formation of flowering buds on the tips of the growths.

ART.

PORT HURON, MICH.—It is reported that the floral decorations at a social function to be given Dec. 30 by the wife of Millionaire J. L. Board, will cost $1,000 and society circles here are all agog.

CROWN POINT, IND.—The Crown Point Floral Co. has been incorporated with a capital stock of $3,000. The incorporators are August Dresel, Emma Kuhtz, Chas. Wendel and Chas. Jarmuth.

THE REVIEW is all right. Could not run without it.—S. T. STONE, Carthage, Ill.

By the Chicago Carnation Co.—Mrs. Potter Palmer, scarlet, blooms of the largest size, very full; an ideal form. Stem, long and strong; an extra free bloomer.

Mrs. H. N. Higinbotham, light salmon pink, but very distinct in shade from all other carnations; an ideal grower, healthy and noticeably clean. Foliage, light blue; a very free and continuous bloomer; calyx, perfect, having never yet seen one bursted.

Chicot, large white, flower as large as Mrs. Bradt; in midwinter the blooms are occasionally striped with carmine, on the order of Armazindy. Stem, exceedingly strong. Calyx, good. Fragrance, delightful. Plants, vigorous, producing blooms in abundance; can be classed as a white in all stages.

By James Aldous, Iowa City, Iowa:—Mrs. Vinnie Ream Hoxie, Scott type, with more compact habit, a free healthy grower and continuous bloomer. Stems from twelve to fifteen inches long, stiff and wiry. Perfect calyx. Flower well formed, from three to three and one-quarter inches. Color bright pink, darker than Scott. Fine for pot culture. In its fifth year.

By Boehringer Bros., Bay City, Mich.:—Daybreak Perfection. THE "California Floriculturist" is the title of a new monthly issued by the Floriculturist Publishing Co., Los Angeles, Cal. Ernest Braunton is editor and the subscription price is $1 a year. It is gotten up in small magazine form, is neatly printed, and the contents should be interesting and useful to the flower lovers of the Pacific Coast.

IN THE Los Angeles (Cal.) Times of June 23 last appears a large engraving from a photograph of Palm Springs, Cal., showing a noble group of palms surrounding some natural springs. Judging from the picture some of the palms must be from 30 to 50 feet tall. We are indebted to Mr. Fred Rafferty, Santa Ana, Cal., for a copy of the picture.

MILWAUKEE.

Up to the present writing indications point to an enormous Christmas business. Stock is coming in about equal to demand with quality in both roses and carnations far superior to that for former holidays. Prices rule higher, especially on high grade stock. In roses, red led the call and good Meteor and Liberty ranged from $15 to $25 per 100. Carnations, fancy scarlet, $8; other colors in fancy sorts averaged $6, while some of the old standards went at $4 to $5 per 100. Violets were extremely scarce and brought $2 to $2.50 per 100. Romans, paper whites and stevias were plentiful and no reasonable offers were overlooked.

In blooming plants, Jerusalem cherry and primroses predominated, and a fine lot of azaleas brought in at the right time by Chas. Kitzerow went like hot cakes. The cold weather retarded holly sales some, but the past few warm days made up for lost time and the C. C. Pollworth Co. disposed of two belated carloads in short order. Green in bulk was scarce, but there came in at the last moment a surprising lot of wreathing, which earlier in the season would have brought much better returns.

Mrs. Ennis, the Grand avenue florist, has fitted up a neat little store for the holidays and may remain there permanently.

Wm Edlefsen brought in a fine lot of poinsettias and none will be left over.

Of Interest to Some Chicago Readers: The Brewers' Annual Ball. Exposition Building. January 25, 1902.

THE SAN JOSE SCALE.

It is reported that the long-sought original habitat of the San Jose scale has been discovered just south of the great wall in China. Also that a species of lady bird beetle feeds upon the scale and living specimens of this beetle are now on their way to the Agricultural Department at Washington to be used in experimenting. If the beetle feeds upon the scale as reported and will reproduce itself freely here, the scale difficulty may be solved.

The Twentieth Century City is the title of a very useful and finely illustrated booklet, containing a report of the annual convention of the American League for Civic Improvement, held at Buffalo last August. The purpose of the League is to encourage the beautifying of cities by the planting of trees, shrubs, flowering plants, etc., the development of public park systems, proper care of streets and alleys, etc. As the work of the League stimulates the use of trees, shrubs and bedding plants, the nurseryman and the florist have a commercial interest in its work as well as that interest which every good citizen has. The corresponding secretary of the League is Mr. E. G. Routzahn, Dayton, Ohio.

The MRS. E. A. NELSON

Bids fair to become the commercial standard pink carnation. It is a healthy grower, a free and continuous bloomer, and it is sure to thrive wherever grown.

The following letter from Mr. Fred Burki speaks for itself:

Bellevue, Pa., November 28th, 1901.

Mr. E. A. Nelson. Dear Sir:—The "Nelson" cuttings you sent me for trial made excellent growth, both in the field and since housing, showing health and vigor. The stem is fine and the bloom and color all that can be desired. I consider the "Nelson" a splendid commercial variety. Wishing you success. Yours truly, FRED BURKI.

Prices—Per doz., $2.50; 25, $3.50; 50, $6.00; 100, $10.00; 1000, $80.00.

The FLORISTS' MANUAL
WILLIAM SCOTT

Is a book of 224 pages, and contains about 200 articles on commercial plants and cultural operations, each giving "the meat" only, from the personal experience of a thoroughly practical man who is in daily touch with each department of the business and who has that rare quality of being able to tell others what they want to know. The articles are arranged alphabetically, like those in an encyclopædia, and in an instant one can turn to the subject upon which light is desired at the moment. The book is illustrated by over 200 fine half toue engravings. It is

and is a whole library on practical commercial floriculture in one volume. It is very handsomely and substantially bound in half leather, with specially designed title in gold.

Price, $5.00 Carriage Prepaid. If you cannot spare the full price at once, write us for our monthly payment offer.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Easter.

Remember the date of Easter this year is early—March 30—and that bright week, or sometimes two or three—that we get in April in many years will be out of your reach.

Crimson Ramblers.

Crimson Rambler roses that have been grown in pots all summer and well ripened this fall will force very nicely in time if brought in at once. It should be needless to say that they want no pruning or seareely any. Nothing but the very weakest shoots should be cut away and not those if they are well ripened because these little sprays near the pot give you a nice lot of leaves and there is where they are better than the lifted plants which are too often naked and bare near the base of the plant. Sometimes the last foot or less of the long shoots are not ripe; if so, cut them off, you have plenty of growth left.

It often seems that these plants that have made such a good growth in 7, 8 or 9-inch pots, would have very much filled up the space with roots; so they have, but there is no need of shifting them. Dig out an inch of the surface of the old soil and replace with two inches of cow manure, and not too old or decayed stuff at that. These well rooted plants will endure and be benefited by any amount of feeding. All you have tried to do this past summer has been to produce long, strong canes (hope you have done it).

Now when you start them is the time to tie them or before they have made any growth that can be broken off in the handling. Four or five stakes 3 feet long round the edge of the pots and the strong canes tied 'round spirally will make a handsome plant, but you can tie them into fan shape or any way you wish. Give them 45 degrees at night for two or three weeks and a syringing twice a day. If Crimson Ramblers never have to be given more than 55 degrees at night they are a much better color than with a higher temperature.

American Beauties.

I have often recommended, and properly, the American Beauty as the finest of Easter pot roses. It discounts all of them if properly handled. Let us hope you have some lifted from a bench in November and neither allowed to freeze hard or get very dry. These plants were in an entirely different condition from a frost-ripened hybrid perpetual. If cut down to within six inches of the pot and started going now in a cool, light house, they should make fine blooming plants by Easter, and if never over 50 degrees at night so much the better. When these cut down pot grown American Beauties first break you would think from their breaks that what growth was coming would be feeble blind shoots, but it never is the case. As they make roots the growth develops into a strong growth, with a fine bud.

Hybrid Perpetuals.

Hybrid Perpetual roses must be started at once. If they were potted at once from the field, say the middle of November, and kept in a well protected cold frame or a house a little above freezing, that would be ideal treatment, but this is not always convenient and plants that have been lifted from the field and protected from severe frost and their roots kept moist will force very well for Easter if potted up at once. They must have a cool house because they have no working roots. The top and bottom growths progress together, and when there are good working roots the plants will want a higher temperature.

If by any chance you should not have yet cut them down, don't cut them too low. If I may be allowed to refer to those rose beds in the Pan-American which, without doubt were the best in every way ever seen on this continent, they were cut down to within three inches of the ground, but they had roots and vigor to make every eye a strong growth and flower, while these artificially grown plants have no such vigor, and if cut too low will only give blind shoots, so cut them down not lower than eight or nine inches above the bud or graft.

Lilies.

After all there is no crop giving us more thought than the Lilium longiflorum. Those who grow the Bermuda will have little trouble in getting them in flower at the desired time, but there is much more difficulty with the Japan grown bulbs, although not any serious trouble with them. The bulbs arrived in good time this year and if potted at once when received and brought in about Dec. 1, should now have a growth of six to nine inches. It is merely a matter of heat. You can make no mistake by giving them a steady night temperature of 60 degrees for the next month.

Don't neglect your fumigating, or if you have steam, your steady application of some of the tobacco extracts evaporated in some. The aphis that appears on the developed leaves is easily killed; it is those that are deep down in the crown of leaves that are doing the mischief, and to kill them vaporizing or fumigation is of little use. Give the crown of every plant a spraying with either the Rose Leaf Extract diluted 75 to 1, or the Nikoteen, 300 to 1. The latter is a very strong decoction or concoction, as I proved very recently. While experimenting on some violets I used it diluted 200 to 1 and it hurt; but as we all know, violet foliage is very easily injured.

Tie up your lilies, or rather stake them, before they are a foot high. It is much better to cut off six inches of your stake if it should be too long than to let them flop over and get "shaky at the neck."

Christmas Plant Arrangement by Mr. E. Wienhober, Chicago.

Rhododendrons.

Rhododendrons should now be brought into a moderately warm house. They differ much in the varieties as to the time they want to bring them out. They are a true evergreen and want plenty of syringing till the flower is open.

Spirea.

Some growers profess to force a Spirea Japonica in six weeks. Perhaps they can. I would much prefer twelve weeks. This does not seem a very profitable plant nowadays, yet it is one of those pretty plants that the retailer cannot do without. Pot them up at once. For the first three weeks they will do very well beneath a bench in any house in a carnation temperature. Then they must have the fullest light. We generally crowd these roots into as small a pot as it is possible to get them, and perhaps that's the right way. But they do suffer terribly in flowering time for want of water, and to do them well it pays to give every plant a saucer two inches bigger than the bottom of the pot and keep the saucer constantly supplied with weak liquid manure. The saucers cost something, but you will save their cost by the much easier and less frequent watering, and then you will get spirea flowers that are flowers.

Happy New Year to all dormant roots, bulbs, deciduous shrubs and live florists. William Scott.

Liberty.

Is this rose going to be a success? is the question frequently asked among growers. When disseminated a year or two ago it was very highly eulogized and predictions were rife that with its fragrant bloom of Jacqueminot shade and luster, its productiveness and its habit of sending up strong canes from the base buds, it would drive Meteor from the field. Has it, or is it likely to do so?

From notes garnered among growers during the last two seasons and from personal observation it does not seem to me to fulfill the prediction. The majority of growers complain of its susceptibility to black spot even when grown in a temperature of 56 or 58 degrees, and if I remember rightly one of its highest commends was that it could be grown successfully in the same temperature and under the same conditions as Brides and Bridesmaids. Where I have seen it under such conditions it had the sickliest appearance of any of the plants in the house, the canes from the base buds being conspicuous by their absence, and the product of stems over twelve inches in length being so small that they could not be sold at a profit unless at Beauty prices. During the last season I have experimented with it in all kinds of rose houses. Have grown it with Meteors at a temperature of 68 degrees, where it did splendidly up till November, when, under the application of artificial heat, it went all to pieces with black spot; in a house of Beauties it was no better; among Brides and Bridesmaids, after September it simply stood still, but in a house at a temperature of 62 degrees we had better results. It seems to want bottom heat, stimulants to induce root action, not too much feeding, and copious supplies of water after the days begin to lengthen; also great care in the use of the syringe so that it will be sure to thoroughly dry before sundown. The eyes from old, hard wood seem to produce more robust stems than those from the base of younger wood, so that when cutting the bloom it is wise to cut back into the hard wood, as is frequently done with Beauties.

Being a comparatively new rose its method of culture does not seem to be mastered yet. If it can be grown to produce stems during the winter in quantity and quality like Meteor its superior quality of bloom coupled with its fragrance will without doubt give it the first place among red roses in the market. But from present indications it looks as if Meteor will have little trouble to keep its place in public favor for some time to come. Ribes.

CHRISTMAS PLANTS.

We present in this issue engravings from photographs of Christmas plant arrangements noted last week in the stores of E. Wienhoeber and C. A. Samuelson, Chicago.

In the silver birch bark hamper the plants used include Pandanus Veitchii, cyclamen, Adiantums Farleyense and cuneatum and Isolepsis gracilis. The araucaria has the pot covered with the Porto Rican matting and sprays of winter berry are inserted in the pot.

In the groups of arrangements photographed at Mr. Samuelson's there is considerable variety in the plants used. Cyclamen, heaths, Primula obconica, azaleas, Otaheite oranges, Celestial peppers and ardisias are prominent, while sprays of the winter berry are freely used to give color among masses of foliage.

CARNATION NOTES.

Last week I meant to write a few notes on the treatment you should give your carnations after Christmas, but on account of a bursted water pump and consequently a hard time in keeping up the temperature in the houses when the mercury outside stood at zero and lower for a week I was unable to spare the time.

Wherever the cold wave reached I am not afraid of much over forcing. I hope you have been wise enough to discontinue the forcing gradually directly after the Christmas demand was over and saved your plants from that tired, droopy appearance we so often see about this time. By this time you should have them going their regular gait again and if the forcing was not too severe the quality should be as good as ever. If the stems are a trifle weak or the growth appears soft, sprinkle some slaked lime between the plants and water it in and then run them a little on the dry side for a week or two.

During the cloudy weather be careful that you do not over-water. As a general rule carnations like plenty of water, but at this time, when evaporation is very slow, it is an easy matter to get the soil in a soggy condition. Examine the soil by digging into it here and there; you can't tell much about it by merely looking on the surface. Don't run up the temperature in order to supply what is lacking in sunshine. Rather run the temperature a degree or two lower while it is cloudy and dark and you will make up in quality what little you will lack in quantity, and then when you do want to do a little the temperature away up.

THE BEST CARNATIONS.

Only One Variety of Each Color.

Would like to have the opinions of the many readers of the Review as to what they consider to be the best varieties of carnations for one to grow, selecting only one variety of the following colors: Pink, white, scarlet, yellow and fancy. Conn.

This is a question which is put to us quite frequently, but I am sorry to say that we are unable to say just what varieties a certain grower is likely to have success with, especially when we are unacquainted with his climate, soil and method of culture. We can all easily pick out the varieties that bring us in the most money and in fact each season we select the most profitable ones to grow for the next season.

We do not consider it wise, either, to depend on only one variety of each color for a steady supply of blooms throughout the season, as nearly every variety does better either during warm weather or else during the cold winter months, and so it is advisable to grow two or three varieties of a color in order to have high grade stock at all times. Then again, the inquiry does not state whether a fancy grade of blooms is wanted or if a medium grade is all that is needed.

We find we cannot get along without both White Cloud and F. Hill in white, and we would grow about one-half of each, even if we grew only a few hundred plants. Queen Louise looks as though it would make a good steady bloomer.

In pink Mrs. Joost is a good all round variety. Crocker beats it in some places, where it does well, but I would not recommend it to a beginner, especially when he wants only one variety. Mrs. Lawson is grand, but needs skillful handling. Dorothy would perhaps be a good one to grow, as it has freedom at least and the blooms grade as high as Mrs. Joost. In light pink Elma is the only one we know worth growing.

In red, Crane is perhaps the best all 'round variety, as it comes in early and is very free. If confined to one variety this is likely to prove the most profitable one to grow.

Among the striped ones Mrs. Bradt is the leader up to date.

In yellows and crimsons I can say little, as we do not grow either. I have seen Gov. Roosevelt on several places and it looks fine in its color.

The above varieties all do well for us, but we would not like to drop all the other varieties we have and grow these only. "Conn." must test the varieties for himself and ascertain which one suits his climate, soil and culture best. He may find other varieties in each class that will do as good or better for him than the above.

A. F. J. BAUR.

WHITE.—Queen Louise leads the list in point of productiveness and seems to me the ideal carnation for the grower who uses his own product, as it can always be depended upon for flowers.

Lorna is a finely finished flower on a very long stem and has given excellent results with most growers.

PINK.—Ethel Crocker stands at the head of all pinks with me; not quite so free as some sorts, but bringing double the price of all others. It is a great pity this variety has failed with so many growers, as the flowers sell themselves without any effort on the part of the retailer.

Genevieve Lord is lighter in color and smaller in size, but is a free bloomer and very much admired by some buyers. It also has the faculty of adapting itself to almost any soil.

Dorothy is ahead of everything when it comes to productiveness. It was the first carnation we cut heavily from, and promises to never know when to quit. A few people do not like the heavy fringe to the petals, but there are enough others who think this its main charm to make it a desirable sort for every grower's collection.

Morning Glory is a pink of that delightful Daybreak shade. The flower is hardly as good as a well grown Daybreak, but it never bursts a calyx, and has such a good, strong stem that it is one of the very best sellers, and can always be relied upon for a good liberal cut every week of the season.

SCARLET.—G. H. Crane has come to be the standard scarlet, and it well deserves this place. It is not perfect in all particulars, but until "the perfect scarlet" is found growers had better plant some of this one for their main crop.

Estelle promises to become a standard scarlet. Its first crop of flowers is inclined to come short stemmed, but early planting overcomes this defect, and its magnificent color and finely built flower, together with its free blooming, makes it a good, safe one for every grower to try in quantity.

CRIMSON.—Gov. Roosevelt seems to fill the bill in every particular in this class. Its freedom of bloom, good, well formed flower and fine stem are just what cut flower growers need.

FANCY.—Prosperity, the largest of all carnations, should be in every grower's collection. In growth it is ideal, and its one defect of lateness will no doubt disappear as we learn better how to grow it.

Varieties on trial in small quantities are Irene, a very free blooming pink of excellent habit, ideal stem and a good selling flower. Alma, a large flowered Daybreak pink, with very long stem, seems a good sort to give further trial. Golden Beauty, a beautiful yellow on long strong stems seems to fill the bill for a yellow.

Fick & Faber have sent me for trial a number of sorts, and there are some very promising ones among them. Several shades of pink, a good scarlet and white. They are having excellent results with them, and no doubt one or more will eventually find their way into the good graces of Eastern growers.

Albert M. Herr.

Lancaster, Pa.

Assuming that you refer to varieties of carnations which we have had ample time to test, also that the bread and butter feature is to be counted in, I will say that Lawson stands at the head for pink.

White Cloud is the best white by all odds.

Crane for scarlet has been our money maker in that color.

Naming Eldorado for yellow may seem strange, but facts are stubborn things.

For fancy I shall be obliged to cling to Mrs. Bradt.

You will please take notice of the fact that I grow nothing except for vase work, using none whatever for design work. On that account stem, size and keeping qualities are important factors to be considered.

ST. LOUIS.

Report of the Christmas Trade.

Trade during the holidays was very satisfactory, most of the florists having all they could do.

In cut flowers there was the usual assortment for Christmas. American Beauties, of course, had the call and from $18 to $24 per dozen was asked for them by the retailers. George Waldbart claims the banner order of 100 Beauties at $1.50 each. This perhaps is the largest single order ever given to one florist in this city. Other roses, such as Brides and Maids, were better in quality than for several seasons past. Colored roses were, as usual at this time, the best sellers. Meteors ran very uneven in color and a great many crippled blooms were seen. Perles were scarce and hardly up to the standard. A small lot of Wootton's was seen which showed up in good form. The supply of roses was good and just about equal to the demand.

Carnations were in good supply, though some of the stock that came in was left on the plants too long. Among the local growers Fred Ammann, Henry Aue and Johann sent in extra fine blooms which brought top prices. Ammann's White Clouds were wonderfully fine. Dunford's stock was also much in demand. Five dollars and $6 was the top price on these fancy blooms and only a very few sold at $3, and none below that price.

California violets came in in limited quantities and very few sold below $3 per 100. The demand was great for them and the supply fell short by several thousands. The bulbous stock exploded early and the supply was far more than the demand. Romans came in in all grades and sold from $2 to $5 per 100. Paper whites were fine and demand was fair at $3 and $4. Valley was rated at $5 for the best, but the bulk went at $4, with demand good. Short tulips, with bulb and all, sold at 2 cents, with very little call for them at any time. All greens had a good call at prices same as usual.

The retailers as a rule express satisfaction with the results of Christmas business. Some of them say that it was the best in their experience although their plant sales showed the largest increase.

Here are some of the expressions used by some of them when asked how their trade was during the rush. In the West End Fred Weber said—"Never was so busy in my life; everything went at good prices." Miller, Sanders, Kalisch and Windt in the extreme West End report—"A fine trade in everything; plants went big." Connon and Miss Newman are well satisfied and wish Christmas would come more often. On Grand avenue George Waldbart—"Sold out clean on plants and cut flowers: trade the biggest in years." Mrs. M. M. Ayers reports the best trade since she became a florist; her right and left bowers, Will and Martin, were on the jump all day long. "Had no trouble to sell everything we had." Mrs. Ellison—"Hardly enough stock to fill our orders with; plants sold great." Mary Ostertag had a fine lot of blooming plants and cut flowers which Brother George took good care of. "Business very satisfactory." Gus Eggeling was heavy on Beauties. Gus had the best trade in years. Down near Gravois comes the Beyer Bros.' place. Carl reports great sales on plants with no complaints to make on cut flower trade. We now come to the wholesale district. The Ostertag Bros. were busy as bees. "Trade never better during the holidays; had lots of stock which sold well." C. Young & Sons Co. with their great force of help had all hands busy and are glad the rush is over. "Everything in our line sold well and fast." Miss Theresa had all she could do to keep up with the orders. "Business very satisfactory." Fred Foster, North Floral Co. and Ellison & Tesson report that they did all they expected in cut flowers and greens. Very few plants are sold by the down-town florists. Riessen Floral Co. did a rushing business in cut flowers and Mrs. Buechel says: "We are glad it's all over with, and you can say that we had our share of the business." In South St. Louis, Schray, Fillmore, Heile, Kruse, Bruenig, Meyer and others report Christmas trade as O. K. Plants sold better with them than cut flowers, the latter being too high-priced for their trade. Up north, Fred Meinhardt, Koenig, Kunz and Rotter are well pleased with their business during the holiday season.

Not much can be said about New Years this early, but for some years past New Years has been a poor cut-flower carnival. However, some of the West End florists say they have quite a number of orders on hand for New Years. Let us hope for the revival of the good old times of long ago at New Years, when we had to work all night the night before.

A WIDE GREENHOUSE.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the interior of the large single span house (54x307 feet) erected by the Floral Exchange of Philadelphia at Edgely, Pa. As will be seen in the picture the beds are all on the ground level. It is certainly a decided departure from the usually accepted methods of rose growing for cut flowers.

Mr. C. C. Sanders' success in growing fine poinsettias is partly due to the result of looking through Scott's Manual.

Ellison & Tesson found on opening their store at 625 Olive street that the place had been flooded during the night owing to a frozen water pipe above them; damage about $100.

BUFFALO.

Christmas and New Years.

The general opinion is that Christmas business was no improvement over last year. It is the first time in many years that we have been unable to announce some advance. However, there is nothing to grumble about. Business has been at high water mark for several years and if we do as much and do it right we should be satisfied. Perhaps in some localities business has still forged ahead, and perhaps we are suffering from that "tired feeling" after the six months' excitement of the Pan-American. Society is very gay this winter, and balls, receptions and parties of many kinds are going on all the time.

New Year's has not been in many years anything approaching Christmas as a flower festival, and no one prepares himself for it, but decorations make up for the counter trade. There is no surplus of flowers, or even a lowering of Christmas prices, and everything has brought a good round figure. American Beauties are retailing from $10 to $24 per dozen, Brides and that type $4 to $5; carnations, $1 to $2; violets, $4 to $5, and some extra quality were a dollar more. I think if these prices were compared with ten years ago they would be found to be a considerable advance, and so they ought to be, for it costs more to raise or produce them and considerably more to sell them. There is at least 25 per cent more expense added to their disposal in the way of fancy boxes, paper, clerks and general all-'round style.

The Late E. M. Wood.

Although tardy in remembering to say a word on the death of our friend, E. M. Wood, I have felt and realized what our loss is as much as any one. Of all the ex-presidents of the S. A. F. he was the first to leave us. I believe the whole trade owes much to Mr. Wood. It is true possibly (I do not know) that he started the Waban Greenhouses with the view of making them profitable, but the way they were conducted was an example to all of us. Flowers of the very highest quality were grown and the best prices were obtained. That's the kind of establishment that does not hurt the man of small capital and moderate establishment; rather it helps us all. It raises the standard of flowers, prices, methods of building and management all along the line. He was an example of how to treat and appreciate the services of his employes. For sterling character and magnificent gardener that Alexander Montgomery is, he could not have made the splendid success he has without the most cordial relations and support of his worthy employer.

Hundreds of florists knew Mr. Wood most intimately and where he was best known he was most honored and loved. The writer had the pleasure of a very intimate acquaintance and never has it been our fortune to know a man more amiable, more harmless to his fellow man, or one that spread more sunshine wherever he went or with whomever he associated. I sympathize deeply with the friends and community that will know him no more. W. S.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

New Year's trade showed a very satisfactory advance over that of last year, with plenty of stock to meet demands. The supply of stock was much larger than that for Christmas and it is remarkable where all the flowers came from so soon after the great holiday which naturally cleaned up all supplies. Local demand has been rather lifeless and it looked as though the market would be overloaded at one time, but shipping orders came thick and fast at the last and cleaned up stock very well on Monday. On Tuesday there was more than enough to meet demands in white carnations and roses and there was more than plenty of violets.

On roses prices ranged from $8 to $12, with some sales of extra select at $15. And some lower grade whites went as low as $4. Beauties held at $8 a dozen for the best and from that down through the usual gradations. Carnations sold at $3 to $4, with some specials at $5 and $6, and some lower grade stuff went at $2, and even $1.50.

Some little weakness had developed on Tuesday and prices will no doubt have dropped considerably all along the line

(a) The Committee highly recommends this variety as an early sort. (b) The Committee would recommend this to florists for planting in limited quantities, on account of its earliness, although the flowers before us for judging were not finished and in our opinion would take four to five days to fully develop. It is superior to either Mme. F. Bergmann or Fitzwygram, but we cannot score it up to 85 points, even taking its earliness into consideration. Scoring it strictly on its merits, 79 is all it will stand. (c) Judged as an extra early variety. (d) Importation. (e) Golden Wedding x Goldmine. (f) Nagoya x Mrs. Jones. (g) Type of Merry Christmas. (h) Sport from Glory of Pacific. (i) This is supposed to be a sport from Western King. (j) This variety was raised by the late Henry A. Gane. (k) The New York Committee awarded the variety "The Josephine" the necessary number of points, namely, 87, entitling it to a certificate, but later, after comparing it with the Robert Halliday, declared it was too much like that older variety to warrant a certificate, consequently the Committee recommended the withholding of the certificate for the present.

Trade Conditions for Dec. 23-28.

Good. Never better and probably never equaled. Good prices ruled on everything for Christmas with the exception that violet growers brought in too many of their goods on the 24th, causing a drop before night. Few were left to bring in upon Christmas morning, which is where the mistake came in. Eight dollars per dozen was realized at wholesale on a few pink and white roses and $20 per dozen on a few American Beauties. But I think all demands were supplied in the cut flower and plant trade.

The holly business got in a bad way a week before Christmas on account of southern shippers not being able to get cases in which to pack their goods.

Various Items.

None of the suburban buyers have ever stood higher in the estimation of the Boston wholesalers than the Quinns, of Brookline. Something over a year ago James F. branched away from a partnership with his father and brothers, built new in what has proven a particularly good part of the town, and during the next three hundred and sixty-five days located over $16,000 worth of retail trade. So I took along a collection of interrogation points of different sizes and rode out to see him a day or two since to see if I could find out "by what mighty magic," as Othello says, he does such things.

Well, I found out he has a finely arranged place to do business to begin with; that he evidently attends to it, and when you couple all this to good natural courtesy the three of a kind is hard to beat. He put up a nice greenhouse, 24x90 feet, which he keeps well stocked with first-class plants, and a fine office, 20x60, with workroom in the rear and cellar under, both containing boilers and other accoutrements, great ingenuity being displayed in methods by which every inch of space is made to count, and in cold storage arrangements. Another noticeable feature is the generous allotment of electrical lighting apparatus about the whole place, which he pronounces good.

Finding horses more available than the proper kind of wheeled vehicles at busy periods, he keeps only one horse, but four nice carriages, in a nearby stable.

Himself, a younger brother, a competent lady bookkeeper and a lad make the distributing force. He is his own buyer and, like others of the name, is known as a shrewd and careful, but fair-minded and generous purchaser. He will beat last year's record this year and keep right on with a yearly increase.

Quite a bit of comment is being made concerning the wholesale changes in help among the city stores, caused primarily by that at Galvin's Back Bay place.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of a house of the white carnation Bon Homme Richard at the establishment of the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill., taken shortly before Christmas. The house is 22x200, and beginning Friday before Christmas over 4,000 blooms were cut for the holiday trade and they netted the company about $275.00.

This variety originated on this place and was disseminated last year. It is certainly a very free bloomer here, and we hear good reports from it elsewhere also.

RAYMOND, N. H.—J. A. Littlefield has sold out what plants he could and has closed his greenhouse.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Holiday Trade.

Two weeks full to overflowing with business activity have come and gone since the last report in this column. Now as the old year closes it is possible to give an accurate account of the holiday business.

The general feeling is that Christmas business was the very best we ever had, away ahead of last year. The drawbacks to general satisfaction were the high prices of cut flowers and certain express shipments delayed or frozen.

The novelties on the market were a very effective ball-like basket of Lorraine begonias, designed and executed by William Tricker, of Henry A. Dreer. A ten-inch wire frame was filled with some half dozen five-inch, fifteen or eighteen four-inch and a few three-inch Lorraine begonias in such a way as to make a perfect ball of pink flowers. These baskets were very beautiful suspended in a window. They brought $5 wholesale (not enough) and $15 retail. A New York florist when he saw them admitted that he sometimes did get ideas from Philadelphia.

Another novelty was a glass-covered fern dish, with slate bottom and nickel plated edges, made by John C. Gracey. These are most ingenious, the lids working on hinges and are of various sizes. They seem just the thing for delicate adiantums, such as Farleyense, when grown in the house. Another novelty was some nicely berried English holly in pots.

A very serious question to the plant growers has been the number of shipments delayed or frozen in transit during the severe weather just before Christmas. The plantsmen guarantee safe delivery when shipping by express, but the experience of this season has convinced them that they cannot do so in future. The combination of extremely severe weather and the heavy holiday business caused loss of nearly all shipments that went beyond a radius of one hundred miles. It is hoped that the buyers will meet the sellers half way on this point by ordering their plants early enough to admit of their being shipped during a mild spell, and not so late that they must go with the thermometer near zero or miss Christmas.

Cut flowers were practically cleared up at Christmas despite the high prices. Beauties brought all the way from $3 to $15 a dozen. Brides and Maids brought 20 cents for specials, the Maids of this grade being extremely scarce. Ordinary grade 12 cents to 15 cents, with seconds 5 cents to 8 cents. Carnations were more plentiful than expected, many coming in at the last moment. Prices ranged from $3 to $8 a hundred. Specials $10 to $12. Single violets brought $1 a hundred; doubles $1.50 to $2 a hundred.

H. H. Battles experienced his best Christmas. He had the courage to back his convictions, buying heavily of all kinds of cut flowers of choicest quality and selling out cleanly. He handled many blooms of Mrs. Oliver Ames and the Queen of Edgely roses.

Pennock Bros. boycotted fancy grades of cut flowers, believing the prices exorbitant. Their sales of plants were very heavy, specimen palms being recommended to their customers in preference to fancy Beauties. They also sold many made up baskets of plants.

Joseph Kift & Son were exceedingly well pleased with Christmas, both in plants and cut flowers. Their handle baskets filled with plants and decorated with ribbon were tastefully gotten up and proved popular. Azaleas and palms in medium sizes proved good sellers.

Robert Crawford, Jr., considered the price of Beauties too high and pushed choice plants instead. He found Lorraine begonias splendid for table decoration, using them extensively. His business both in plants and cut flowers increased largely.

George Craig was greatly pleased with Christmas, regretting only the scarcity of choice Maids.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons noticed a decided increase in the demand for their hampers of plants, made up with cyclamens, begonias, crotons and ferns. These baskets could be shown to customers when they called and then put away till time for delivery, and on that account were considered preferable to cut flowers.

Charles Fox did a large business in poinsettias in made up pans by themselves or with a variety of plants. He also used a great variety of greens, such as galax leaves, made up into wreaths, etc. He also did extremely well with cut flowers. A feature was 100 especially fine Liberties from Stephen Mortenson, which brought $1 each.

Much controversy has been aroused on Christmas cut flower prices. The following letter on the subject is a fair statement of the case from the grower's standpoint. It would undoubtedly be better were prices more even throughout the year, but Christmas is the grower's opportunity to make up his losses in the dull season:

"Christmas has come and gone. I think that everyone has cause to be satisfied with the business. All my Beauties sold (and I could have sold more of them if I had had them) at from $5 to $15 per dozen. The best buyers do not object to paying a good price for the best that can be had. I have heard some complaint by those I did not supply about the Christmas prices, but that we must expect. As long as all the flowers are sold at Christmas prices it is proof that it is the market price and that there is no extortion to it.—Joseph Heacock."

Prices have fallen since Christmas. The special Beauties bring $6 to $9 a dozen; the best tea roses $10 to $12, with a few at $15; carnations $2.50 to $6, with a few fancies higher. The demand throughout the holidays was excellent. Greens became extremely scarce Christmas eve.

Notes.

Many retailers with little greenhouses forced their own paper whites and Romans. Biester, of Susquehanna avenue, had a nice lot.

A. M. Lawson, florist, of Wissahickon Heights, died on Dec. 26. He was for many years gardener for the late H. H. Houston and was much respected.

The Florists' Bowling Club have won the firemen's team tournament at the Academy alleys. They tied with two other teams for first place, defeating one, the Pan-American, by thirty pins, and the other, Franklin, by 170 pins in the play-off. In the latter game the Florists scored 936 pins, an average of 187 1-5 pins per man, a splendid score at a critical time.

William Wunder obtained $8 and $10 a hundred for Carnation Estelle last week.

Henry F. Michell did a very heavy seed business in December.

Riverton.

I had the pleasure of a visit to Riverton this week. It was a real pleasure, doubly enjoyed after the long hours and lost sleep of the last week. I was most kindly received by J. D. Eisele and George A. Strohlein in a spirit of fraternal brotherhood that gladdens the heart of the visitor, convincing him that those who know most are often most modest.

Pandanus Sanderi was first visited. The plants are a sight worth seeing; there is a life and vividness about the coloring that appeals irresistibly to the enthusiast. This pandanus is pronounced a more finished plant than P. Veitchii by the critics, and a more rapid grower with stronger constitution than the older variety by those who cultivate it. The plants brought over on the 27th of last January in 3½-inch pots are now 30 inches high and 48 inches across in 6-inch pots. Certainly one could hardly grow P. Veitchii to that size in a 6-inch, nor could it be grown so rapidly in good condition. Mr. Eisele said that until a couple of months ago he had felt some doubts about Pandanus Sanderi, but now he was sure it was a plant of sterling merit, destined to have a great future.

Coleus thyrsoideus has been sent out before as a summer flowering sort. Here it is thought that its proper flowering time is in winter. Mr. Eisele believes the deep blue flowers of this coleus will make as fine a showing at the Christmas holidays as is now made by the pink of Begonia Lorraine. Four or five rooted cuttings should be bunched in somewhat the same way as arecas and started in a 3-inch pot about September 1; they should be shifted as fast as necessary and not pinched. Of course this plan has not stood the test of thorough trial, but there is good reason to believe it is pretty near the right treatment, coming from the source it does.

A beautiful novelty is the new sport from Begonia erecta compacta. The sport has a leathery, durable-looking leaf that promises well, with blooms fully twice as large as the parent and much brighter in color. This begonia will surely prove a winner.

The pale pink Lorraine is considered more durable than the Lorraine. To illustrate the faith felt in Lorraine it may be mentioned that a clever grower has just placed an order with the Dreer company for 1,500 plants, to be delivered in July.

Dracaena Goldieana is a beautiful variegated plant of charming habit, which has always pleased Mr. Eisele. Quite a nice stock has been gathered.

Arecas and kentias in medium sizes have been very popular. Kentia Sanderiana is being grown to replace Cocos Weddeliana in large sizes. A fine lot of Phoenix canariensis in 12-inch tubs were growing in one house.

Azaleas looked well. One house was filled with Madame Van der Cruyssen, a variety which will be scarce for some years to come.

A good demand has been found for Thuyopsis borealis, Thuyopsis dolabrata, Thuya Lobbi and Cupressus Lawsoniana, which are cultivated abroad with a hoe and not injured by horse cultivation as in this country. Phil.

CLEVELAND.

Christmas Trade Report.

After a week of zero weather Christmas week opened up very warm indeed, the thermometer ranging from 28 to 40 degrees, beginning on Monday, thereby relieving the trade of the necessity of wrapping all plants before delivery. I have not heard from all the stall owners at the market, but those whom I have talked with report trade very satisfactory. The sales seemed to be very largely of cut flowers, although nice plants that could be sold for 25 cents to $1 each found ready sale. It is a hard matter to say what plants sold best, although primroses, cyclamen, rubbers, Boston ferns and berried plants for market sales were not in much demand. Decorated wreaths sold well, as did loose holly, but holly wreaths were almost a dead letter. The demand for holly seems to be on the wane. Ground pine was used extensively for wreaths and when decorated with cape flowers, pompons and well-berried holly sold well.

Most all the stores did a rushing plant business, azaleas and poinsettias seeming to be in the lead as to call and quantity, although large, well-berried solanums sold well. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine was a good seller, but could not be had in quantity, a great many being shipped in. In decorative plants, Pandanus Veitchii, araucarias and Boston ferns took the lead.

There was a great deal more plant decorating done this Christmas than ever before, and it took very well. Some stores used a great deal of Porto Rican matting, while others confined themselves to crepe paper. There have been a great many large receptions this winter that have called for the use of a great many poinsettias and American Beauty roses in order to get the desired effects. At the majority of these receptions artificial flowers were used, and in a great many instances they passed for the "real thing."

A. Graham & Son report a large trade in pot plants, Azaleas, three varieties in full bloom, and poinsettias in pots and pans from eight inches to two and one-half feet high. They had a great many carnations, but not enough for the demand.

D. Hart reports large sales in plants; his primroses and cyclamen were extra fine. He also had a good sale for Boston Ferns in all sizes.

A. Schmitt, of Glenville, had a general line of plants and was well cleaned up on salable stock; he had the largest display of mums seen here.

The J. M. Gasser Co. report large sales on all kinds of stock, both plants and cut flowers. Their carnations were just right, and one house of Beauties was a sight; every plant had from three to five shoots and each had produced a flower, most of them being long stemmed.

William Brinker reports all cleaned up on greens and holly; also pretty well sold out of capes, immortelles and pompons.

A. Tilton & Son had a big run on wreaths and laurel roping, and also on imported green wreaths; in fact, they are cleaned up on all imported stock.

S. N. Pentecost had a fine lot of very large, well berried solanums, which sold at sight. Also azaleas that were well bloomed and some very nice primroses. His two houses of carnations gave a very good account of themselves, furnishing all the flowers he could handle for his retail trade.

Prices ranged here about as elsewhere. The general opinion is that there was an increase of 20 to 35 per cent in the volume of business done.

Fred Aul was taken to a hospital, where an operation was performed for appendicitis. He is getting along nicely.

Beno Hart, son of H. Hart, is improving very slowly.

The Cleveland Florist Club will give a banquet to the members next Monday evening, January 6, to which all are invited.

A. Graham is putting in a great deal of time curling these days.

TENEP.

THE CHRISTMAS TRADE.

UTICA, N. Y.—Christmas trade this year was fully up to the standard of other years. Supply generally below the demand. Roses, carnations and violets in short supply. Good fair-sized flowering plants in good demand. Large and high priced plants neglected. Holly short of demand. Orchids all retailed at high prices.

PEORIA, ILL.—The fine warm weather was perfect for a good Christmas trade, and there was a heavy demand for pot plants, which could be delivered in open wagons. Holly was in heavy demand and there was a good call for wild smilax. In cut flowers roses were most in demand, especially red. Liberty sold for $2 to $4 a dozen; Beauties, $3 to $15; tea roses, $2 to $3; carnations, 75 cents to $1. Slow sale on bulb stuff. The florists were all busy and happy.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—Christmas sales were at least 25 per cent larger than last year, and not enough flowers to fill orders. First class roses were scarce, but carnations were more plentiful and of a better quality than last year. Bulb stock was not so much called for, as the demand is largely for colored flowers. Plants were asked for, but mostly in the decorative line, though plenty of small flowering plants could be sold had we had them. Could have sold twice as many roses and carnations had we had them.

SPARTA, ILL.—H. O. Clendenin reports Christmas trade as very good, even exceeding expectations.

SHARON, PA.—M. I. O'Brien reports Christmas trade as very satisfactory. Prices were about the same as last year, but the demand was much greater, especially for carnations of good ordinary grade, which sold at 75 cents to $1.00 a dozen. Brides, Maids and Perles were $2.00 to $3.00 a dozen. The demand for holly was double that of any previous year, particularly for wreaths. Plant trade was not so good as last year, though the weather was all that could be desired for the purpose. Sharon has nearly 100,000 square feet of glass, devoted mostly to carnations, some roses and general stock, and with a population of 15,000 is mostly a wholesale town, shipping to Pittsburg and Cleveland, hence during holidays like Christmas, Easter, etc., there is usually a flower famine, as the regular wholesale trade must get its usual quantity of flowers, leaving only the ordinary every day quantity to supply home trade.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS.—Mark Aitkin reports the Christmas trade in cut flowers as about equal to last year excepting violets, of which he sold 2,000 more than last year. In flowering plants sales were more than doubled, which was quite an item, making up an increase of 20 per cent in the total business done. Fairfield reports business about the same, with plant trade not so heavy and more call for large flowers, such as mums, lilies, etc. Schlatter says there was more call for plants with him and about the same number of cut flowers as last year. Murphy Floral Co. our new florist, says he did a better trade than he expected. In fact every florist reports cut flowers cleaned out and not much left over in plants. All are satisfied.

WAYNESBORO, PA.—Henry Eichholz reports the best Christmas trade in plants in the history of the town, but cut flower sales were slow on account of high prices. Everybody sold out clean hereabouts. Well flowered azaleas, Lorraine begonias and primroses were the favorites, while ferns, palms and asparagus were in brisk demand.

NEW LONDON, CONN.—The John Spalding Co. report: "Christmas trade with us was very good, having sold many more flowers and plants than ever before here at any Christmas. The call for flowers and plants was about equal, with Begonia Lorraine leading in plants, and Boston fern a close second. Large funeral orders in addition on Tuesday kept all hands busy until long after midnight. Holly wreaths sold out clean; could have sold many more at good prices."

RICHMOND, VA.—M. A. Whitty reports Christmas trade very satisfactory. Cold weather and rain kept back orders until the last day and caused something of a rush in deliveries extending into Christmas morning. More plants were seen—azaleas, begonias, cyclamen, etc., and one prominent store sold Gloire de Lorraine begonias at 50 cents, while others asked $2.50. Beauties brought from $4 to $6, other roses $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Carnations 75 cents to $1.00 per dozen. Violets $1.50 to $2 per 100. Only one store made a specialty of the fancy carnations and sold nearly 2,500. The market trade ran heavier than last year, and almost as many plants were sold as at the stores.

FARGO, N. D.—Shotwell & Graver report the Christmas demand as fully equal to that of last year, with about the same prices. They noted an increased demand for primroses, ferns and palms.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—H. N. Hoffman reports Christmas trade as showing an increase of perhaps 10 per cent over last year, mostly in cut flowers. All good violets, carnations and roses moved freely at good prices. Not much increase in the sales of plants. Primroses, cyclamen, Begonia incarnata and Gloire de Lorraine, Romans in pans, poinsettias and a few azaleas sold readily.

HUNTINGTON, IND.—George Pastor reports Christmas trade as excellent, with a notable increase in sales of plants.

AURORA, ILL.—J. M. Smely reports Christmas trade as very satisfactory, and about 20 per cent larger than last year. Prices about the same, except on carnations, which sold at higher prices, and they were of better quality than ever before. Estelle brought the highest price, selling for the same price as roses. Everything salable was sold, in both cut flowers and plants.

HASTINGS, NEB.—The Christmas trade in cut flowers was exceptionally good, but owing to the extreme cold weather (20 degrees below zero at one time) the plant trade has been only fair. The Dillenbeck Sisters, who are just starting in the business here, have built a greenhouse 16x70 and are now putting in the heater. Charles Winkler reports trade as very satisfactory. He contemplates a trip to Chicago in the near future.

MACOMB, ILL.—Christmas trade here was the best we have ever had. Plants sold better than ever before. Roses and carnations were in good supply, although the death of a prominent citizen on the 23d ran us a little short. We cannot get city prices here, so have to depend on our own crops principally. Roses sold at $1.50 per dozen; carnations at 75 cents and $1. F. E. Bonham has purchased the greenhouses and ground which he has been conducting on a lease for three years. He has taken a partner and the firm will be hereafter known as F. E. Bonham & Co. The new firm has purchased glass to build two new houses the coming summer.

FAIRMOUNT, W. VA.—H. Glenn Fleming reports a very good Christmas trade. Sales of pot plants were very large, especially of palms and ferns. Owing to its being very cold (at about zero for three days) just before Christmas, it was difficult to deliver, but sold all that we could offer. Cut flowers sold well, and, though the people here don't call for 36-inch stem Beauties, many fine roses and carnations were sold.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—L. E. Marquisee reports Christmas trade as at least 25 per cent larger than last year. Carnations were in greatest demand, with short supply, and they sold at $1 to $2.50 per dozen, the latter being the highest price ever obtained in this city. Violets sold readily at $3 per 100. Brides and Maids averaged $3 per dozen, and Beauties $1 to $2 each. The supply of blooming plants was not equal to the demand. Azaleas were soon cleaned out and what little bulbous stuff was in sold readily. The greatest demand for any single flower was for red carnations, which sold at $2 per dozen.

FREEPORT, ILL.—Louis Bauscher reports Christmas trade brisk, with an increasing demand for both plants and cut flowers. He received a profitable Christmas gift in the opening of a new street car line which runs by his greenhouses and which gives two lines by which his place may be reached by patrons from all over the city. He wishes all in the trade a happy New Year and a prosperous one for the REVIEW.

SAVANNA, ILL.—J. Y. Lambert reports Christmas trade in cut flowers fully 25 per cent better than last year. A few belated Marie Louise chrysanthemums sold well. Little was done in greens.

DUBUQUE, IA.—W. A. Harkett reports Christmas trade as 15 per cent better than last year, with plenty of stock in the leaders. Colored carnations were most called for (a red Lawson is much needed). The weather was favorable for delivery (temperature 38 to 40 degrees) and saved much work.

EAST WEYMOUTH, MASS.—J. P. Ford reports Christmas trade as quite good considering the times. A. A. Spear & Son have just completed a new house about 30x100.

ST. PAUL.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade in the Saintly City was about equal to last year in volume, but hardly up to expectations and nearly all of the store men and some of the growers had stock left over.

Weather conditions were ideal both for the growers and the retailers. The weather up to the 21st was intensely cold but bright, conducive to the best blooms. The 22d, 23d and 24th were clear and mild, just the proper weather for the shoppers, as well as for the safe delivery of plants and flowers. Nearly all the growers had a full crop of roses and carnations and better blooms were never grown or seen here. The home supply was the largest and best ever grown in St. Paul.

In the line of plants there was a good supply of azaleas, cyclamen, primroses, cinerarias, etc. In the newer things were seen Begonia Lorraine and dwarf peppers in fruit. Some very good poinsettias were also on the market and sold well, showing that this old favorite, if properly grown, still finds a place and welcome with the flower buyers.

Holly was in short supply and of only medium quality. Some very choice stock came in by express from Milwaukee at the last moment and helped to brighten many a home with its fine foliage and cheerful red berries. Lycopodium, which was apparently very scarce earlier in the season, was quite plentiful toward the last and considerable stock is left over. People seem to have tired of this article, as sales were smaller than in previous years. Mistletoe was plentiful and of choicest quality. The bulk of the stock shipped here came from Texas. Immortelles were used sparingly, while the red Christmas berries used so extensively in some sections were not seen at all.

Prices at retail were about the same, as in previous years. Carnations sold at $1 to $2 per dozen, while a few Lawsons were held as high as $2.50. Roses sold at $2.50 to $5, the former being for Brides, the latter for Liberty. The bulk of the stock, however, sold at $3 to $4. American Beauties were in fairly good demand at $10 to $18 per dozen. Violets sold at $4 per 100. Romans and paper whites at 50c to 75c per dozen. Azaleas averaged $2 each; begonias $1.50 to $2.50 each. Palms were in good demand, especially the medium priced ones, while good Bostons went quickly.

A local paper printed an article a few days before Christmas calling attention in large headlines to the "High Price of Cut Flowers and Blooming Plants for Christmas." The article was the product of a fertile imagination, as but few if any facts were stated. It was news matter, but was as bad as a display advertisement advising people not to purchase flowers nor to patronize florists unless they wished to be robbed.

Notes.

A. S. Swanson has opened a nice, neat, tidy store on Grand avenue, right in the best residence portion of the city.

L. L. May & Co. had a very fine display of blooming plants in their store and conservatory.

Holm & Olsen had their usual complement of good things and were kept very busy.

R. C. Seeger had an immense cut of choice stock, including Beauties, Liberty, Maids and Brides. X. Y. Z.

BEGONIA LORRAINE.

Please tell us how to treat Begonia Gloire de Lorraine from now up to taking cuttings. W. G.

After this begonia is through blooming keep it in a temperature of 50 degrees and give no more water than is necessary to keep it from shriveling. Shake out and start up about May 1 in a sweet, sandy soil, well drained, in a brisk heat of 65 to 70 degrees, and keep well shaded. Art.

ERIE, PA.

Flowers were in great demand for Christmas, but owing to the cloudy weather preceding the day they were very scarce and prices good.

Good roses sold for $2.50, $3.00 and $3.50 a dozen. Beauties, $8.00 to $18.00 a dozen. Carnations, 75 cents to $1.50 a dozen. Violets, $3.00 per 100. Lots of funeral work used up the small flowers.

The greenhouses owned by Fred Harmer were burned during the zero weather and none of the plants were saved. V.

Report of Christmas Trade.

The Christmas trade was fully up to the average in volume and complaints are few. The day before Christmas was inspiring, clear, bright and tonic weather, giving animation and zest to shoppers. The market men did well and the stores were all up to and above the normal mark. The trade in plants was better probably than last year, but the disposition is less towards palms and more now to flowering kinds. Of course there were exceptions.

Some injury was done by the statements of the daily papers as to the probable high prices flowers would command. Many people were frightened off from purchasing, and some dealers were afraid to lay in stock. At some stores it was said that prices, in fact, were too high for the great class of people of moderate means, who make up the bulk of buyers.

The supply of roses, carnations and violets was ample for all requirements. Of inferior violets there were more than the market would absorb. Some fault was found with the scarcity of carnations on Saturday and Monday and the great flood of them on Tuesday morning.

The Florists' Exchange, which finds its new quarters far more convenient for transacting business than the old, reports fair business, carnations selling at from 3 to 6 cents; tea roses 8 to 12 cents, and violets $1.50 per 100. More Beauties could have been placed to advantage.

Late Christmas eve telephone offers of stock were received from Washington and Philadelphia by some of the stores.

Some of the trade summarized the business done as follows:

William J. Halliday—"About equal to most years; good stuff in demand." John Cook—"Beat the record; never had so large and satisfactory a Christmas; plants and flowers abundant." James Pentland—"About the average." Halliday Bros.—"Largest business ever done at the season, taxing all energies of the whole staff to dispatch it. Stuff ample in supply and of fine quality." Isaac H. Moss—"Did very satisfactory trade. Cut flowers could scarcely have come in better, and plants were in active demand. Begonia Lorraine was made a specialty this year and was very acceptable." E. A. Seidewitz—"Trade very satisfactory, plants, baskets and cut flowers all being briskly sought for. No complaint to find either as to demand or the materials to meet it." Mrs. Patterson-Johnson—"Fine trade, all the resources of the establishment being required to get the numerous orders filled in time and to the satisfaction of buyers. Flowers were sufficient for calls, except, perhaps, Beauties."

Samuel Feast & Sons—"Business quite up to the average, except in plants, which did not go as heretofore. Ample supply for every order." This firm believes, however, that holiday prices have gotten too high. A number of their regular customers suggested that it "was hardly worth while to ask the price of roses." John Berl found sales below the average, both in plants and flowers. Figures above ordinary prices scare customers away.

J. H. Siddons found trade moderate—not up to last year in any direction, plants, flowers or evergreens. He handled the latter class of goods very largely and felt the loss resulting from the disuse of decorations by storekeepers. Many of the department and other large stores which have been in the habit of festooning their interiors with wreathing, etc., stopped the custom this Christmas on account of its inhibition by the insurance companies, who regard the risk of their use as hazardous. R.

PITTSBURG.

PRESENTATION TO JOHN W. JONES, FOREMAN AT THE PHIPPS CONSERVATORIES.—In the afternoon of the day before Christmas the gardeners, florists and other workmen in and about the conservatories presented Mr. Jones with a very handsome timepiece and umbrella as a mark of their esteem for himself as a man and his uprightness and vigor as a foreman. Mr. Jones came to Schenley Park from the World's Fair, Chicago, in 1893, as an assistant foreman, and soon after Superintendent Falconer came here, he advanced Mr. Jones to the head foremanship. Mr. Falconer's opinion of Mr. Jones is this: "John is a good man, his soul is in his work and he is forever at work, and he does good work, and everybody under him has to work, and he is absolutely trustworthy, and true and straight as an arrow to those under him and over him, and he minds his own business and nobody else's."

PRESENTATION TO WILLIAM FALCONER, SUPERINTENDENT OF PARKS.—On Christmas eve a committee consisting of the head foremen (outdoor, conservatories and mechanics) and sergeant of police, and representing their associate workmen in Schenley Park, waited upon Supt. Falconer at his residence and presented him with a magnificent mahogany arm chair and a gold fountain pen as a token of their respect for himself personally and his square dealing with every one connected with the parks.

CRESTON, IA.—E. A. Stahl has sold a half interest in his cut flower store to McGregor Bros. and the firm name will be McGregor Bros. & Stahl. He reports a good trade for both Christmas and New Year's and fine weather.

Christmas Trade.

The Christmas trade in flowers and plants was the largest of any yet. Choice plants beautifully trimmed with Porto Rican matting or handsome baskets filled with plants were in the lead and in much demand. The call for Beauties was great, and as there were not enough grown here for the demand, a good many were shipped in. Of other flowers there was a good supply, such as roses, carnations, poinsettia, etc. The poinsettia being such a brilliant Christmas flower undoubtedly attracts more attention than any of the others, especially at this time of the year, for the roses and carnations we have always, but these, like the New Year's good resolutions, come but once a year. As an example of their brilliancy one should have seen the window of the Park Floral store one evening just before Christmas, when it was given up entirely to the poinsettia, and it was no wonder that the throng bent on sight-seeing and holiday buying would stop and gaze at them.

The Colfax Floral Co. say they cut over 10,000 carnation blooms for Christmas, and with their immense trade it kept the boys hustling to keep up with their orders, and the foreman, Bob Kient, lost twenty-five pounds in three days.

The plants of azaleas and cyclamen as shown in Denver this year were far ahead of any previous year and sold rapidly at from $2 to $6 each. All the florists were worked hard, had plenty of stock, sold out everything and are consequently happy. THORNE.

HOWARD'S STAR PETUNIAS.

I was pleased to see in the last issue of the REVIEW your note about this petunia. It is a beautiful thing. I have grown it for two years, and I find it does well in a light soil and slightly shaded. Also I find a little care must be exercised in selecting plants for stock, owing to its sportive character.

DETROIT.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade has been very good in all lines this year, and the florists have every reason to congratulate themselves upon their share of it, the weather from Sunday on being fine and warm enough to handle stock without much wrapping.

The retailers report in almost every case that Begonia Gloire de Lorraine was the best selling plant in bloom, with cyclamen a close second, Breitmeyer using a great many of the latter up in baskets, of which he sold a great number. B. Schroeter reports that cyclamen in blooming plants, and Boston ferns, the two best sellers, and carnations leading in cut flowers. Sullivan says Lorraines and carnations, with violets second, were his best, but says that in all his experience trade was never better in the two weeks preceding Christmas, and that people bought plants very largely in advance of the holiday.

Asman & Dunn sold out entirely, with a very fine lot of Lorraine, Boston ferns and carnations as leaders. Taepke reports Boston ferns a leader of palms two to one, with the taste of the buyers largely running to plants in lieu of cut flowers. Schaible & Stock and Detroit Floral Co. feel sorry that Christmas comes but once a year, and are well satisfied with trade.

Club Notes.

At the first regular meeting in December, Mr. Rackham, the president, tendered his resignation, but the club refused to accept it and it looks as if the old man would still have to keep his harness on.

There is every indication of a larger delegation of members attending the carnation meeting in February, and they will go with the determination to secure the next meeting for Detroit, that is if some of the brethren like Scott and Weber will let the Bs alone (now that the society has visited Buffalo, Baltimore and then going away down the alphabet to I) and vote to return to the only D worth considering, for it stands for Detroit, that sends larger delegations to all conventions than any city of its size in the union. So take due notice and govern yourselves accordingly.

Trade Notes.

The past Christmas was a very successful one, but whether there was an increase over last Christmas I cannot say. Everything good was disposed of and no more could be expected. There was not quite such a heavy cut of cut blooms as there should have been on account of the cold wave, which struck us just ten days before Christmas and lasted all the week. In plants there was the usual variety of poinsettias, azaleas, hyacinths and begonias, and of the latter there were some fine Gloire de Lorraine at several places. This is without doubt one of the best Christmas plants and is sure to stay with us.

The only complaints we hear are from Tomlinson Flower Market, where they complain that trade has been about as poor as it has ever been. The store men, however, all say that business is very good.

Prices ruled about the same as usual at holiday time and have dropped a trifle since, as New Year's does not amount to a great deal to the florists in this city.

Baur & Smith had an experience during the recent cold wave which they are not likely to forget very soon. On Saturday night their steam water pump, which supplies the water for the place, froze and bursted, with the water tank only about one-half full, which was all used up before the necessary repairs could be made. They were obliged to haul water two days and nights to supply the boilers, and while they were filling up one boiler they kept the steam up with the other. They have learned the value of having two medium sized boilers, rather than one large one, as they surely would have been frozen out had they only had one boiler. Now they have a hand force pump on hand right along, so that even if the steam pump gets out of order they can still get water for the boilers.

No freezeouts are to be reported, but several of the growers had all they could do to keep the houses warm.

A. B.

SHAMROCKS.

Some grow this sweet little gem of the Emerald Isle into nice compact plants in poor soil and ashes enriched by bone meal. The seed germinates freely and if sown in late spring the plants can be lifted and potted in the fall and in a very low temperature make handsome plants by St. Patrick's Day.

The plants are much in demand on that day and sales would be much larger than they are if florists would more generally carry it in stock and let the public know that the real thing was to be had.

MILWAUKEE.

Christmas Trade.

The florists all seem to be happy, perhaps not entirely due to the generosity of Santa Claus, but in a great measure due to the unprecedented Christmas business. Customers even invaded the show windows and some of the down town stores looked as if a cyclone had struck them after the rush of business was over. J. M. Fox and the M. A. McKenney Co. had hundreds of holly wreaths made up, but the unexpected demand cleaned them out early in the day. Peter Kapsalis is now banking in two banks; says he cannot afford to take chances on only one since Christmas. The Baumgarten Floral Co. put on an extra force to handle the final rush.

The market, which is usually headquarters for blooming plants, was a busy place and the various florists located there are well satisfied and felt fortunate in having mild and favorable weather for deliveries. Max Reitz, Steward Floral Co., Haasch and Machcrey, all north side florists, report sales in excess of former years.

Considering reports of condition of holly in other markets the grade of holly in this market must have been fully equal to if not ahead of the general supply, for few complaints have been registered.

The demand for carnations, especially for fancy sorts, was extremely heavy, and one can hardly fail to note that this flower when grown right is steadily gaining in popular favor and making serious inroads into the sale of roses. Good Cranes and Lawsons commanded nearly as good figures as prevailing varieties of roses with the exception of red. Violets were way below demand.

Shipping trade was unusually large, but owing to the express companies being overcrowded, much difficulty was experienced in getting flowers on proper trains, especially on short orders. The way boxes of flowers are tossed around at the depots during the holiday rush it is not at all surprising to get complaints from purchasers about the number of heads broken off.

Notes.

The year 1901 seemed very progressive in this locality. Somewhere about 150,000 to 200,000 feet of glass was put up, making this market less dependent on Chicago shippers than heretofore. Some plans are already being made for 1902. H. W. Koerner has purchased fifteen acres of ground and having disposed of his Bay View plant, will break ground for a new range early in the spring. C. C. Pollworth Co. contemplate some new additions and to devote most of their present old place to palms, ferns and decorative stock. Currie Bros. are also figuring on erecting several houses in Wauwatosa. Chas. Zepnick has been seriously ill with pneumonia, but seems now to be on the way to recovery. Incog.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, report a large increase in the sale of their greenhouse boilers during the past year. They have shipped boilers to both the Pacific and Atlantic coasts, to Canada, and as far south as Oklahoma. They are naturally much pleased with the growth of their business, which indicates that their boiler gives good satisfaction.

Christmas Items.

The florists here have all done a fine business, with an increase over any other season. Stocks of plants and cut flowers, which were in the minority Christmas Eve, were eagerly sought for on Christmas morning, and many florists had to refuse orders, being sold out.

Prices: Brides, Maids and Golden Gates brought from $2 to $3; Beauties ranged from $6 to $18; Carnations from 75 cents to $1.50 per dozen, and fancies higher; Violets, 75 cents upwards per bunch.

Potted plants were called for very liberally, as the weather was so they could be handled with safety.

Hess & Swoboda disposed of a fine lot of azaleas and quantities of cut flowers.

Lewis Henderson had a fine display of poinsettias and did a good business.

Peterson Bros.' windows were finely decorated, cyclamen being the main feature.

A. Donaghue displayed good taste, as his windows looked very inviting, being tastefully arranged.

S. B. Stewart had a large stock on hand and made a fine showing of cut flowers and florists' supplies.

Christie & Paulsen report a good trade at good prices.

S. F. Faulkner, of 40th and Leavenworth streets, had a fine lot of roses and violets on the market.

Last but by no means least, our neighbor, J. F. Wilcox, did a rushing wholesale business, along with his retail trade, and deserves credit for his tastefully arranged store and well managed greenhouses.

George Swoboda has a new helper at his home—a fine boy—whom he is training already to follow in his papa's footsteps as an expert florist and bowler.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

Christmas Trade.

It was a cut flower Christmas, with a good increase in sales in nearly all lines of stock. Cut flowers were the most sought for, and while the supply was insufficient the quality was excellent. Prices were high, yet the public bought liberally, a good indication that people generally are well supplied with the necessary. The best Brides and Maids retailed at $4 per doz.; violets at $4 per hundred, and carnations, fancy grades, from $1 to $2 per doz.

We were never better supplied with flowering plants for the Christmas trade than this year. The biggest man on the heap was Samuel Murray, whose store and conservatory were filled with a gorgeous display. The Begonia Lorraine, decorated with the Porto Rican matting, which sold for $10 each, headed the list in plant sales. The poinsettia, grown extensively here now, and which is rapidly growing in favor in this market, took second place. Those grown in pans sold better than the single potted plants. There were plenty of azaleas, and they all went at $3 and $5 each.

Mr. Murray got his entire supply of cut flowers from that big city on Lake Michigan, and says that in quality and length of stems he has never seen the like since he has been engaged in business. We have always had to depend on a foreign market for our best supply, and the Chicago commission houses realize that we have a great and growing market and nothing but the best grade of stock will suffice.

During the week preceding Christmas we experienced a few days of real winter, but fortunately on Sunday it departed as suddenly as it came. To the florist an open Christmas would seem to have its advantages and disadvantages. A falling off in the sales of holly and other green material was noticeable, while the sales of cut flowers and blooming plants exceeded our fullest expectations.

The American Beauty has always been a good seller here, and Arthur Newell, whose nerve never fails him when a millionaire enters his store, got $30 for one dozen just before sitting down to a big dinner on Christmas day.

The Rock-Heite Company was strictly in it at the right time on carnations, and several hundred of the best blooms are cut daily from this new establishment and retailed at Mr. Rock's two downtown stores.

The general impression of the craft is that the Christmas trade of 1901 was more profitable and handled with better satisfaction than in any previous year in the history of the trade here.

A Decoration.

Samuel Murray arranged a very beautiful decoration for the annual banquet of the Commercial Club at the Coates House.

The ceiling, walls and pillars of the dining room were loosely covered with wild smilax, relieved by clusters of poinsettias. The table centerpieces consisted of flat baskets of American Beauties and Farleyense ferns and bunches of carnations pinned to the tablecloth.

The next morning one of the distinguished guests of the evening called upon Mr. Murray and personally complimented him upon the decorations.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade was the heaviest by 100 per cent, is what they all say, and judging from the looks of the stores after the sales were over we have no doubt of the truth of the statements.

Following is all we could gather from the stores at the time of our call for notes: Ernst Nitshe—"Oh, can't you see that I am busy? Plants? Not half enough: could sell more cut flowers; greens are selling well; several small decorations: here, take this cigar and go; come when I'm not so busy." Otto Lang—"Plants scarce; shall not have enough cut flowers; any old thing in flowers sells today; greens sell well; good demand for flower baskets and boxes of flowers; mistletoe no good; boys selling it all over the streets." The Texas Seed & Floral Co. reported business as double that of last year; blooming plants scarce; demand for greens good and everything will be sold out long before closing time. Mrs. Holtkamp had a rush and could have sold many more plants could she have gotten them; demand for cut flowers was much over the supply; she had quite a lot of funeral work also. By the way, her daughter has the reputation of being one of the best designers in the city. The Haskell Ave. Floral Co. did a rushing business in the wholesale line and had everything in sight cut, packed and off their hands before 10 o'clock Christmas morning. "Oh!" says Beach, "I am glad I am not in the retail business today."

The weather was delightful; 70 degrees of warmth and everyone out on parade—except the florists.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade was all that could be desired, except perhaps the impossibility to fill all orders. Red carnations were in the usual heavy demand, selling at from 75 cents to $2 per dozen. Roses, outside of American Beauties, sold from $1.50 to $3. Violets were more abundant than usual, No. 1 commanding $3 per hundred; inferior $2. Romans were plenty, selling at 50 cents a dozen.

Cyclamen plants were in good demand, bringing 50 cents to $2.50 each. Christmas peppers came in for their share at $1.50. Azaleas, except white, sold well, and Begonia Gloire de Lorraine made up in pans went like hot cakes, although the supply was equal to the demand, owing to the fact that a great many know its uselessness as a house plant.

Carnations other than red sold well also, Lawson bringing $1.50; Prosperity $3. On the whole the florists reaped a good harvest, as is evidenced by the broad smiles worn by them. When they open their mouths to laugh their heads are half off.

Mr. E. A. NELSON, Dear Sir:—The "Nelson" cuttings you sent me for trial made excellent growth, both in the field and since housing, showing health and vigor. The stem is fine and the bloom and color all that can be desired. I consider the "Nelson" a splendid commercial variety. Wishing you success. Yours truly, FRED BURKI.

ST. PAUL.

Christmas is over and everybody, buyer and seller, is only too glad it is. We, the florists of St. Paul, are all satisfied. Business was first-rate; everything went. "Everything sold," was the unison watchword to-day. Roses came in just enough to cover demands; could have sold many more carnations could they have been obtained. The very cold spell just before Christmas checked the flowering stock considerably, but ever since the weather has been "just lovely."

The retailers, with Holm & Olson on top, are merely plundered out. The above mentioned firm sold a tremendous lot of cut flowers and plants, and their smiles next day almost extended from one ear to the other.

L. L. May & Co. had the finest stock of cut flowers and plants they ever had, all out of their own greenhouses, and grown by the most careful foreman, Frank Gustavson.

Charles Vogt, who has a reputation for well made holly wreaths and greens, did a fine business. So did his brother August, the St. Anthony Hill florist, whose line is fancy cut flowers, such as Beauties and swell carnations.

The Ramaley Floral Exchange, which deals extensively in Christmas trees, is out a few dollars because that stuff was so plentiful. There is enough left over to cover the Mississippi river for miles.

Potted plants of certain varieties didn't sell well; especially Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, primroses, Harrisiis, etc. Azaleas, poinsettias and violets sold fine, and good palms and Bostons went like wild-fire. Birch bark boats, canoes, logs, etc., being a novelty in this town, sold readily. Quite a few cut mums were brought in. C. Bussjaeger had a couple of hundred to show which were mostly Yanoma, a good late white, Murdoch and Charity in pink. All the yellow kinds left were overdue and rotten.

All the boys are very active again getting ready for Easter, and hurry up with your lilies and hydrangeas, gentlemen; hardly three months' time is allowed by the calendar this year.

Wishing you, Mister Editor, and all the boys a Happy New Year and successful business all around, I am

Yours truly, C. Bussjaeger.

BERLIN, ONT.

The holiday trade in this town was considerably larger than in former years, and would have been much larger but for the scarcity of carnations—the popular flower; all were sold at 75 cents (60 cents was the highest price obtainable formerly) but the supply gave out early on Tuesday. Roses sold at $2.25 to $3 and were in fair demand, stocks being cleaned up by night. Several orders for funeral designs had to be refused on Tuesday for want of material. Violets sold at 40 cents and 45 cents. Roman hyacinths, 50 cents; valley, 75 cents. Not much money in these prices, as the trade in a town of this size is comparatively small, and wholesale prices were sky high.

Plant trade altogether very good. Boston ferns had a great run; palms, fair; cyclamen, good; azaleas, very few.

BUTTE, MONT.

Christmas Trade.

This city is not as prosperous at present as it has been in the past, but nevertheless never before has this camp seen such a splurge in the flower business.

Law Bros. report business good. State Nursery say they did well. The Butte Floral Co. tripled their business of last year. They had hundreds of cyclamen and azaleas, which found a ready sale, especially when decorated. Never before has such a quantity of ribbons been used in this section. The demand for cut flowers was greater than the supply. The B. F. Co. cut 3,000 carnations at their Gregson plant, and with a force of eight at the store it was almost impossible to handle the rush.

All the florists report exceptionally good luck with deliveries. Few orders were lost. Every one had to be well wrapped on account of the extremely cold weather. The window decorations were more elaborate than usual. The State Nursery had a window of plants. Law Bros. had their window done in holly and vases of mums, the blooms being very fine for this time of the year. The Butte Floral Co. had their large window beautifully arranged. The top was a canopy of holly with a chime of six bells of different sizes swinging in different directions, caught up with huge crimson French bows. The bottom was tastefully arranged with decorated azaleas and cyclamens, some boxes handsomely tied with ribbons, and a large vase of fine poinsettias, of which last some 3,000 were disposed of.

It was ideal holiday weather, with fine sleighing, but the day after Christmas we were visited by a severe snowstorm, almost a cyclone. Trade the past week has been better than expected, quite a few functions being on.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

With many of us a large job just now is shifting our zonal geraniums from 2 or 2½-inch to 3-inch pots. This is not much of a shift, but if a little of the soil is rubbed off the top it is sufficient and makes a wonderful change in the plant. They occupy considerable more room after this, but you have got the room and they need it. As I have often remarked, the stuff that we are sometimes obliged to buy from other cities under the name of geraniums is a miserable apology for this popular plant. No doubt there are plenty of men who know how to grow them well, but they have an idea that there is not enough money in them to give them a good light house and proper space. And another class, however proficient in their specialty, know nothing about the requirements of this indispensable plant.

A very excellent man and large grower of all kinds of plants, on being asked if he grew geraniums for spring sales, answered: "Oh, yes; we keep them under the bench till along in February and March." If he had said he kept his Pandanus Veitchii beneath the bench it would have been just as reasonable. Mind, I am not finding fault with those who grow rubbers and pandanus and crotons and kentias and neglect geraniums, because the former are much more profitable to them, but to those who have a good retail demand for geraniums, I say grow them well. A dozen zonal geraniums from 4-inch pots in the month of May at $1.50 per dozen, if managed well and not occupying a great space, or the 4-inch pot till after the Easter crops are disposed of, is quite as profitable as many other plants we grow; for instance, quite as profitable as a house of carnations, however well managed.

Pot geraniums firmly. You want a short, firm growth. A good loam with a fifth of old hotbed manure is all you want, and if you don't have the rotted manure, then a 5-inch pot of bone flour to a wheelbarrow load of the soil will do just as well. Nothing but the lightest bench will grow geraniums well. With the increased root room and the increased light of the season and a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees these young plants will make a growth that will give you a good cutting by the end of February, and by taking the cutting you will have improved the plant, providing you don't cut too low. Always remember that the plant is the thing to consider and don't murder it for the sake of a cutting.

It is well just now to select say a thousand of the strongest plants of good early flowering varieties. Pot these into 3½-inch pots and at once just pinch out the end of the growth. And you might give them the warmest end of the house. By the end of February shift them into 4½ or 5-inch pots and they will be in good flower at Easter. Last Easter we could have sold many such plants to people who pay a visit to the cemeteries or to the little girl who wanted a plant for ma, but had only 25 cents to spend. Anybody wants a well-flowered, pretty geranium.

The bronze and variegated varieties will do better in at least 5 degrees warmer house than the zonals. That most useful of all variegated geraniums, Mme. Salleroi, we usually lift and pot and keep in some cool house, and now is a very good time to pull it to pieces and root the cuttings. If you rooted them in September, don't be shifting them now. They will do till March in 2-inch pots and then can be shifted into a 3-inch, and that's as large as it pays to give them.

I have had too great a variety of subjects to think of lately to notice the new varieties of geranium, and perhaps I have not had an opportunity. Mrs. Frances Perkins is the best semi-double pink. The finest double scarlet we have seen up to date is the grand Le Soliel. A bed of it at the Pan-American, the exhibit of C. W. Ward, was the best bed of scarlet geraniums that we have ever seen. It is the shade of S. A. Nutt, but altogether a better habit. Not a diseased plant in the whole 300, and it has not that failing of Nutt of the inner florets decaying and making the truss look shabby.

Lemon Verbenas and Lantanas.

There are two useful plants that I advised you to grow a few of in pots last summer, and before frost bring them in and stand them beneath a light bench for a rest. They are the Lemon verbena and the lantana. They should now shortly be got up, some of the old soil be shaken off and given a very slight shift, unripened tips of the shoots cut off, and started growing in a warm house. The Lemon verbena roots from the young green growths in a bottom heat of 65 or 70 degrees just as easily as the common verbena, providing you keep the sand wet, and the sun off. The lantana will soon make young growths, which root easily.

Some readers may think it is hardly worth while to write much about a plant so little grown. I have only to say that since the decline of carpet bedding (and it has so declined that it is dead in all well regulated gardens) we must look to these and similar plants to occupy its place. Excuse the allusion once again to the past Pan-American, but one of the prettiest of all beds was a small circle of 10 feet diameter filled with Lantana Craigii, the exhibit of Henry A. Dreer. It flowered from June to frost killing time. It was soothing, chaste and beautiful, and compared to the finest carpet bed was like the rainbow is to the skyrocket or the original statue of the Venus de Medici to a painting of Mrs. Straddles of Chicago, which Mr. Chadwick, also of Chicago, so pleasantly refers to in his "Sunny Memories of Foreign Lands."

A Ball of Lorraine Begonias.

Cyclamen.

Those who sowed cyclamen early in October will now have the little corms as large as peas, and they should be transplanted. They can be put into very small pots, but flats are better. There is less danger of your neglecting them for water and I am sure they make a better and quicker growth, and they will do in the flats very well for the next two months. A night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees will do them very well, and at this time of year all the light you can give them. There is no plant cultivated that needs the old maxim, "Eternal vigilance," etc., more constantly applied than in the care of the cyclamen. And yet there is not any difficulty or science about it except a continuous avoidance of neglect. Never let them get killing dry, never let them be infested with aphis or thrip. These are the two principal things to look out for. Cyclamen, like all the rest of our plants, are less particular about quality or texture of soil than we think they are, but they do like real leaf-mould, viz., leaves that have been collected and thrown in a heap and turned frequently for two years; that is leaf-mould.

The cyclamen is no new plant in popular favor. It has been grown for 50 years to my knowledge, but it is yet grown but sparsely compared to its worth. To me it is so far ahead of a Gloire de Lorraine begonia that there is no comparison. The latter is all right for a special decoration, but as a plant for the house, either singly or a number of moderate sized plants in a basket at the holidays, the cyclamen is a gem, and loved by all.

A BALL OF BEGONIAS.

The engraving on page 215 is from a photograph of a ball filled with Begonia Gloire de Lorraine as described in our Philadelphia notes in last issue. It was designed and executed by William Tricker, of Henry A. Dreer, and the firm sold quite a number for the Christmas trade. The wire frame was 10 inches in diameter, and, as can be seen by the photograph, the effect was most excellent.

CARNATION NOTES.

Propagating.

If you haven't already got your main batch of carnation cuttings in the sand you should lose no time in getting them in. Of course, you can get good plants from later propagations, but for early planting, and if you want to have good, bushy plants to house by August, it is high time they were started. You will also find much less trouble in rooting the cuttings now than you will in a month or two. The sun is weak now and there is very little wilting, but later on, when the sun gets stronger, you will have to continually guard against it and even with the best of care, success is not so certain.

Be sure you select your cuttings carefully so there will be less disease next year than you have among your plants this year. Employ the same method of making up the cuttings and also the propagating bench as I have described in these columns a few weeks ago. I will not repeat it unless some new subscriber to your paper wishes it done.

If you put in your cuttings last month when I first advised you to do so they will be rooting by this time and as soon as they are well rooted you should take them out of the sand. There are several ways of keeping them in a thrifty growing condition until they are planted in the field or on the benches. Perhaps the most economical way is to clear a side bench which is close to the glass and put on it about three inches of good soil and plant the cuttings in this soil from two to three inches apart each way, according to the variety and the length of time they are to remain there. They will make a strong, healthy growth and if pinched properly you can get fine plants this way.

Another way is to make a lot of shallow boxes about three inches deep, fill in about two inches of soil and plant in the cuttings. These can be raised up near the glass on a swinging shelf and they will take up no valuable bench space, but you must watch them closely, as they will dry out rapidly and it will not be so handy to water them. Another advantage is that the boxes can be moved around easily and quickly.

Perhaps the best way, though, is to pot the cuttings up into pots and shift them as they need it. It makes a little more work, but I believe it pays. We found last summer that we were able to lift good balls of earth with those that were planted from 3-inch pots, while those that were planted in flats would not hold the soil at all. The reason was plain enough. The plants were fairly well pot bound in the 3-inch pots and that ball always remained intact although the roots reached out farther around for nourishment and moisture, and when they were dug up the 3-inch ball still remained intact, while on those that were planted from flats there was no ball of earth when they were planted and the dry season did not allow them to make enough roots to hold the soil together, and it all dropped off in the digging. Then, again, those from pots will stand a short dry spell right after being planted much better than will those from flats, as the roots are not disturbed nor exposed so much as on the others, but if they have a good rain or two after planting they will take hold and grow into just as good plants, and if they are not to be taken up in the fall I would just as soon plant from the bench or flats.

Cuttings that are ready to pot now should go into 2-inch pots and later be shifted into 3-inch, but cuttings that are put into the sand now will stand nicely in 2½-inch pots until planting out time. Last year we had a lot of extra strong cuttings and we potted them right into 3-inch pots and I believe it paid us to do it, as they lifted with good sized balls of earth.

Coleus Thyrsoideus.

Vase Plants.

There are one or two common plants used in the spring which if you have not got the old plants lifted for stock you should sow the seed at once. One is Lobelia speciosa; if you don't sow it early you don't get plants large enough to be of use for baskets and vases. Another is lophospermum, a most useful plant for vases and veranda boxes. Sow at once.

Verbenas.

About the end of the month sow verbena seed. Our seedsmen now supply us with seed that produces about as good colors as the named varieties and the seedlings are always healthy and grow freely. And a bed of mixed colored verbenas is far prettier than one of all one color. Flowers of one species, however diversified, always harmonize; that is nature.

COLEUS THYRSOIDEUS.

We are indebted to the firm of Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, for the accompanying illustration of this coleus. It was sent out as a summer flowering sort, but Mr. J. D. Eisele, manager of the Dreer greenhouses, believes it will be most valuable as a winter flowering plant and that its deep blue flowers will make it a very acceptable Christmas plant. Some brief notes on its culture appeared under the heading Riverton on page 190 of our last issue.

BALL DECORATION.

We present in this issue an engraving from a photograph of a decoration arranged by Mrs. C. Eickholt, Galveston, Texas, for the annual Artillery ball in that city.

As will be noted, wild smilax is most effectively and artistically used. The picture makes all details so plain, with possibly the exception of the arrangement of plants on the stage in the background, that any description seems unnecessary.

ROSES.

Seasonable Hints.

Those who have not already got their propagating house in working order had better begin at once. If stock for own planting only is wanted it is time enough to begin propagating at New Year's if the house is large enough to accommodate the quantity of stock required at one propagating, or even with a second batch in February, as there is ample time with good treatment to make nice stocky plants in 3 or 3½-inch pots by the middle of May. These I prefer for my own growing rather than earlier rooted stock.

The benches in the propagating house should be overhauled and put in good order and given a coating of hot lime wash. Select sharp, clean river or pit sand and put on the bench to a depth of four inches, and when pounded firm water thoroughly; it is now ready for the cuttings. Those who have not a propagating house should select a bench in a rose or carnation house where a command of bottom heat can be had, and board up the front and back so as to confine the heat under the bench and bring the temperature of the sand as near 60 degrees as possible, with a house temperature of 50 or 52 degrees, or even a degree or two higher won't hurt much.

In selecting the wood for cuttings, care should be taken to take nothing but the most robust and healthy, passing by all weak, poor or discolored foliage, as on the proper selection of wood depends the health and vigor of the future stock. Whatever kind of a cutting is wanted, single-eyed or two or three-eyed, use a well sharpened knife, making a short, clean cut. Avoid making a long slice, as it takes longer to form a callous and the rootlets do not arrange themselves in such a perfect form as with the smaller cut. Keep the wood moist during the operation and until the cuttings are inserted in the sand.

Take an ordinary butcher knife and make a cut in the sand two inches deep and see that every cutting touches the bottom, as a cutting that is hung has a poor chance to root. Give one good watering to firm the sand around the cuttings. The sand should never be allowed to become dry. Syringe lightly on bright days. Keep the house moderately moist by wetting the paths and shade from bright sunshine. Good shading can be made from very thin cheese cloth and should be removed as soon as the sun ceases to shine on the bench, stock treated in this manner being much superior to that which is rooted entirely in the shade. The temperature of the sand should be kept as near as possible to 60 degrees, with the temperature of the house at 48 to 50 degrees.

Roses Turning Yellow.

S. T. S. writes: "What is the matter with my roses? For the last two or three weeks they have been turning a sickly yellow. It began in one place and is spreading. There was spider in the place where the plants began to turn and I made them quite wet. Thought maybe I had soured the soil. What can I do for them?"

This state of affairs can arise from so many different causes that it would be mere guesswork without more data to ascribe it to anything definite. S. T. S. does not say what varieties he has the trouble with, nor describe his mode of treatment up to the time the trouble began.

The most common cause of yellow foliage at this season is trying to force them along prior to the holidays, and in many cases the plants break down under the strain. It may be a case of overwatering or (from the fact that it is spreading) it may be eel-worm. To determine if this is the cause let S. T. S. carefully lift one of the worst affected plants and wash all the soil from the roots and examine them carefully. If eel-worms are present he will find numerous small tubercles from the size of a rice seed to that of a small pea. These cysts, on being opened and put under a magnifier, will be found to contain twenty or thirty worms, very much resembling eels.

The only remedy for this trouble is to lift every affected plant with the surrounding soil and burn them. After eel-worm has got hold of a plant its doom is sealed.

In the meantime S. T. S. should keep his temperature at 56 degrees nights, 70 degrees on bright days and allow the benches to become moderately dry. By using a Childs nozzle with spoon attachment the syringing can be effectually done with half the volume of water.

Golden Gate.

Since its introduction this rose seems to have held its own and, even according to some growers, it is improving. The lack of grace, deficiency of petalage, sparseness of foliage and want of solidity of color are faults the rosarian sees in it. It has many merits to recommend it to the commercial grower. It is of good constitution, very productive, and last but not least, it is a good seller, and so long as it possesses these qualifications it will continue to be grown in quantity. In its younger stages it very much resembles the old Niphetos, but as it grows older it produces fine, long, straight canes which bear a bud very much of the shape of a good Niphetos, but much larger, the color being a white ground, shading off to a delicate shell pink.

It succeeds well in a temperature of 56 to 62 degrees and being a robust grower requires periodical mulchings, with liquid feeding once a week in bright weather. Being a rapid grower, the foliage, young wood and buds are of a soft texture, making it an especial favorite of greenfly. It is almost free from the attacks of mildew, so much so that on one place I saw it growing vigorously and clean in a house of Brides and Maids that were literally covered with mildew.

Its white sport, Ivory, which at present is being disseminated, promises to fill a long felt want as a summer rose, as it is said not to deteriorate during hot weather. According to the disseminator, the two are identical except in color, and the same treatment suits both.

William Sim.

A SIMPLE SIM-I-LE OF SIM.

Three years ago it gradually dawned upon me that Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, was well up in the front rank among the many who were dabbling in the single violet business, and ever since then he has been swiftly but none the less surely increasing until I feel warranted in nominating him as "Prince of the Princess." I get but little time for foraging expeditions, but his place is near my own home and I borrowed a few hours and loaned them to him a day or two since. Find Morton Ave., Cliftondale. The locality is particularly pleasant, being bounded on one side by the Alps of Malden and by the Lynn Marshes on the other. As you pass down the street, the half-way point is marked by an old cob pipe laid on the fence and at the three-quarter stretch a flock of geese vociferously claim you as a friend if not a relative.

All this time you are nearing 20,000 feet of greenhouse, boiler houses, office, stable and a pretty little dwelling, all seemingly brand new and laid out with extreme regularity into four long houses, side by side, extending almost due west. And it is a magnificent place, far exceeding my expectations. Nothing but single violets, and 10,000 in one house ready to pick at that moment, the daily shipment of 4,000 leaving the three other and smaller houses more out of bloom but brim full of bud. These 10,000 were being saved up to assist upon orders aggregating 20,000 for Boston deliveries for Christmas.

These same plants began to blossom out of doors and were transplanted since Thanksgiving, which process did not retard blossoming in the least, and Mr. Sim feels sure it largely increases the winter capacity of them. They surely cannot be beaten in appearance, and he will cut more than 1,000,000 flowers during the season, which will be prolonged in the spring by a lot of plants now sleeping out doors under a glass sheet and a salt hay quilt. When these are put to work the greenhouses will be used for a crop of his new giant candy-tuft, and followed by a crop of chrysanthemums, which will be hurried in before Thanksgiving in the fall.

Mr. Sim believes in taking time by the forelock and has the walls of a 5,000 square foot addition all built, lumber prepared and painted and glass on hand for it. He has boiler capacity for three times his present plant all established.

A noticeable feature is the work of W. F. Gilbert in applying his asbestos covering to the steam mains in the boiler room. It is put on in a very neat way, and Mr. Sim speaks very highly of its efficiency.

Mr. Sim is a native of Scotland, where he learned his business, and came to this country about fourteen years ago when eighteen years of age. For five years he worked upon the place now occupied by Thos. Roland at Nahant, for five years more was a member of the firm of Sim & Duncan, of Arlington, and four years ago purchased six acres of land where now situated, and where he evidently means to remain.

One feature I saw there may be of use to others. He keeps the depredations of the dreaded violet fly under control by scattering tobacco dust upon the ground around the plants, being careful not to drop any into the center of the plants, where its adulterations will cause trouble.

His plants are in solid beds, the sides of which are planks about eight inches wide, and they make as interesting a sight as can be found on the banks of the Bay. Attest. J. S. MANTER.

CARNATIONS.

Registered by the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y.:

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt; pedigree runs through three generations of Cottage Garden seedlings. Color deep carmine pink, much more brilliant than Lawson; size very large, flower is round, high centered and symmetrical. Stem is strong, holding the flower erect and coming long with the first crop. Flower stands well up out of the calyx and does not burst; has strong fragrance and is a good keeper. Compact, erect habit; can be planted closer than the Lawson and, being fully as free, will produce more flowers per square foot of bench room.

President Roosevelt, the product of four generations of crimson seedlings; Governor Roosevelt crossed with Mayor Grant. Color brilliant crimson wine, similar to the brilliant shades in the Liberty rose. Blooms average three inches and over, form exceptionally fine and symmetrical, splendid calyx, never bursting, extremely strong twenty to thirty inch stem, fragrant and a free bloomer. Foliage deep glaucous green, habit compact and very erect; can be planted closely and will produce double the flowers per square foot that Governor Roosevelt will. The best keeper of all the crimsons.

Joseph H. Manley, cross of Bon Ton upon a seedling of G. H. Crane. Color brilliant, cheerful orange scarlet, large fragrant bloom three inches in diameter, good stem holding the bloom erect, fine calyx. Early and exceptionally free from October to the end of the season, fully as free and continuous as General Maceo. Habit compact and erect, being semi-dwarf with flower stems thrown from the base of the plant. Can be planted close and will produce more flowers for Christmas cutting than any other scarlet carnation we have thus far grown.

Viola Allen, Bradt crossed with White Cloud. Color clear porcelain white, delicately edged and traced with clear rose pink. Very large full bloom, fragrant, long, strong stems, early free bloomer, foliage deep glaucous green, calyx strong.

Harry Fenn, pedigree two generations of crimson seedlings. Large bloom, averaging two and three-quarter inches in diameter. Color brilliant scarlet overlaid with maroon, fully as brilliant as the General Gomez, stem extra long, stiff and wiry, averaging 20 to 24 inches; habit compact and can be planted closely. Early bloomer, coming into flower early in November and blooming throughout the season as freely as General Maceo.

By E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind.:

Painted Lady, Sport crossed with Dorothy. Flower is same shade and size as Mrs. Lawson, form very symmetrical, the edge of the petals being smooth. It has a good strong stem and calyx. A clean, strong and vigorous grower with no surplus grass. Like its parent, Dorothy, it is an excellent keeper and a wonderful producer.

THE SALT LAKE FLORAL CO.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph giving a partial view of the greenhouses of the Salt Lake Floral Co., Salt Lake City, Utah.

The range contains six houses, each 20x160, all even span, running north and south. Though the houses were completed rather late for planting roses, one house was planted and they are doing fairly well. One house is planted with Asparagus plumosus, and two with carnations. The carnation houses each contain 6,000 plants, the principal varieties being Roosevelt, Norway, Prosperity, Flora Hill, Joost, Crane and Lawson. These were planted in August and have done well. Of chrysanthemums there were 3,000 plants grown to single stem, and they produced some fine blooms.

Retail stores are maintained in this city and also in Butte, Mont. Mr. J. H. Mitchell is superintendent of the greenhouses.

A VISIT TO RICHMOND, IND.

A visit to Richmond is never complete without a visit to the immense establishment of the E. G. Hill Co., where there is always a great deal to interest visiting florists, and a half day can hardly be spent more profitably than in walking through the houses and worksheds. In naming over the many interesting things to be found here one hardly knows where to begin, they are so numerous, so I will begin with the carnations, as they were of most interest to me and they are just in their prime at present.

Of course all the leading novelties are given a trial and among them the fine white Lorna seems to stand out above all the others. Norway suffered somewhat in being housed and was just recovering and beginning to produce fine blooms. Gov. Roosevelt is doing nicely and looks to be by far the best crimson up to date. Prosperity seems late coming into form, but may make up later. Estelle is doing fine and looks like a paying thing. A large batch of the new Cressbrook was literally loaded down with buds and if it does as well with others as it is doing here it will become a standard variety. The growth is as strong as Lawson and in fact the plant reminds one of that variety, only it is not quite so stubby looking. The blooms are of better form and a lighter shade of pink. Their new variety, Gayety, looks fine, and where a good free striped carnation is wanted this should prove a favorite, as it looks like an easy grower and free bloomer. The blooms resemble Mrs. Bradt, but they do not burst and the stems hold the bloom up well.

The most interesting thing of all and the one variety I wanted to see was that grand scarlet variety Adonis. The time of my visit was Dec. 26, and for seeing developed blooms I could hardly have chosen a poorer day, but I wanted to see the habit of the variety as well as the blooms and I was satisfied with what I saw. This variety is certainly making good all the claims of its originator. A good, large and free scarlet is wanted badly, and no doubt many growers who have seen Adonis growing are anxiously waiting for its dissemination.

Besides the above, there are all the standard varieties in large quantities and propagating has begun in earnest. There are also many promising seedlings on trial, among which I noticed one of Crocker style, but about twice as large, and a scarlet that looks like a money maker. The carnations are planted in the fine new house, 30x400 feet, which was erected last summer, and it is a grand sight to look over 400 feet of carnations all in fine shape.

The other large house contains Messrs. Hill's new seedling roses and one can easily spend an hour in admiring the grand results of several years of hard and patient work. We were fortunate enough to see a few well developed blooms of the new prize winner, Rose of Kansas City, and it is certainly a gem of the first water in every way. Besides the seedlings there are hundreds of foreign importations on trial, and while many of them are of no value to the commercial grower, yet there is occasionally a grand one among them. They seem to have discovered the secret in growing Liberty, as a couple of benches of this variety look fine. All the standard forcing varieties are also done in good shape. The work of grafting has begun, and judging by the quantity of stock being gotten into shape it would seem that there have been many converts to that method of growing roses.

Besides roses and carnations, there are immense quantities of palms, ferns, begonias, rubbers, asparagus, chrysanthemums and many other novelties, and also perhaps the finest collection of geraniums in the country.

From here we went to the home of Dorothy, over at E. T. Graves' place, and here you can see it in all its glory. About 7,000 plants, nearly all in full crop and just loaded with buds, looking like a wheat field, the buds stand so close together. Certainly this variety pays them well. We had hoped to see the new and famous McKinley carnation, but it was being worked up into cuttings as rapidly as possible and next season a large quantity will be planted. We saw the seedling plant in bloom last year and it had a grand bloom on it then, and they assured us that it is even finer this year.

A house of Mrs. Lawson was about as fine as one would care to see, and in fact all the standard varieties are done in good shape.

Our next stopping place was at Fulle Bros., where we saw some nice roses, carnations and a general line of retail stock, including both cut flowers and pot plants. We noticed a fine batch of carnation Triumph which seems to do well with them. They also grow a couple of benches of lettuce during the winter, and Mr. Fulle assured us that the proper temperature for lettuce is 50 degrees if it is sold by weight. This would do away with a recent inquirer's troubles if he will follow this advice.

A. F. J. BAUR.

WATER RATES.

There are two classes of water rates in this place, namely "Domestic" and "Manufacturing." Which class of water rates should a florist, or one who grows plants and flowers, being a producer (in this place), come under? S. B.

The florist should certainly come under the "Manufacturing" class, as he surely could not be classed "Domestic." If your water company has a rate by the gallon it will probably pay you to have a meter put in and pay for exactly what you use. In many cities florists have made a material saving in their expense for water by putting in meters. The average official has an exaggerated idea of the amount of water used by florists, and an assessment by the foot front or other method is never equitable. By having a meter put in you pay for what you use and no more.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Cut flower business since New Year's has been excellent. The demand on everything excepting bulbous stock, single violets and carnations of poorer quality was fully equal to the supply. Choice tea roses continue scarce, being nearly always taken on sight. Special Beauties range from $6 to $9 a dozen, very few going at the latter price; $3 to $5 buys good stock. Out of town buyers are paying $15 for fancy Maids, and at this price get the pick of the market; $10 to $12 is the rate for good ordinary tea roses. Carnations bring from $2 to $4 a hundred, a few fancies $5. Pink of ordinary grade are an over supply, some lots changing hands at $15 a thousand. These are used for decorative purposes. Valley, mignonette and double violets of good quality are selling fairly well.

Leo Niessen has two additions to the list, daffodils of the single trumpet variety and freesia; the latter is very fine, with 18-inch stems commanding $6 a hundred.

S. S. Pennock has been receiving since Christmas Harrisii lilies from Robert Scott & Son. Fine flowers, a bit short in the stem. Asparagus is in very brisk demand; smilax and Maiden Hair are also active.

The ball season is fairly under way. A very large affair took place at Horticultural Hall on Friday of last week. This Friday we have the first Assembly. The material for these balls comes chiefly from the growing establishment of one firm. The general market is not usually much affected by them.

More About Christmas Prices.

Referring to last week's discussion on the Christmas prices of Beauties, Messrs. Myers & Samtman say: "It is beyond dispute that there are enough first-class florists to take more than the production of the rose at the holiday season at market prices with a thank you. It is ignorance on the part of any one to imagine the grower would have a Christmas crop if it was not for the better price at that time. Our great trouble has not been the price of the roses this year, $18 per dozen down, but to get the quantity to satisfy our customers. The roses sold at Christmas represent often times the sacrifice of two crops of buds. Let those who are ignorant on this point multiply the prices in October and November by three and see if the prices at Christmas are exorbitant.

"The unfortunate part of it is this kick does not emanate from the live-up-to-date florist, but from those who are back numbers; who are accustomed to do business as they did before the antediluvian times. For instance, the greatest bear on the prices of American Beauties in Philadelphia at all times, is one who informed the writer with a great degree of satisfaction that he had retailed roses at $10 that he paid $2 for. I have no doubt his customers thought this outrageous. I will leave it to the readers of the Review whether that party's idea of what a grower should have for his stock would have any weight with the craft. These are the people who do the kicking and don't get any roses to sell when anybody else wants them."

Review of the Holiday Trade.

Reports on holiday business from local wholesale houses are of special interest this season in view of the increased shipping business carried on in this city. One grower, John Burton, recognizing this fact, built a new range of rose houses last summer solely to meet this growing demand.

S. S. PENNOCK.

It was the best Christmas we ever had. The Beauties were, if anything, a little finer than ever before, Lansdowne alone sending me some 400 specials. Valley was fine, bringing $6 and $8 per hundred. I think the growers should keep in closer touch with their commission man. Some growers paid no attention to my inquiry as to what they would have, while others would not send stuff when it was needed. This means loss to us both. I also think the very high prices at the holidays are an evil. But it is difficult to see how this can be corrected. The growers often have to be satisfied with very low prices for their stock and they naturally want high prices at the holidays. The law of supply and demand regulates the market.

LEO NIESSEN.

My business actually doubled this Christmas. All flowers sold well. Carnations were in good demand; one variety, Scott, was too plentiful. All roses sold well. Good double violets were in brisk demand. The southern grown violets were very late in arriving, the first not reaching here until Christmas day in the afternoon, entirely too late to be of use. We had some chrysanthemums, but they are not wanted for the holidays. Valley was fine and sold well.

EDWARD REID.

The change brought about in the past five or ten years in the wholesale business by the increased supply of cut flowers necessitates the development of outside markets for our product. Consequently the wholesaler requires that much of his stock be delivered to him on the 22d and 23d, and not kept until the 24th of December. When this stock is in good condition it will net the grower as much as that delivered later, the local demand being limited. I have explained this to my growers and they have acted on the suggestion. My business has increased over 25 per cent compared with Christmas one year ago. Nearly all stock sold well.

I would like to add that the rose growers who lay a great lot of roses at a time in their boxes, with wet newspaper on top, crushed by the lid, should come here, see the condition of the stock when unpacked, and see how we handle and pack the buds. They would learn something that would save them many dollars.

FRED EHRET.

Christmas business was better than usual with me. I sold out clean and at good prices. A very fine lot of Bridesmaid and Bride roses were particularly good stock. There was little trouble with the express companies. The United States was prompt and reliable, the Adams a little slow.

GEORGE M. MOSS.

Christmas business was excellent, fully up to expectations. The only drawback was that some buyers thought carnations too high in price. Everything went well. Tea roses were very scarce, many more could have been used. Valley went well, but was in full supply. The express companies carried consignments and shipments satisfactorily with a few exceptions.

EUGENE BERNHEIMER.

I had an exceptionally good Christmas trade. The stock in general arrived in good condition and the supply was about equal to the demand, with the exception of good Bridesmaids, which were very scarce. Smilax was very plentiful and not sought after very much. Mr. R. G. Palmer, of Doylestown, had some fine Brides and Maids which commanded very good prices. His stock is improving and can be favorably compared with any coming in to Philadelphia.

WM. J. BAKER.

Business with me was good. I am well satisfied. I think a lesson the growers should learn would be to pick their carnations and violets earlier and tell us just how many we may expect each day. Orders were refused a few days before Christmas that could have been filled had we been kept posted. One grower promised 2,000 carnations and sent 5,000. Many flowers were left too long on the plants. This is a great mistake, as they were badly needed at just the time when they were in fit condition.

WM. J. MOORE.

The Xmas trade was very good this year and have noticed a considerable increase in the sale of good carnations. I found the trade very willing to pay for something good and fresh in that line. But the trouble lies with the growers in holding the flowers too long on the plants. All other flowers sold about the same as usual. There was demand for more Maids than could be had, owing to the warm spell about the middle of December, which caused them to be in full crop.

Express Shipments.

The following views from Mr. Samuel S. Pennock on the evil of delayed express shipments during busy times suggest a remedy that concerted action should make practicable:

"I think a little agitation on the subject of frozen shipments and delayed shipments would do a great deal of good; and if the florists would all band together and make a vigorous claim against the express companies all over the United States, providing this is possible, we would certainly have beneficial results. The position of the express companies at present is a very independent one; they treat their patrons just as they feel like doing, irrespective of right or wrong; and if they are made to suffer for a few of their mistakes it would certainly have some effect and be a good help to the business. In the first place, knowing the perishable contents of the boxes, they at times make no extra effort to move them faster than their other goods. If there could be an extra charge made on goods of this nature at rush times, for instance like the charge for a special delivery letter, I do not think there is one dealer in the country who would not be willing to pay this and thus insure good service and prompt delivery. If possible to start a movement of this kind I shall be glad to give all the assistance in my power."

The H. A. Dreer Co. are growing some varieties of begonias that flower only in winter, believing they will prove great acquisitions to the holiday trade. They are a cross between B. socotrana, one of the parents of Lorraine, and the tuberous rooted. They range in color from carmine to carmine scarlet, and are very free flowering. The varieties are B. Ensign, B. Wintercheer and B. Mrs. Heal.

H. H. Battles had a fine lot of well grown Poinsettias from his own place; they retailed at $6 a dozen.

Pennock Bros.' window this week contained four specimen azaleas in fancy jardinieres; the effect was very rich.

W. P. Craig returned last week from a trip to Pittsburg, Chicago and Richmond, Ind. He is much impressed with the wonderful market in the west.

Robert Stokes, of Stokes & Gocher, florists, Broad Street Station, died last week.

FLOWER SHOWS AND THEIR VICISSITUDES.

[Read before the Chicago Florists' Club, Jan. 8.]

It is now fifty-four or fifty-five years since I went to my first flower show, which was held on the race course, Leicester, England, and from that time not a year has passed but what I have visited at least one exhibition. From '57 to '71 I attended each year on an average of not less than twenty and at all these in the capacity of either exhibitor or judge, and I am sure that out of all these shows, extending over so many years, there has not been, no, not one single one held but what has benefited horticulture directly and indirectly. I must admit that all, in fact probably the majority, have not had a balance on the right side of the ledger as far as finance stands for success; we must admit, however, that even where this is the case the information gained, the interest awakened and the emulation created has been of as much benefit otherwise so that the investment warranted the expenditure.

There are many difficulties to contend with in the making and holding of flower shows, just as much and no more than nearly all specific organizations that have in view the education of the people, without sufficient funds and necessary accommodations to carry along the work. Again, shows that are only held once or twice a year, and then for a few days only, have to contend with, perhaps, bad weather, unsuitable building accommodation and lethargic support. These are bad factors and often present, but as there are silvery linings to every cloud, the motto of flower show promoters should be "Nil desperandum." This brings me to say what I have to say to you and it is with great pleasure I am able to tell you something about the Kansas City flower show of last November.

The success of the Kansas City flower show demonstrated beyond question what can be done under seemingly adverse circumstances where pluck, energy and determination is brought to bear. To bring to a successful issue such an exhibition within six weeks seems marvelous when we have in mind that Kansas City is hundreds of miles away from the centers where exhibition material is cultivated. Then take the expenses of transportation, which are heavy, burdensome and tedious. Yet with all this handicapping, it is a matter of record that no flower show ever held in America was brought to a more successful issue, or if as successful. Of course, there were good and solid reasons why this was brought about, but it is puzzling to me to schedule the factors in their priority because of the many that were nearly equal. Think, perhaps, I ought to name—

First, the magnificent Convention Hall, a building that is unequaled for the holding, not only of flower shows, but for any other purpose (a hall that has had within its walls 30,000 people), and in which there are no restrictions as to treatment and where every accommodation is thrust upon you.

Second, the extremely liberal premiums. It is safe to say there never before have been such liberal premiums offered and they were never paid as promptly, and that's worth noting. The offering of third premiums is to be commended and should always be done. The stake premiums of $200, $150 and $100 brought out great competition and were vigorously competed for.

Third, the masterly advertising. In Director General Taggart (the prince of advertisers) no flower show has been fortunate enough to have a man of such ability. His originality, his perspicacity and his many methods seemingly reached every corner of Missouri, Kansas, Illinois, Oklahoma and the United States. He had the poster (that girl in the red coat and her dog), he had buttons, postal cards, photographs, dodgers and the newspapers—how they did work for the show!

Fourth, the superb decorations, consisting of electrical effects never before attempted on such a scale at a flower show, the genius of which was R. E. Richardson; the Japanese pagodas and tea houses; the clever use of pine trees and Alabama smilax; the magnificent Japanese umbrellas and monstrous lantern; the fenced in Japanese gardens.

The electrical scheme was complete in every particular. A canopy representing the sky was hung over the whole of the arena; it was of light blue cheese cloth; the cloth alone cost $500. Above this were electric lights representing stars in various combinations. At the east end of the hall and at the back of the pagoda was a scenic curtain representing the Fuji Yama Mountain of Japan, capped with electricity as if in eruption, and each evening a representation of a rising moon promptly rose at 7 o'clock. All of the lanterns were lit by electricity. At intervals of fifteen feet along the top of the boundary hedge luminous globes ten inches in diameter glowed like balls of iridescent silver. The large Japanese pagoda and the two tea houses were unique and beautiful, they alone costing $1,000. The largest Japanese umbrellas were twelve feet in diameter, the smaller eight feet. In some of these were dropped little globes of electric light and they were superb. The fenced in Japanese garden was constructed of skeleton boards and poultry netting covered with branches of pine and spruce. It was four feet wide at the base, four feet high and two feet across the top. It had one main entrance with a Japanese archway twenty-two feet high, eighteen feet wide and two side entrances twelve feet high and sixteen feet wide. The east end was open leading up to the steps of the pagoda. It was effective and massive and greatly admired.

Fifth, the ladies and the music. The ladies were enthusiastic beyond anything one could conceive. They were at the flower booths, in the tea houses, in the pagoda and in the boxes. Those taking active part in the show were gowned in beautiful Japanese costumes. The music was delightful. Zim's band was costumed in flowing robes from Japan and a dreamy string quartette entertained the company at the tea houses.

Sixth, innovations. The fish pond and the fish, and the Kansas City waltz. The fish pond and the fish attracted as much attention as the flowers; there was not any time but what the banks of the pond were crowded three to six deep. The pond was an irregular oval in shape, occupying about 1,200 square feet. In the center was an island 15x51 feet, on which were dwarf Japan pines and a few pieces of rock, out of which glowed electric lights. The depth of the pond was 16 inches; the depth of water 12 to 14 inches; the number of the fish 2,500, the varieties being of all the golden carp section of all colors. The banks of the pond were puddled clay; here and there a group of Japanese plants and the whole bank sodded with fine turf. The water level was 12 inches above the floor line of the building. For the best waltz a premium of $100 was given. There were some two-score entries. The winning waltz was played several times during each session and brought quite a number of visitors.

Seventh, the different committees, of which there were about a dozen, worked together heart and soul and harmoniously. It would be well if such could be said of all committees.

Eighth, the way the show was conducted. The show was conducted on hard and fast business lines from the beginning. It meant hard work for those on whom the heaviest burdens fell, and it was worth all the trouble. The plans were studied in all details as far as possible two weeks before the commencement of the exhibition and arrangements made accordingly. Entries were asked to be made one week previous and the space in square feet required to be given. This was strictly carried out. Tables were made of various lengths, uniformly three feet wide, some 14 inches high, some 18 inches and some 24 inches. These were all covered with bright red cambric for the chrysanthemums and green for the roses. Numerous boxes, such as are used for soap and other groceries, were covered in red, white and green cambric a couple of days before the show to be used as stands for various exhibits. Assistance was given to all exhibitors so as to make their work as easy as possible and the general welfare of all concerned was always considered.

I believe I am safe in saying that every exhibitor felt that justice had been done to him and he had no reason to regret he helped to make the Kansas City flower show a success.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

New Year's business was a great surprise to the florists and many report that they did better this year than for some time past, and that bright flowers were in brisk demand for this holiday. Stock of all kinds was fairly plentiful and somewhat lower in price than for Christmas.

The quality of the stock that is coming in now is very good. As usual following the holidays it is a little dull, but from reports everybody seemed busy with some kind of work, especially funeral work, which has been in great demand the past week. A few large receptions were also attended to. One of the largest of the season was the Houser reception last Friday, the decorations for which were arranged by Ellison & Tesson. This was a handsome affair and much credit is due them.

Our wholesale men claim that their shipping trade for the holidays was much better than last year, and all through the season they have been very busy.

Stock for the past week was of good quality, but not overplentiful and prices not so high. The weather is fine and bright and should it continue so throughout the week, stock of all kinds will be plentiful and prices much lower.

In roses, Beauties of the first grade are scarce and are selling from 30 to 75 cents each, and from that down to $1.50 per dozen at wholesale; Meteors from $6 to $10; Brides and Maids, $3 to $8; Perles and Woottons, $3 to $6 per hundred.

Carnations are better in quality and are in big demand. Scotts, Cranes, Daybreaks and all whites bring from $3 to $4 per hundred. The supply in these is fairly good. Violets are more plentiful and Californias are now selling at $1 for the best, with demand good.

Bulb stock is selling fairly well, owing to the demand for funeral work, though plenty of it is left over after the morning sales. Valley brings $3 and $4; Romans, $2 and $3; paper whites, same; callas, 15 cents each; Harrisii, none in the market; freesias are now coming in and go at $3 and $4 per 100. All kinds of greens are in good supply.

Various Notes.

Arnold Ringier spent the last day of the old year in St. Louis looking after the interests of W. W. Barnard & Co. Arnold says that his firm did a great business the past year and says, "We are the people."

The St. Louis florists are in receipt of the first catalogue issued by the Walter Mott Seed & Bulb Co., of Jamestown, N. Y., which is very handsomely gotten up. We all wish you well, Walter, in your new enterprise.

Miss Rosie Orata has opened a new floral store at Lafayette and Jefferson avenues and reports that trade was good with her during the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Carew Sanders will leave this week for California to spend the winter.

R. J. Mohr, late of the Missouri Botanical Garden, has taken a position with the Plant Seed Co. and will have charge of the plant department.

Mr. F. Ries has left the employ of the Plant Seed Co. and will soon start in business for himself.

Mr. E. W. Guy of Belleville was in town Monday, coming from St. Charles, Mo., where his daughter is attending school. Mr. Guy reports good trade in Belleville during the holidays and says cut flowers sold better than plants, though some of the Belleville boys sold quite a number of plants. He says that Mr. Wm. Hucke has the finest house of Lawson carnations he ever saw, and says it looks like a wheat field. This house will be ready for cutting in about a week and should swamp the market with Lawsons.

Mr. Grossart of the same place had a few large decorations of plants during the recent holidays. Mr. Guy says all the Belleville florists are well pleased with the business done.

St. Louis Parks.

Mr. F. W. Pape, superintendent of public parks, has the following to say regarding the parks during the past year:

The park department has been compelled to content itself with merely maintaining the parks and public places in the last twelve months on account of the lack of sufficient appropriations; no real improvements have been made, but every effort has been made to keep up appearances with the limited means on hand. We need a great many repairs. Forest Park especially needs attention on account of the approach of the World's Fair.

The St. Louis Bowling Club. Still Bowling.

We swore off bowling New Year's day,
But New Year's day is gone;
We swore we wouldn't bowl again,
But still we're bowling on.

Last Thursday night we bowled the Diels Stars and again suffered defeat. Young Ellison was the star performer of the night, rolling an average of 232 2-3 in three games. This is the record of the league and will no doubt stand to the end of the season. Sturtz also rolled good games, but Beneke, Kuehn and Beyer were out of form and the scores will show how we lost the two games:

New Year's Trade.

New Year's turned out to be a pretty good day. No one expected it to be anything like Christmas, but there was a good demand for flowers. Our big social event of the winter, the charity ball, was held on New Year's night in the same hall that the trade exhibit was held by the S. A. F. last August, which several florists will remember. It was finely decorated, but more with flags and bunting than by the florist's art; still, the stage was finely fixed up with palms and I regret that I cannot give you the name of the firm who was unfortunate enough to receive the order. I am obliged to say unfortunate because you are expected to do it all for sweet charity's sake, with faith that you are doing a good job and hope that it will lead to more profitable business in the future. But Alphonse gave Gertrude a bunch of violets, and J. Van Rensellaer Jones remembered Arabella, and in a lower stratum of society Jack felt awful kind towards Nellie, and so it was all good for business. Besides one or two large affairs the season has been considered unusually gay. There has, however, scarcely been any social event calling for a very large use of flowers and decorations, such as we have known in the past.

Flowers for City Fathers.

When the aldermen and councilmen took their seats yesterday morning several of their desks were gay with baskets and vases of flowers. One very popular citizen, Mr. Thomas Stoddart, on taking his seat as a new councilman, found among several fine floral tributes a dozen fine American Beauties. And the card attached read: "I guess you are worth $24, old man." It must have been his own wife. Who else could have such an exalted opinion? The installation of our new mayor, the Hon. Erastus C. Knight, comptroller of this great state, was a great event florally. His room was a bower of pretty plants and beautiful flowers. A wonderful wave of reform has struck our city. I don't speak of it in any light or sarcastic vein. Boodlers, gangsters, grafters, heelers of every kind, will have to hide their heads. Some of the very wealthiest and leading business men of our city are sitting in our board of aldermen and councilmen. They will probe things to the bottom. They aren't there for boodle, they have enough legitimately earned. They are there for good municipal government, and when we have that we will have paradise.

Holly.

We noticed that there was just about holly enough and none to spare. I scarcely think the use of it was as general as for the past few years and there was by no means as much came to town. Perhaps it's a case of slightly overdoing the thing and getting tired of it. As a people we crowd almost all fashions and then comes reversion.

It was very amusing to read in the Christmas issue of one of our best papers an article on "The Holly." "Christmas would not be Christmas without the holly bough. It had been used for 200 years by the New Englanders. It was more essential than turkey to commemorate the season. Our mothers and grandmothers of fifty years ago sat up nights weaving the glossy leaves and scarlet berries into wreaths," etc., and a lot more such stuff.

Of course it was written by a dear woman, and very well written, but it would have been more interesting if there had been a single grain of truth in it. Just as well say that the bootblacks of Boston 100 years ago always wore an 18-inch poinsettia for a buttonhole bouquet on Christmas day. Except, perhaps, among the descendants of the Cavaliers in Virginia and the south the use of holly was not dreamed of. Our northern cities knew nothing of it. Thirty years ago and less there was not a sprig of holly came to this city. I well remember a beautiful woman sending me a holly wreath about twenty-four years ago, which she had brought from New York. It carried me back with joy to the land where holly and mistletoe have been used for a thousand years, and perhaps many more. W. S.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Christmas Trade.

Monday of Christmas week the weather moderated, causing a sigh of relief to go around, for it gave rise to the hope that the coal famine might be broken and that after all there was a chance for a good holiday trade, with mild weather for the handling of plants.

Trade came with a rush and was equal to and better than last year. There was enough stock to meet the heavy demand, save in carnations, which gave out. Red, both in roses and carnations, was in greatest demand and sold out early, calls for this color having to be supplied with anything the customer could be persuaded to take as a substitute. As a rule, the quality of flowers was good, there being less pickled and poor stock on the market than has been the case in some former seasons. A noticeable fact was the ease, compared to former experiences, with which customers paid $1 to $1.25 per dozen for carnations. It has been hard, arduous work educating the people to these prices, but the price is paid as readily this year as 50 cents per dozen was paid out a few years since.

Prices: Roses, $2 to $3 per dozen. Beauties were of medium quality and in limited quantity; shorts, 25 cents, to long, $1 each. Valley, paper whites, Romans, 50 to 75 cents; violets, 35 to 50 cents per dozen. Harrisii and callas, $3 per dozen.

In plants, azaleas sold out first; many more could have been sold had the supply not been limited. The Floral Co. were heavily stocked with poinsettias, which sold well. Palms were in least demand of any plant, while the Boston fern was a favorite, more of it being sold than any other variety of plant.

Holly wreaths sold the freest of anything. A. J. Brown monopolizes that trade. There was a very light demand for green wreathing. The florists wisely did not stock up very heavy in green goods, as every corner grocer in town handled them, besides the seed stores.

For about ten days previous to Christmas a terrible blizzard was experienced and it caught the florists with a low supply of coal on hand. The dealers could not get enough to supply even a part of their customers, and a coal famine ensued that gave several florists a close call and has induced them to lay in a quantity ahead with which to weather the next blizzard.

December 9 George Schols met with a serious affliction, the death of his oldest son occurring on that day. The parents are heart-broken and have the sincere sympathy of the craft. G. F. C.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The supply has very materially increased during the past week and prices are much lower than at last report, especially on carnations, of which there is evidently a remarkably large cut for the season. We have had much more sunshine than usual in early January, which is no doubt the cause of the large supply.

On roses the price is now $8, with only a few extra fancy Maids bringing as much as $10. The great bulk of Brides and Maids sell at $5 to $6 and the lower grades go at $2 to $3. Meteor classes with the best Maids, and it is only in red roses that the supply is not more than ample to meet demands. Liberty holds its own well, the best long stemmed blooms selling at $20 to $25, with medium lengths at $10 to $12, and shorts as low as $4. On the extra long Beauties the price ranges from $4 to $6 a dozen, but the very longest do not go nearly so well at the prices as do the medium lengths at $1.50 to $3. Shorts are sold at as low as $4 a hundred.

In carnations the greatest relapse in prices is noticeable. On good ordinaries $1 to $2 is the price asked and very good fancy stock can be had for $3. The dealers are having numerous complaints about carnations arriving in a sleepy condition, no matter how fresh they seemed when packed. The only explanation that is offered is that the plants may have been somewhat exhausted by holiday forcing and that the sleepy tendency of the flowers now produced is the result.

Though prices have dropped so materially the general demand is very fair, and really very good for the season. We always get a sag in prices and demand just after the holidays and it seems less serious this year than usual. Some of the dealers look for a sharp upturn in prices within a week, especially if weather conditions change, as they are very likely to.

Various Items.

Walter Heffron, manager of McKellar & Winterson's cut flower department, has been confined to his home by illness since last Saturday, and it has proved to be an attack of pneumonia. A speedy recovery is hoped for by his many friends.

Last Monday afternoon a dozen local florists made a pilgrimage to Mt. Greenwood to see what W. N. Rudd had been doing of late. After a trip through the houses and an examination of the numerous seedling carnations the party enjoyed a spread embellished by various liquid trimmings, provided by their host, and had a good time generally.

John Muno has returned from West Baden, Ind., much improved in health.

Most of the local retailers report business very good for the time of year, and we hear of many entertainments to come at which flowers will be a feature.

Club Meeting.

There was a large attendance at the meeting of the Florists' Club Wednesday evening. The principal feature was the paper on exhibitions by Mr. John Thorpe, which appears elsewhere in this issue, and which was well received. A program of exhibitions and subjects for discussion for the remainder of the winter was arranged, and other detail business transacted.

Bowling.

Last Tuesday evening the bowling games were resumed. The Wholesalers won two games from the Retailers and the latter won one from the former, while the Miscellaneous won three games from the Growers. Following are the scores:

CINCINNATI.

Various Items.

The writer of the Cincinnati notes had the misfortune to be confined to his bed during the holidays and was unable to write his usual weekly letter.

Everyone has his Christmas business figured up and the general report from the stores is that there was a slight increase over former years. The florists in the Jabez Elliott flower market have an entirely different story to tell, though, as they report a loss of from 50 to 75 per cent over former years. Of course the extremely cold weather was the main cause of this, as the majority of people who buy their flowers in the market spent their money for something else, knowing that it would be impossible to get flowers and plants home from the market without freezing.

The demand for blooming plants was good, but cut flowers are still the thing, and, as usual, both for Christmas and New Year's, there were not enough roses and carnations to fill all orders. Stock as a rule was of very good quality, and there was less pickled stock in evidence than ever before.

This is certainly a step in the right direction, and it is to be hoped that Easter will show an entire absence of this kind of stock.

New Year's business was highly satisfactory to all concerned. Prices were just a trifle below those obtained at Christmas, and the demand was all that could be desired. Mild weather made it easy to handle stock, and the stock itself was of very good quality, and, best of all, it was fresh.

Bulbous stock as a rule moved very slowly for Christmas and New Year's, and I believe this was true in other markets, also. It seems as if the people want roses or carnations, and if they can not get these they don't want anything.

The supply of stock is just about normal and prices have taken a drop from holiday figures. Carnations from 2 to 5 cents and roses 4 to 6 cents is the quoted price now, and the chances are that these will be the prices for some time to come. There are plenty of Romans, narcissus and valley at 3 and 4 cents, and violets are coming in fairly well at $1 to $1.50 per 100.

H. D. Edwards bought out C. Sunderman's store at Canal and Vine streets and will continue the business. We will now have a chance to see what Kentucky blood can do on historic Vine street.

Theo. Bock is sending out to his trade a very pretty calendar. Mr. Bock certainly knows a pretty picture when he sees one.

Mr. W. K. Partridge is now sending in some of the finest roses and carnations that are coming to this city. He has all the best of the new things in carnations and they are all in A 1 shape.

Mr. M. Heller was a visitor during the past week. C. J. Ohmer.

Petoskey, Mich.—M. A. Long reports Christmas trade as good and up to the average of former seasons, though not so many plants were sold as usual. Cut flowers took the lead, with carnations and chrysanthemums to the front. Mr. Long had some good mums of such sorts as Mrs. Jones, Maud Dean, Bonnaffon and Mrs. Robinson, which had been held back by overwatering. Carnations and roses were out of sight. "We sold our own cut of carnations and roses and 1,000 carnations from outside, but of roses we didn't buy any. And carnations at $5.00 a hundred are too rich for us, especially with quality none too good and often asleep on arrival. Holly and green sold well and wreaths went like hot cakes."

The firm of Edwards & Docker, Philadelphia, manufacturers of paper boxes, has been incorporated as the Edwards & Docker Co., and the business will be continued by the new corporation.

Florists' Club Banquet.

The banquet given by the Florist Club Monday evening was a decided success in every particular. About forty members were present. The rooms being too small to seat all at one time, we were compelled to have a second table. Ex-President Graham presided over the first table and in a humorous strain introduced himself and invited as many as could to be seated. After the inner man had been satisfied, the presiding officer called on the various members present for speeches. Those who favored us with remarks were: Walker and McLean, of Youngstown; J. Merkel, of Mentor; A. Schmitt, of Glenville; Brown, Brinker and Kennedy, of Cleveland. In the course of the remarks by I. Kennedy, secretary of the club, he had occasion to call the attention of the members to the remarkable growth of the club, the membership having almost doubled in the past year and a half, the attendance at the meetings having increased in the same proportion. The utmost harmony prevailing among the members was evidenced by the many hearty handshakes and expressions of good will as exchanged between one and all present, and the expressed desire by all present that we might have an annual banquet.

The second table was presided over by Mr. Steyn, who, in a few well chosen words in his native tongue, spoke to the German members present. Mr. C. Bartels also made a few remarks. Mr. J. Walker being called upon for a song, gave a rendition of "A Hot Time in the Old Town," all present joining in the chorus. He also gave "Lather and Shave," which brought down the house. The evening's entertainment closed with a rendition of the "Duke of York," by our own inimitable vocalist, Isaac Kennedy. The consensus of opinion of the majority of the members present (not expressed in words) was a strong belief in inner irrigation. The balance of the evening was spent in bowling and playing pedro.

Contemplated Building.

There is a great deal of building contemplated here in the spring by the members of the craft, quite a number taking advantage of the drop in glass to place their orders for April and June delivery. Those intending to build are A. Schmitt, Glenville; H. Hart, Hoffman, R. Addicott and the J. M. Gasser Co.

Notes.

A visit to the establishment of Bate Bros. revealed everything in first-class order. They had a large cut of roses and carnations for the holidays and are of course in a jovial mood.

R. Addicott grows mostly roses and carnations, although he devotes some space to spring stock. His stuff looks very well considering he has been building and is putting in a new boiler.

Mr. L. Utzinger had quite a serious fire at his greenhouses Saturday night, causing about $1,000 damage. The loss was caused mostly by smoke and frost. He lost all his spring stock, azaleas, palms and cinerarias; also all his cuttings in the propagating bench.

Mr. E. A. Fetters of Smith & Fetters, who was taken so seriously ill on Christmas day, is convalescing, although it will be some time before he can attend to business. I have just heard that his only hope is to go to Arizona, this climate being too severe for him. He expects to leave as soon as he can be moved.

Mr. Fred Aul expects to be removed from the hospital to his home this week.

Beno Hart, son of H. Hart, has had a relapse and is again a very sick man.

Mr. Harrison, of the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, is also on the sick list. TENEP.

Now that Christmas is past, Florists are looking forward to Easter.

MILWAUKEE.

The usual after effects of the holidays are with us and but little business is being done outside of funeral work. The death of one of our prominent judges almost cleaned up a day's receipts in white stock. There is nothing doing socially and dealers are buying light, and with increased receipts prices are forced downward. Some Xmas plants are still coming in, especially azaleas, but buyers are not numerous unless tempted by exceedingly low prices. INCOG.

FALL RIVER, MASS.

Christmas trade here was about the same as last year. More carnations could have been sold, especially red. Beauties sold at from $4 to $12 a dozen; Brides and Maids at $1 to $2.50. Pot plants sold well. Cressbrook carnations and Lorraine begonias were novelties. Cressbrook sold at $1.50 to $3. A new florists' store has been opened on Main street by Lewis Bros.

I AM exceedingly well pleased with the REVIEW. It is brim full of valuable information.—H. O. CLENDENIN, Sparta, Ill.

FLATBUSH, N. Y.

Bowling for prizes is always a "gala night" at Flatbush. It is a custom every florists' bowling club should adopt. Flatbush has one such night every season, the first Thursday of the new year. This one was productive of many pleasant memories. In other years some never-to-be-forgotten prizes have been found in the packages—practical jokes of the most hilarious kind.

Seventeen enthusiasts participated in the prize orgies of 1902. The visitors were Stewart, of Boston; Allen, of Queens; Langjahr, of Brooklyn, and Butterfield and Austin, of Manhattan. The rest were nearly all old-timers who have been members of this club ever since its organization. Following are the scores of the first two games. The third one, which was the prize decider, is covered afterward:

E. Dailledouze	137	167	304	152
D. Y. Mellis	127	137	264	132
H. Dailledouze	146	150	296	148
Papa Zeller	103	71	174	87
Austin Shaw	125	144	269	134
S. Butterfield	139	98	237	118
C. Woerner	140	127	267	133
C. Wocker	130	132	262	131
P. Riley	152	148	300	150
J. Raynor	108	108	216	108
P. Dailledouze	119	122	241	120
W. H. Siebrecht	143	168	311	155
C. Allen	156	132	288	144
W. J. Stewart	107	112	219	110
A. Zeller	164	158	322	161

The most enjoyable hour, in which refreshments and the solving of mysteries proceeded, closed one of the jolliest special nights of the club. The lottery idea in the prize selections, by which no winner knows what he has won until after he has selected it, was the cause of uproarious merriment. Every bowler brings his contributions surreptitiously and No. 1 is apt to choose a less valuable package than the last one on the list. The public opening of each package is a rule that must be followed. Every contributor was "serjous" this year, and of course every winner went home happy. Here is the list of prize winners and the remarkable prizes won:

1st. W. Siebrecht, score 168, prize a large bottle of "Old Crow."
2nd. E. Dailledouze, 167, bottle of wine and box of cigars.
3rd. A. Zeller, 158, box of silk neckwear.
4th. H. Dailledouze, 150, bottle of "Hennessy."
5th. P. Riley, 148, bottle of champagne.
6th. Austin Shaw, 144, bottle of pain killer, cigarettes and mechanical bear.
5th. D. Y. Mellis, 137, box of cigars and photo of Papa Zeller.
8th. C. Wocker, 132, thermometer.
9th. C. H. Allen, 132, cigar holder.
10th. C. Woerner, 127, box of cigars.
11th. P. Dailledouze, 122, tobacco jar.
12th. W. J. Stewart, 112, cigar case.
13th. L. Schmutz, 109, box of handkerchiefs.
14th. Jno. Raynor, 108, silver card receiver.
15th. S. Butterfield, 98, tobacco jar.
16th. Papa Zeller, 71, portrait of Geo. Washington.

Trade Conditions for Dec. 30-Jan. 4.

From the grower's point of view, at least, the year has started off very gracefully. Close cutting for Christmas and a mixture of cold and stormy weather since has kept material a bit scarce with the exception of bulb goods, and prices have run fairly good; Beauties from 8 to 75 cents, and other reds from 4 to 25 cents; pink and white from 2 to 35 cents is not far from present schedule on roses. Pinks range from 1½ to 4 cents, with a few fancies at 5 or 6 cents. Lilies in plenty; bulb matter, 2 cents and less if white; yellow hardly enough established to be relied upon. Violets about $1. Rather more of a variety of flowers at times than is usual at this time of year. Chrysanthemums hardly out of the market yet. With good weather flowers should be plentiful soon.

Various Items.

According to an article in the Boston Globe certain members of the Horticultural Society dislike the internal arrangements of their new hall as much as myself, and are not afraid to let their ideas into public expression.

Also in the same paper Samuel Parsons, for twenty years superintendent of parks of New York, savagely assails the condition of Boston's trees and the system of care under which they are placed, especially as far as pruning is concerned. A note is received purporting to come from Mr. Doogne stating there is a "personal animus" behind it all and that he will make reply to the allegations in due time. Apparently all is not perfume that arises from the flowers.

There is surely honey in flowers, and money in flowers surely because many men have lost much in them; but J. Joseph Aylward of Woburn is finding political favor there as well as Mr. E. N. Peirce. Mr. Aylward, son of one of our best rose growers, is "prominently mentioned" for presidency of Woburn's city council.

Mr. Peter Fisher has had blooms of his new white carnation "Gov. Wolcott" on exhibition at Park street for the past few days. It surely looks like one of the missing links of the business. It will have to score high points to equal its namesake in the affections of our public.

J. S. Manter.

LILACS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Having no place averaging about 76 degrees in temperature to force our lilacs in for Christmas, we built an enclosure over the hot water boiler and found that with a little care and judgment the right temperature could be maintained, and nice plants were bloomed in this way.

When sufficiently far advanced they were well hardened off in a temperature of 60 degrees, and at the expiration of twenty days in all they were in fine condition to use as pot plants or for cutting from. Marie Legraye bloomed well at this early date. Lemoinei went partly blind. Art.

Perkasie, Pa.—W. W. Allabaugh has purchased the greenhouses of J. H. Werst.

Mt. Pleasant, Mich.—Fire did serious damage to the Mt. Pleasant greenhouses Dec. 6. Loss estimated at $1,000.

HORN SHAVINGS.

I saw priced in a Chicago florist's catalogue not long ago an article new to me—horn shavings. The catalogue said the horn shavings were of much benefit where bedding plants were grown in large quantities. I sent for a sample package and would like to ask you for information how the grower of bedding plants is to use them to best advantage.
I. M. B.

They are mixed with the potting soil the same way bone meal is used. Their action is quicker than that of the bone. They are also much used in the soil in vases and baskets where there must be a large percentage of plant food in a small amount of soil.

A CHRISTMAS JOKE.

The Christmas bells were ringing early Christmas morning, but they were drowned by the sound of the telephone bell. One of the storekeepers was using the wires to proclaim to all the Beauty growers for ten miles around the Quaker City that the price of American Beauties in New York was $6 per dozen for specials. But the same storekeeper was known to be only too glad to pay $15 per dozen before noon of the same day, and was then kicking because he did not get enough.
M.

COLORADO SPRINGS, COLO.—The Broadmoor Floral Co. has built nine greenhouses, seven of which are 18x100, with all latest improvements, and two violet houses 10x100. They are taking the lead in violets, having won the first prize at the last show in Denver against all competitors. They report Christmas trade as very good, having sold out everything at very good prices.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Christmas trade was good all around. There was little shortage in anything and most all sold out clean on flowers. Considerable falling off in the call for sword ferns and Lorraine begonias, but good demand for palms in medium sizes.

Prices averaged about the same as last year, though there was more variety in the price asked for carnations. Some are reported to have sold at 50 cents per dozen, but the stores got from 70 cents to $1 per dozen and $1.50 for Lawsons and fancy. In violets people want the Imperial, and unless Campbell are extra good they are no longer in it; price, $1.50 to $2 per 100; $3 in some cases.

H. A. Jahn some time before the holidays improved his store greatly by changing his two store windows into one big plate glass window, which gives the whole store an up-to-date appearance.

Chamberlin, on Purchase street, reports first-class trade at Christmas. His window is always attractive and his store kept neat and trim.

H. W. Kraber is starting to cut sweet peas. He is growing them to some extent and they are looking fine.

The weather is about as usual every winter along the New England coast. When it don't rain it snows and when it don't do both (sometimes at the same time) then it blows steady and hard from the northwest, with intense cold. So it keeps folks busy bailing water, and shoveling coal, which is all healthy exercise and helps the digestion, working both ways—on the stomach and on the pocketbook. X.

DUTY ON BULBS.

Minnesota congressmen have announced their intention of endeavoring to have the present import duty on bulbs removed. It seems that Holland is a large buyer of American flour and the Minnesota millers say there is danger of Holland placing a duty on flour if we continue to tax imports of bulbs from that country. It is stated that our trade with Holland amounts to $89,000,000 a year, while we buy of Holland but $17,000,000 a year. And of this the bulb imports amount to about $300,000, from which the government derives a revenue of $75,000. The millers say that if necessary they would rather pay this duty themselves than lose the good will of Holland.

Bloomington, Ill.—Landscape gardening and floriculture in connection with rural homes is to be taught at the State Normal University. New ideas in floral adornment for the home and the school will be instilled into the minds of the pupils, together with an elementary knowledge of plant life and soil influences. A practical demonstration is to be made of the science of propagation and horticulture under the direction of the State Board of Education.

Albany, N. Y.—The Fleischman Floral Company of New York city was incorporated Dec. 28 with a capital of $300,000, to deal in flowers and plants. The directors are: Joseph Fleischman, Solomon Anderson, Albert Van Prag and Charles Kaufman, of New York city, and Edward Kaufman of Brooklyn.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The New Year's Trade.

The New Year's trade here has been a very satisfactory one for the florists. While all report a good business, some say their business was better than for Christmas, and think that being able to charge a reasonable price for flowers caused an increase in purchases, while the exorbitant prices they were compelled to ask for their stock at Christmas was a barrier to a large class of people. Perhaps the weather had something to do with it, as it continued warm all the week, and with the thermometer at 58 degrees above zero people were able to get out. It was a Happy New Year at any rate for the florists.

The usual number of holiday receptions and balls, the leading event being at Convention Hall, absorbed large quantities of stock. Convention Hall, the scene of the New Year's ball, was beautifully decorated. It looked like a "glen in the forest," as a daily paper put it. Great quantities of wild smilax and other greens were used, interspersed with carnations for color effect. It was altogether charming and showed the wonderful adaptability of this hall to decorative effects.

Notes.

Your correspondent recently stated in his notes that C. S. Short was the only florist in Kansas City, Kan. Mr. Short wishes this corrected, as Mrs. Laundy, at Tenth and Reynolds, has a nice place. Mrs. Laundy, in addition to her cut flower trade, grows a large stock of bedding plants and is doing a thriving business. John H. Vesey.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

Business during New Year week was brisk, prices keeping up to nearly Christmas figures. In roses the supply of Brides and Bridesmaids was rather limited, Beauties, Meteors and Golden Gates being more plentiful; demand good. Carnations are plentiful and promise a good cut during the month. The demand is good at $4 and $5 per 100; quality fine.

G. Van Bochove & Bro. are retailing some very select stock at $1 and $1.50 per dozen, their Lawson, Bradt, Marquis, Prosperity, Lorna and White Cloud being especially fine. They are cutting quantities of very fine violets of the Imperial and Marie Louise varieties, the demand being steady at $2 and $2.50 per 100.

The Dunkley Floral Co. are also cutting some very fine roses, their Golden Gates being exceptionally fine in quality. Carnations are also of a high grade.

Rose and carnation progagation is now in full swing.

The final step in the absorption of the Kalamazoo Nursery & Floral Company by the Central Michigan Nursery Company has been taken by the former company surrendering its charter and filing notice of dissolution with the secretary of state at Lansing.—Gazette, January 5.

Weather clear and cold.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Trade and Other Notes.

Christmas business was good and shows an increase of about 25 per cent over last year; prices ruled about the same. The call for Beauties, carnations, Romans, narcissus and violets was great. Lots of good blooming plants were sold. Some extra fine Begonia Gloire de Lorraine sold at good prices. Large quantities of holly were sold, but the florists in our city have a great deal to contend with in this line, as peddlers go around with a wagon and sell wreaths at 5 cents each, or six for 25 cents. I don't think there is any money in it for the florist.

Jacob Schultz made a very fine display at his store and reports a very large Christmas trade, which was far ahead of last year's.

Jos. Coenen & Co. came in for a good share, as they had the finest lot of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in 6 and 8 inch pots ever seen here, and they disposed of them very quickly.

J. E. Marrett reports a very heavy Christmas trade. He sold lots of plants and holly.

E. G. Reimers did a large business in cut flowers and plants.

Nanz & Neuner had all they could attend to in the way of Christmas trade.

C. H. Kunzman, the West End carnation king, reports an increase of 27 per cent over last year.

William Mann took good care of his trade in the southern part of the city and has swelled his bank account considerably.

William Walker's new range of greenhouses is a beauty and is everything in the way of construction that could be desired. His stock is looking fine.

At the meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists the following members were elected for the ensuing year: President, Jacob Schultz; vice-president, H. G. Walker; financial secretary, Jos. Coenen; secretary, Henry Lichtefeld; treasurer, C. H. Kunzman; trustee, John Bohrman; sergeant-at-arms, William Mann.

Louisville will be well represented at the carnation meeting at Indianapolis next month.

Wishing the Florists' Review a successful, happy New Year.

Hy. Lichtefeld.

Ottawa, Ont.—A. C. Tyndall reports Christmas trade as entirely satisfactory. Sales beyond ordinary expectation. All the florists were sold out clean Christmas eve. Some very fine stock was seen. The weather favored trade of all kinds, being sunshiny with a very moderate degree of cold.

Pasadena, Cal.—The annual tournament of roses was held January 1 and it brought multitudes of visitors to the city. The parade of decorated vehicles contained many very original floats. On one over 400 strings of smilax and 12,000 flowers were used.

The Mrs. E. A. Nelson

Bids fair to become the commercial standard pink carnation. It is a healthy grower, a free and continuous bloomer, and it is sure to thrive wherever grown.

The following letter from Mr. Wm. Scott (who, by the by, needs no introduction), speaks for itself:

BUFFALO, December 7th, 1901.

S. S. SKIDELSKY. Dear Sir:—Of the 25 plants of Mrs. Nelson Carnation which you sent me last spring 24 were put on the bench last August. It is in my opinion a splendid variety. A fine habit and most vigorous growth. A flower of large size, full and perfect form and its color most attractive. At first you would think it a much magnified Scott, but when compared it has none of the blue tint of the old favorite, but is a pure bright pink. It was quick to send up good stems and has every promise of being a free and continuous bloomer. If it suits every soil as it does this it is going to be a most desirable standard variety.

Very truly yours, WILLIAM SCOTT.

Prices—Per doz., $2.50; 25, $3.50; 50, $6.00; 100, $10.00; 1000, $80.00.

250 go at 1000 rate. Send for descriptive circular.

Cytisus or Genista.

Among other Easter plants which I have not mentioned of late I notice the cytisus, or, as it is often called, the genista. This is by no means a good lasting plant when taken into the dwelling house, but we can hardly consider that qualification nowadays, if it only sells. It is one of the few yellow flowers and in moderate quantities sells well, as it is an inexpensive plant. Supposing you gave them the last pinching back in October, they will be full early now for Easter. It will not do to give them any more "stopping," so all you can do is to keep them very cool. Anything above freezing will do for the next six weeks should they be too early with you.

Acacias.

Acacia armata is another beauti yellow blossom, a much superior plant to the genista, but not so quickly or easily grown and flowered. I have never been able to flower the newly imported plants very satisfactorily the first spring, but the second year, after being cut down in the spring and grown along out of doors in pots as we do azaleas, they make fine plants. These also are usually rather early but they are easily retarded by keeping very cool.

Palm Seeds.

We have lately had another failure with a few thousand seeds of Kentias Belmoreana and Forsteriana and feel sure this time it was not our fault, for we took the precaution to sow the seeds directly they were unpacked from the cases and sowed them in flats in a mixture of loam and leaf mould, giving them a very warm bench. It would matter very little what the compost was in which they were sown; if there was any latent vitality in them they would start, but there was not. This leads me to say that there are times when the seedsman or importer is blamed for what is not his fault, simply because the seed is often received, unpacked and allowed to lie around the shed for days, perhaps weeks, before being put into the ground. Particularly is this destructive to kentia seed, and more or less to all palm seeds. As soon as unpacked from what should be air-tight cans or packages, the palm seeds should be sown.

I don't suppose there will be any lawsuit over our ten thousand kentia seeds. I have for many years invariably when failure occurred with flower and garden seeds given the seedsman the benefit of the doubt and laid the blame to unskillful sowing or management, but with these palm seeds when you know the conditions they require and follow them faithfully and none grow it is a good plan not to have paid for the seeds till you see the young plants up.

Abutilon Savitzii.

One of the prettiest flower garden plants of the day is Abutilon Savitzii. As an edging to a bed of dwarf red cannas, such as McKinley or Tarrytown, it is superb. It only wants one pinching when planted out for such a purpose. Its bushy branching habit will do the rest. Trusting you have lifted a few old plants in the fall, a very little cutting back and a temperature of 55 to 60 will soon give you good cuttings. Like all plants that have so much variegation, this abutilon lacks the vigor of many of the old varieties that are of rampant growth and needs more heat. A good warm sunny house is what it wants, but it deserves it, for it is a beautiful plant and unequalled where used as above referred to.

Cypripediums.

The holidays will have cleared you out of two most useful orchid blooms. Cypripedium insigne, with its subdued but delicate colors, is one of the best and most profitable orchids. At no time does this orchid require a warm house. Fifty at night during winter is all that it needs. If they are in sufficiently large pots then at your leisure within a few weeks pull off the old, worn out sphagnum and replace with some fresh.

At no time of the year do cypripediums need or must they have what in other orchids we call a rest. A drying out such as a cattleya or lælia will submit to would much injure a cypripedium. Just keep the surface of the moss moderately moist at this time of year. In April, May and June, when they are making their growth, more moisture and syringing is needed.

If the plants are crowded and need shifting, or if you wish to divide them and increase your stock, now is the proper time to do it. They divide easily. Pull them apart between the crowns into the desired size. Ordinary pots are as good as anything for cypripediums. Fill the pots to within three inches of the top with clean broken crocks. I may as well say here that material, pots and everything connected with orchid culture must be clean. For a compost some growers use a portion of chopped up turfy loam mixed with the sphagnum, but it is not as good as good, clean orchid peat and one-third sphagnum. Add a small quantity of charcoal lumps broken up to the size of peanuts, which helps to keep the compost clean and sweet. Keep the compost well rounded up above the top of the pot. Keep the newly divided plants shaded and out of the draft for the next two months.

Cattleyas.

Cattleya labiata is one of the grandest of this beautiful genus. Pity it cannot be more easily retarded till the holidays. Both it and Cattleya Percivalliana will soon be showing signs of breaking. Whether they are grown on boards, in baskets or pots, they should now be looked over. Thoroughly clean the bulbs and leaves with a sponge and piek out all dead sphagnum and decayed peat, and renew with fresh, clean material. Very little moisture is needed till they begin to make new growths and roots, when an inerease in the supply must be made; 60 degrees at night will do very well for the cattleyas in the winter time.

Smilax.

It will soon be time to sow smilax to renew your bed next July. I have often said a smilax bed never pays so well as the first year of its planting and still feel sure of it. Four crops should be cut from it if it is planted during the first days of July and kept during winter never less than 60 degrees. And it pays to have a good, strong young plant in a 3-inch pot to plant out, so that the first growth it makes after being planted out is strong enough to make a salable string. Sow in flats thickly and keep in a temperature of 60 degrees.

Asparagus.

Asparagus plumosus should also be sown at once, especially if you contemplate planting a bed this summer.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROSES.

Eel Worm.

This much dreaded pest whose habits are so little understood by the ordinary grower should receive more attention than it gets. If every grower had the facility to become acquainted with its habits, method of reproduction, etc., he would be in a position to put up a fair fight. As it is, the enemy generally has possession of the citadel before the grower is aware of its presence. This nematoid, which belongs to the free living (not parasitic) kinds, is found everywhere, in salt and fresh water, in damp earth and moss and among decaying substances, and is always present in rose soils. They are always minute in size and like many other lower forms of animal life are capable of retaining their vitality for a long period, even when dried, which accounts for their wide distribution.

Like most other pests it is more liable to confine its ravages to those plants in which the vitality is low and seldom if ever attacks a house of roses that have been properly handled from the start. Plants which are suffering from this scourge are not fit to propagate from as the vitality is reduced to such a low ebb that even though they can be rooted and made to produce fair looking plants, they are almost certain to fall a prey to the same enemy as soon as root action becomes sluggish in the fall. The only remedy of any worth that I know of is to clear out every affected plant with surrounding soil and replant with vigorous stock. Any remedy that would eradicate or prevent its attacks without destroying the plant would be a great boon to many growers.

Seasonable Hints.

When selecting wood for Beauty cuttings, choose that short jointed stubby wood, which would only be likely to produce short stemmed flowers, thus securing all the cuttings of about the same condition of ripeness, and which root more readily and uniformly than cuttings from long-stemmed wood which cannot possess this qualification. In every Beauty house plants will be found which have an extra crop of fine long robust stems which make no attempt to show buds till late in spring. These are very tempting for cutting wood, especially when other wood is scarce. As

"like begets like" it is wise to pass them by, as an increase of such is neither desirable nor profitable.

The propagating house should now receive a good deal of care and attention. Happy are those who have the good fortune to have a careful and conscientious night watchman. They have a big load of care taken from their shoulders as it is so easy to spoil or seriously injure the prospects of the young stock. A careful examination every morning of the condition of the sand should be one of the first duties of the propagator. He will find some parts of the bench which will be sure to dry out much sooner than others and indiscriminate watering and syringing at this season are almost as ruinous as overdrying. Care should be taken not to allow the temperature of the house to run up with sun heat as until the roots begin to form it takes but little to dry the life out of the leaves. After the cuttings have been in the sand about 28 days, examine from day to day to see if they are sufficiently well rooted to pot. It is seldom that every part of the house advances at the same rate, some positions in the house being more favorable to quick rooting than others. Begin potting as soon as the roots are ¾ or 1 inch in length.

Ribes.

THRIPS.

I want the Review to hunt out a remedy for the thrip pest. There is nothing that the florist needs more light on. My losses through the ravages of thrips during the past two months will reach $4,000. Is there not some way to exterminate them?

We did not notice them till they were quite numerous. As soon as we did know what was the matter we cut every bud that was affected and burned them, sometimes as many as 500 in a day. As we had no greenfly we had not smoked up to that time, but then began smoking two to three times a week and added some red pepper to the tobacco. We think we can now see some signs of getting rid of them. But isn't there some better and surer way? Let every one that has the least light to shed on the subject shed forth now.

CARNATIONS.

Answer to D. C. N.

I know of no varieties of carnations that will do well in the same house with roses which require a night temperature of 58 to 60 degrees. Not only is this at least four degrees too high for the carnations to grow strong and healthy and to produce good stems and blooms, but D. C. N. would find that the carnations during the day would require too low a temperature and entirely too much ventilation to agree with the roses. It would only be a short time and his roses would be full of mildew and bullheads, and with many varieties off color. If he has only one house to plant to these two crops the best thing he can do is to divide the house into two sections and put a few extra steam or hot water pipes into the section planted to roses. This would practically give him two houses at a very little expense. Of course the ventilators would also have to be run separately on each section.

Crooked Stems on Flora Hill.

The plant of Flora Hill you sent me came in good order and the trouble complained of could be seen plain enough. After looking the plant over carefully I do not think the trouble is caused by any constitutional disease and I would not think of pulling up the plants and destroying them. The exact cause of it I am unable to determine, but I am inclined to think that it may be the result of over-feeding or over-forcing, perhaps after a slight check. The plant also appears to have been crowded for want of room. Our Flora Hill which were planted early in August are not nearly so tall yet, the bodies of the plants are still down close to the ground and the stems rise up two feet high and our plants have a much better color, the result apparently of less forcing and feeding. There are also many light spots caused by bacteriosis, which would also indicate a weakened constitution, but there is not enough of it alone to cause any such trouble. The reason I think it may have been caused some time ago (perhaps just before the holidays) is because the young growth is straight and entirely free from the trouble.

I think that if he will cut away the deformed branches, stop all extra feeding except what the soil already contains, run them a little on the dry side and give a night temperature of about 54 degrees he will have no more trouble in that line. I would also naturally avoid those plants when selecting cuttings for next year's stock. I have potted the plant you sent me and will watch for further development and will report later in the season.

Carnation Notes.

Those first cuttings you put in sand last month should be potted as soon as the young rootlets are half an inch long and kept growing right along until planting out time. Use a good soil, the same as you use for filling the benches, but add no bone meal nor any other fertilizer for the first potting. Run the soil through a soil screen so it will be well pulverized. After potting be sure and water well so that the soil is moistened clear through, and shade from the sun for several days, as it will wilt them badly until they become established in the soil. Use 2-inch pots and later shift into 3-inch or even larger if necessary.

Set them on a bench near the glass and where they will get all the sunshine there is. Remember that while the young plant is establishing itself in the pot you are laying the foundation of the future plant and unless it gets a good start you cannot expect to have the best grade of plants. The competition is so strong now that only really high-grade blooms pay the grower for his trouble, and these can be produced only on first-class plants.

There was a time a few years ago when it was thought that just so a cutting had roots and made a fair-sized plant before hard freezing came in the fall it would turn out all right, and in those days there were very few good carnation blooms on the market before the middle of January, but things have changed now and as early as October we have as good blooms as they used to have at any time of the season only a few years back. This may be partly the result of improved varieties, but I am sure it is not that alone, but rather our present way of starting earlier and looking after them closer right from the beginning.

If there is any fungus in your cutting bench, do not pot any cuttings that are the least bit infested with it. They may seem to outgrow it during the spring

THE BENTHEY GREENHOUSES.

We present herewith an engraving from a photograph of the range of five houses erected by Benthey & Co., at New Castle, Ind. The houses are each 28x300, with Garland iron gutters on 2-inch pipe posts set in cement.

The second picture gives a view through the range, showing the tunnel, five feet deep, containing the flows and returns of the heating system. Low pressure steam is used, a good circulation being obtained with but one pound of pressure. The condensation returns by gravity. The 6-inch flow pipe is suspended from the crosspieces that support the cover to the tunnel.

As will be seen by a glance at the picture all the main pipes can be quickly got at in case of necessity and they are also out of the way. Any section of the walk over the tunnel can be quickly removed.

There are four benches to each house, averaging five feet wide each, Mr. Garland's system being followed.

and summer, but next fall after they are housed it will be sure to break out again in the form of stem-rot and you will lose far more than you will by throwing away the bad cuttings. The same may be said of bacteria, but not of rust. We are not so afraid of rust any more as we used to be, and because a variety may have a little rust is no good reason for discarding it if it has no other bad faults. Pick off the diseased blades and spray them as little as possible and do everything you can to produce a tough, healthy grass.

Give the young plants about the same temperature as you do the bloomin plants, and if possible a few degrees lower, say about 48 to 50 degrees if you can give them a separate house. They will appreciate it and make strong, sturdy little plants that will suffer very little when planted in the field, even if it does get pretty cool at night.

A. F. J. BAUR.

MRS. LAWSON CARNATION.

All discussions in regard to the growing of plants are interesting to us. But especially are we interested when the discussion is along lines covering plants and varieties that we grow. And we are interested in comparing the culture of certain varieties with our own method. And thinking that others may be interested in our method likewise, I will give you a comparison of treatment followed in three ways with Mrs. Thomas Lawson carnation.

We planted one house early, the latter part of May, from 3-inch pots in a house with a long span to the south and twenty-five feet wide. We also planted field plants in another house in August. And also shifted plants in spring to 4 and 5-inch pots and plunged in the field, lifted and planted inside latter part of August.

We thought at that time the pot method would prove the best, and would repay for all extra labor, as the plants lifted so nicely, not disturbing the roots any. But they had not made the sturdy growth the field-planted ones had.

The house that was planted in May and grown inside all summer, of course, commenced blooming first. Up to the present time we find no perceptible difference in plunged pot-grown plants or field-grown. In fact, will try no more plunged pots, but field-grown in preference, as they seem to take root sooner. This variety seemed to stand the lifting remarkably well. The house that was planted in May and grown all summer inside produces longer stems, a smoother and more symmetrical flower, while the house that was planted from the field produces more blooms and larger.

We regard Mrs. Thomas Lawson as one of the best carnations of recent years' introduction. I think it a moneymaker for the grower, for if grown in a temperature of 55 degrees at night the flowers are not inclined to split, but if the cold should compel the temperature to fall considerably below that the result would be a number of split calyxes.

A desirable flower for the retailer, owing to its large size, strong, stiff stem and deep pink color, which under gaslight has the appearance of red in color. It is also a splendid keeper.

It takes a little longer time, owing to its large size, for it to mature its flowers than a number of other varieties. It is a continuous and free bloomer, as it does not crop for us. It has been in constant bloom all fall and winter. It is a variety that is healthy. It is not subject to rust nor bacteria. It is a variety that should be grown from early struck cuttings. We are so convinced of this fact that we have already rooted and potted a good many thousand of them.

We always grow our young plants in pots and shift them from 2¼-inch to 3-inch, and if necessary to 4-inch, should the weather be still too cold to plant them in the open ground, and the plants too far advanced or liable to become pot bound, as we consider it injurious to a carnation plant to become pot bound.

Mrs. Lawson is in greater favor today than it was a year ago. And I would recommend it for a further trial, as I believe it has come to stay.

THE AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

With the annual meeting of this society at Indianapolis just a clear month ahead, the attention of carnation growers, and especially members of the society, will naturally be turning in this direction and preparations in order for what will no doubt be the grandest exhibition in its history.

I believe it to be the duty of every member to do his utmost to assist in making this meeting a pronounced success. Of course with President Berterman and his able assistants in charge it could not well prove anything else. Yet each individual member has a part to perform besides going to see the exhibits of others. Were all to go for this purpose alone it would simply mean a failure.

Let each member (or friend) of the society make up his mind to show something. If your exhibit is creditably well grown put it up. How often do we hear some one say, "If I had brought my so and so, why I could have —— ——." Don't leave them at home. Trot them out. You may be surprised at your success. Don't be always afraid of "the other fellow's" exhibit. Many times it never will materialize. We can't all get first place (and how some fellows do hate to show unless they are sure of it). You may be second, third or fourth down the row and yet put up a grand exhibit.

"In unity is strength," and just in proportion to that unity of purpose will the success or failure of this coming meeting be recorded.

Another very important feature is, If you have anything new to put up on the market or on exhibition tell all frankly, of its qualities, good or bad. You will be more respected by your fellow florists for so doing. It will pay best in the end, as it will be found out in a short year anyway.

Of course local growers will have a decided advantage over those from a distance, who have to contend against heavy odds, but I for one mean to make an extra effort to get my exhibit there. If I fail it will be only what others have done before.

THE BEST CARNATIONS.

In my answer to inquiry as to the best varieties of carnations to grow, giving one each in pink, scarlet, white, yellow and fancy, I confined myself strictly to one variety of each while Mr. Baur and Mr. Herr have gone along down the line somewhat. As I see the inquiry is signed "Conn." my native state, I feel in justice to the nutmeg gentleman that I must add a few remarks, especially about the pink varieties.

I have on trial twelve plants of Mrs. Nelson, the Indianapolis seedling, which for that shade of pink puts Ethel Crocker, Joost, or any other variety of that shade out of the race altogether in point of productiveness, size, length of stem, habit of growth, form of bloom, and last, but not least, selling qualities. It is a high grade flower, bringing 75 cents to $1 per dozen, and its record by the 15th to the 20th of January will be eight blooms to the plant and plenty coming along.

I think it hardly time to refer to Prosperity, as it is too soon to give a decided opinion.

As to Lawson requiring skillful handling, I would ask Mr. Baur if he knows of any up-to-date carnation not requiring skill, that is, to be anywhere near the band-wagon.

Hartford is in Connecticut, and when "Conn." is in Hartford, will be pleased to have him call and see me.

THE GOV. WOLCOTT CARNATION.

Owing to numerous inquiries regarding the Gov. Wolcott carnation, I think it only fair and my duty toward the trade in general to answer those questions through the trade papers, so that all desirous of purchasing stock may know the true character of this variety.

Gov. Wolcott is a white seedling of 1899, from Flora Hill and Lawson, producing blooms of fine form and substance, with a uniform average of three inches in diameter, on long, stiff, wiry stems, two to three feet in length.

The habit of the plant is almost ideal, healthy and vigorous, and like the Lawson (its pollen parent) keeps throwing a succession of new shoots from its base.

Its season of blooming is later than Flora Hill and much earlier than White Cloud or Lorna, coming into bloom early in November and continuing to give a succession of grand attractive flowers all through the season. It is a productive, fancy, commercial white, a splendid keeper and shipper.

A vase of 100 blooms was certificated by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at their November exhibition, 1901.

Its Faults.—Splits some during the short dark days of winter, but in very small proportion. A month late in coming into bloom to make an all-season variety, but worthy of a fair trial by all.

GOOD CUT OF WHITE CLOUD.

We have a house of White Cloud carnations, 22x200, and from Dec. 20 to Dec. 31 inclusive we cut 8,496 flowers, all on 24-inch stems, which wholesaled at as high as $8 per 100.

We had more of them than anticipated, so on Monday morning before Christmas we decided for the first time in the season to send 1,000 to Chicago on consignment. It was the lot a correspondent soon after described a "superb lot of white" which arrived late.

The Market.

The cut flower market is buoyant. Prices of choice roses have an upward tendency, with supply rather limited. Last week's quotations will apply excepting that those figures are held more firmly. Pink and white roses have been going well, even the poorer grades. One dealer laughingly said it was harder to get them than to sell them. Golden Gates have in some cases served where Brides could not be obtained. Carnations are in over supply and have fallen badly. There is a fair demand, but every one seems to be in full crop now. Last Saturday the street got up some lots at $10 and even $7.50 a 1,000—poor stuff, but many had been fair; $1.50 per 100 buys nice ordinary stock, while $2 and $3 is the price for select; fancies bring $4 and $5 per 100. Edward Reid has a fine red seedling in this class.

White sweet peas are to be had now in addition to pink; $1.50 to $2 per 100 is the price. Single violets continue in oversupply. The small flowers are sold at so many bunches for $1; the fine singles bring 50 to 75 cents per 100; doubles sell well at $1.25 to $1.50 per 100. Cypripediums are moving better than at any time since Christmas. Cattleyas and other orchids are rather scarce. There is hardly any local supply and there is certainly an opening here. Green goods are in demand. Valley is going well; Romans and paper whites, slowly; freesias are more plentiful.

W. K. Harris has had tulips since New Year's. Scarlet Duc was the first variety; now white and yellow can also be seen in limited quantities; the stems are rather short, but they will soon lengthen like the days.

Holiday Business.

A brief review of the holiday business as compared with previous seasons may prove interesting. Cut flowers—supply greatly increased; more fine stock than ever before; demand sufficient to take everything nice at prices equal to those of former seasons. The grading was closer and poor stuff harder to sell than it used to be. The stuff sold on the street did not deserve a better place. It is a mistake to think that the price of this bruised, discolored or old stock has any bearing on the price of good stock.

Plants—The increase in the demand, both for flowering and foliage plants, was very marked; many more of the former could have been sold. The great difficulty about flowering plants at the holidays is the danger of severe weather; they take such skillful packing to avoid loss. This is true to a lesser extent of foliage plants. This season was very hard on the growers, but easy on the retailers, the weather moderating at just the right time. This risk acts as a check on the development of the plant, especially the flowering plant business, at the holidays.

Notes.

Samuel J. Bunting has his specialty, lilies, under way. He prefers grafted roses to own root stock.

John Devlin has been remarkably successful with carnations this season. He has a fine house each of Hill and Crocker. Dana also does well. Gold Nugget and Melba do not thrive in his soil and will be dropped. He has a nice house of lilies for Easter.

David Cliffe has a nice batch of cinerarias in bloom already. Primroses have done well with him.

George Redles addressed the Germantown Horticultural Society on Monday evening, January 13, on "Stems," taking the stems of orchids as a special feature.

Correction.

Stephen Mortensen's Liberties, mentioned in this column two weeks ago, were unintentionally consigned to Charles Fox. In reality they were handled by Samuel S. Pennock.

Club Meeting.

The January meeting of the club, held on the 7th, was well attended. Vice-President Westcott was in the chair. The following committee report was read by Robert Craig:

Your committee, appointed to ascertain the correct name of the rose which has been variously called Balduin, Red Kaiserin, Columbia and Helen Gould, report that the true name and only authorized name is Balduin.

According to statements of reliable and competent rose growers, the rose, which is a cross between Darwin and Marie van Houtte, was first sent to this country six or seven years ago, when an unnamed seedling, by Peter Lambert, of Trier, Germany, to John Cook, of Baltimore, Md., for trial under glass.

Mr. Cook in describing its good qualities as an outdoor rose said it might be called a "Red Kaiserin," which expression was probably the origin of that name. Mr. Ernst Asmus, of West Hoboken, N. J., procured some plants of it from Mr. Cook and, after growing it for cut flowers, sold the stock of it in the fall of 1899 to Peter Henderson & Co., of New York, under the name of Balduin, which was its true name, given to it by Peter Lambert, of Trier, Germany, "who introduced it to commerce in 1898," in honor of a celebrated bishop, whose monument stands in Trier and is surrounded by a bed of this rose, planted by Mr. Lambert.

Mr. Asmus had sold the cut flowers of this rose under the name of Columbia, but did not sell any plants of it, excepting under its true name Balduin. In the winter of 1899 Messrs. Myers & Samtman, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, imported this rose from Germany under the name of Balduin, and, after growing a considerable quantity of it for cut flowers, sold their stock of it to the Dingee & Conard Co., of West Grove, Pa., who sent it out in 1900 as a premium with their publication "Success with Flowers," calling it a new rose and offering a premium for a name for it. As a large number of the patrons of "Success" suggested the name of Helen Gould this name was given to it, and it was again introduced to commerce by the Dingee & Conard Co. in the spring of 1901.

Your committee strongly deprecate the renaming of this rose or of any plant, as the practice is misleading and tends to confuse and deceive buyers, and must therefore have a bad effect on the plant business generally.

Committee.

The exhibits were a feature. Carnation "Adonis," from Robert Craig & Son, was considered by the committee on exhibits as the finest scarlet carnation ever shown before the club and superior to anything on the market. Theodore Edwards & Bro. showed some new carnations; an unnamed white was large and fragrant. Henry A. Dreer Co. showed their sport from Begonia nana compacta, described in this column two weeks ago. It was greatly admired and promises to be a novelty of great merit. Arthur Herrington, of Madison, showed three vases of Gerbera Jamesoni, the Transvaal or Barberton daisy, believed to be a coming cut flower. The color is bright vermilion; the size three to four inches in diameter; the stems long. Personally I was disappointed in this daisy. Perhaps it will show up better late in the season.

BEGONIAS.

The following letter from an expert begonia grower is of interest:

In your Philadelphia notes under the head of Riverton this week, you refer to a sport from Begonia erecta compacta. Does the erecta compacta belong to the Lorraine type? I know of a sport from the original Lorraine sent out by the Farquhars, of Boston, but this is known as nana compacta, the flowers of which are similar in color to the light pink Lorraine which I grow, and which is pronounced by some Philadelphia retail florists superior on account of its better lasting qualities to all other of the Lorraine varieties. You appear to refer to this incidentally as the pale pink Lorraine.

You also refer to a sport of the "erecta" variety above referred to as having leathery foliage. The light pink Lorraine is far superior in its leathery foliage to the original Gloire de Lorraine. It is strange what a number of sports there are from Lorraine and its sports; I believe there are eight or ten.

EDWIN LONSDALE.

The questions were referred to the Henry A. Dreer Co. and Mr. Eisele's reply appears below.

I am glad that we have someone in the person of Mr. Lonsdale who is keeping us straight on this begonia matter, which certainly has been ever since the introduction of the first Lorraine to America more or less tangled up through carelessness.

In reference to Begonia erecta compacta the name by which this was sent out by the introducer, I find in looking up original correspondence regarding same is "nana compacta," and it was not my desire to intentionally change this name, but it seems to come quite natural to call it "erecta compacta." The name "nana" is a misnomer; the plant as grown here by us is by no means miniature; its habit is erect, the flowers stand more erect, and, while the plant presents a compact, close and dense appearance, it has grown fully as tall with us as either the original type of Lorraine or as Light Pink Lorraine. Unfortunately I find in referring to our catalogues for 1902 that just as I called it erecta compacta in speaking to you that I have also listed it under this name, but I cannot help but feel that the name as called by me more properly describes the variety than the name of nana compacta, though, of course, it should be so listed and sold, and in our next catalogue I shall take care to have this corrected.

Regarding Pale Pink and Light Pink Lorraine I think this part I shall have to leave to you to settle with Mr. Lonsdale. I don't like the word "pale" and I don't think that you can blame this error on me. I think this is strictly on yourself. J. D. EISELE.

The writer certainly did not intend to alter the name of "Light Pink" Lorraine to "Pale Pink." It was merely a descriptive word used by chance. It shall be "Light Pink" Lorraine in future.

A HARDY BORDER.

The border shown in the accompanying engraving is one of the finest in Jackson Park, Chicago, a great variety of herbaceous plants being used, including phlox in variety, Sedum spectabile, helianthus in variety, Acorus, hemerocallis, pyrethrum, funkias, boltonias, irises, aconitums, veronicas, Oriental poppies, rudbeckias, anemones, platycodons, agrostemmas, thalictrums, Clematis Davidiana, delphiniums, dicentras and others.

It would be a hard matter to find a time from early spring to late fall, when some of these are not in bloom.

PITTSBURG.

The Florists' Club.

The regular monthly meeting of the Pittsburg and Allegheny Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held at the store of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., 504 Liberty street, Thursday evening, the 9th inst.

It was a very large meeting. The club now has 118 members, and seven new names were proposed for membership. So well attended and interesting are the meetings that the store of the Cut Flower Co. has become too small for a meeting place and a committee was appointed to look for more roomy quarters. It was the night for nomination of officers for the ensuing year, next meeting being election night. All of the present officers, except the secretary, were renominated, Secretary Langhans, because of increased private business, begged to be excused from further duty. This was regretted by everyone. The following were the nominees: President, William Falconer; vice-president, E. C. Reineman; secretary, H. P. Joslin; assistant secretary, Ernest Ludwig; treasurer, Fred Burki; executive committee, Fred Burki, John Bader and P. S. Randolph.

It was announced that William Loew, was appointed by President Jno. Burton, of the S. A. G. and O. H. as vice-president of that society for western Pennsylvania. This was good news, for Mr. Loew knows everybody and everything in the trade, and everybody likes him and has confidence in him.

It Was New Carnation Night

And a display of the finest carnations ever seen in Pittsburg was placed on the tables before the members. These included all of the new varieties now being sent out for the first time and some sorts that won't be put on the market for a year or more to come. The flowers were magnificent and there wasn't a poor or a sleepy blossom in the room, and for purity, brightness, size, make-up and stand-up-straightness they never have been surpassed.

Fred Burki, of Bellevue, was the orator of the evening, and being one of the best and largest and longest experienced carnation growers in Western Pennsylvania, he spoke pointedly and we listened intently. Of each variety there was a good bunch of flowers. He took up one bunch at a time and showed us the good points or the weak points in the variety, structurally, culturally and commercially.

Good Enough, a fine pure white variety on good wiry stems came from Sidney Littlefield, North Abington, Mass. Mr. Littlefield wrote: "It is a seedling of 1897, from a white seedling pollenated from Lizzie McGowan. It blooms early. Between Oct. 1 and July 1 it has given me 41 blooms to the square foot of bench room."

Estelle, a beautiful even-sized, large scarlet flower, was sent by William Murphy of Cincinnati. He writes: "It is one of our best commercial scarlets and easy to manage. In the field keep it well topped back to make it branch low. Bench it first of September and grow in temperature of 52 deg. to 55 deg. I don't syringe overhead after Dec. 1. It comes in early and keeps in bloom continuously."

Cressbrook came from C. Warburton, Fall River, Mass. It is a big, lovely, strong stemmed, sweet flower.

Norway, pure white, large, perfectly formed blooms on long stiff wiry stems, came from H. Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md. The same firm also sent two '99 seedlings, one

No. 43, pure white, a beautiful and promising flower, and

No. 62, a large, full, finely built, and deeply fringed scarlet.

Governor Wolcott came from Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass. It is snowy white and a big, long stemmed beauty. He writes: "It is a seedling from Flora Hill x Lawson. It is mid-season, coming in after Flora Hill and lasting all winter and spring. Its habit is clean, healthy, vigorous."

Enchantress, also from Mr. Fisher. It is a very large flower, pale blush pink, and in form, size and get-up of bloom, and length and strength of stem not unlike Gov. Wolcott. Mr. Fisher writes of it: "My latest variety and to my mind far ahead of anything I have yet raised. It won't be disseminated before 1903."

Mr. C. W. Ward, Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., sent a generous bunch each of J. H. Manley, Viola Allen, Harry Fenn, Alba and Golden Beauty, and they were magnificent. We noted them as follows.

J. H. Manley, brilliant orange scarlet, large, well built flowers, on long, stiff, wiry stems; prettily fringed, very sweet, and a good keeper. Lovely.

Viola Allen, a variegated, fancy flower, white ground, splashed and penciled with rose pink; large, fine form, sweet and with good stiff stems. Very beautiful.

Harry Fenn, rich, glowing crimson, large, full, fine form; rich, clove fragrance; stout, long, wiry stems; a good keeper. A superb flower.

Alba, the largest of all whites; of perfect purity in color and fine form and fragrance. Its stems are stiff and wiry, but not as long as those of the other sorts from the same garden. A magnificent carnation.

Golden Beauty, pale yellow penciled and tipped with pink. Large, well built perfect flowers on good, stout stems.

Gaiety came from E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Indiana. It is a variegated flower, white and scarlet, not unlike Bradt; it is large, full, fringed and very pretty, and has a good stem.

Adonis, also from the E. G. Hill Co. Intense scarlet; very large, full, well built, perfect flowers; on stout, erect stems 2 feet long. Magnificent! And a splendid keeper. Mr. Burki exclaimed: "That's the finest carnation I ever saw!" Julius Ludwig said he could get $2.50 a dozen at Christmas for the flowers in the Allegheny market, and P. S. Randolph, of Randolph & McClements, of the East End, Pittsburg, said he could get $5 a dozen for them in his business. Why, the stems were as stiff and erect as a walking cane. And even now—six days after they left Richmond—a bunch of these carnations on a side table near me as I write are still stiff, upright and in fine condition; we shortened their stems a little each day and changed the water.

The president then appointed a committee of experts to examine and report on the varieties. It was suggested to the president that in some eastern cities when a lot of flowers like these are sent from outside growers to a club meeting, that after the meeting the flowers are auctioned off for the benefit of the club But he wouldn't listen to it. "Never in Pittsburg!" he declared. So every member gathered up a bloom or two of each variety and carried them home. Then the flowers will again undergo another criticism. The wife and the children must admire and criticise them and the men and the boys in the greenhouses next morning must see and have their say about them, and resolve to beat them if they can. And thus is evolved "that noble contention or rather emulation of who best can work" and get the best results.

A Cactus House.

A new cactus house 75 ft. long, 36 ft. wide and 19 ft. high at ridge is to be added to the Phipps conservatories at Schenley Park. It will be a curvillinear structure and of similar design and build as the other conservatories. Lord & Burnham Co. have the contract. Price, $9,000, with $400 additional for inside rock work. This is another donation from Mr. Henry Phipps. P. A.

BUFFALO.

It is the general opinion that business has been rather quiet for the past week, enlivened with a few weddings and balls to make different ones feel good who were favored with the orders. The finest decoration of the season was a ball given by a Delaware avenue matron in honor of her grandson. The house is one of the finest on this beautiful avenue, and the decorations were elaborate on this occasion. More than one florist helped to make the house beautiful, but the largest share fell to the skill of Mr. J. H. Rebstock.

Other parties of lesser magnitude help out the season, but I feel sure I am correct in saying that it is not quite as gay as the season should be. This does not seem to make any difference in the price of flowers, and for good flowers both retail and wholesale prices are what the stock market would call "firm," especially the latter, so that shows that the supply is not yet overdone, at least at this time of year.

Edward Giddings, of Corfu, has sold one acre of land, on which are his three carnation houses, to a Buffalo man. I will get you his name later. He is a railroad man who has met with an accident, but is recovering, and would prefer carnation growing to railroading. He knows no more about the business than he does of the future world, but we wish him success in both. Why don't these men who wish to change their profession seek something easy—real estate or preaching, for instance? But no; they will tackle something that requires both brains and close application.

Daniel B. Long, our well-known and artistic citizen, has invented a sort of Mother Hubbard bag for delivering plants in cold weather. We have tried a few dozen, and must confess (which is a great pleasure) that they are a most useful appliance. I won't pretend to describe them, for they will be seen by all florists and possibly inspected before purchased, but they are a neat, quick and most handy arrangement and will save hours of labor in tying and paper in wrapping. Now, if Dan will only shoulder a few of these, or, rather, put them in a grip and visit a thousand florists, he will do well, for they are bound to meet with a ready demand. But he won't; in two weeks he will be working hard on some other more or less brilliant idea.

The National Bowling Congress meets here next week, with eight grand new alleys to play on. It promises to eclipse in every way the meetings held in New York and Chicago, and as Chicago and Cincinnati and many other cities are represented, we will expect that some of these champions will be florists. Surely Chicago can't send a first-class team without including Mr. George Asmus, and, we hope, several more. If George makes an average of 150 we will take great pleasure in presenting him with a black horsehair parlor set.

We have just heard that Mr. Arnold Ringier, late of Chicago, late of the Alpine valleys, is in town. Trust we may have the pleasure of an introduction.

NEW YORK.

Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Florists' Club Monday night about fifty members were present, and President Sheridan made an interesting address, full of good advice. An associate membership was suggested, as well as many methods of adding to the interest in the club. Prospects were considered bright, and the coming flower show was dilated upon and a sincere promise made as to personal effort. The other officers also made pleasing addresses.

Mr. C. W. Ward exhibited the same varieties of carnations shown by him at the recent lecture, and Mr. C. Warburton, Fall River, Mass., was present with a vase of fifty blooms of his grand new pink carnation Cressbrook.

Mr. O'Mara gave an interesting talk regarding the flower show, with information as to prizes and the premium list. The estimate as to cost was placed at $4,000. Suggestions as to novel features were made. The Society of American Artists may co-operate with the club. Flowering plants are to receive special recognition, and very liberal prizes will be offered. The carnation schedule will be especially full and complete. Retail florists will be allowed to make any exhibit in the line of table and mantel decorations, etc., for exhibition only, using their business cards and competing for no prizes. The selection of a manager was left to the exhibition committee.

The treasurer's report showed a balance of nearly $600 on hand, and there are 233 members on the books. Twenty-seven new members were elected during 1901. The secretary made a full and complete report of the work of the club during the past year. It was decided to in future issue a printed report.

Mr. F. Kelsey addressed the club on the subject of the San Jose scale and prospective legislation concerning it. Mr. Ward told of his expensive experiments in destroying the pest by fumigation. He thought that legislation was the proper remedy.

The various standing committees for the year were appointed.

A Carnation Lecture.

At the meeting of the New York Horticultural Society Jan. 8 Mr. C. W. Ward, of Queens, delivered his interesting lecture to as large an audience as has been gathered in the rooms of the American Institute under the society's auspices.

The lecture was illustrated by many stereopticon pictures and a great display of cut blooms. He traced the history of the carnation from 300 years before Christ, when the Greeks adored it, down through all its stages to the present day. He compared the present development with the English carnation of seventy years ago and dwelt especially upon the fact that our plants are now being exported in large quantities to Europe.

He gave special praise to the American Carnation Society as a powerful factor in the march of improvement during recent years.

The pictures illustrated clearly the processes of development from a 5-petal flower, an inch in diameter, to the 100-petal 4-inch beauty of today. Reproductions of many of these pictures appeared in the REVIEW of May 10, 1900. Mr. Ward stated that carnation culture in this country employs 5,000 people, produces over 100,000,000 of blooms yearly, with a value of $8,000,000.

The display of cut blooms was especially good. In addition to a vase of fifty seedlings, some of them of great size and beauty, there were vases of Lorna, Prosperity, Gov. Roosevelt, Gov. Bliss (the new scarlet), Dorothy Whitney, Harry Fenn, Harvard Crimson, Golden Beauty (the new yellow), Viola Allen, and the latest of all, Mrs. Theo. Roosevelt, a pink of the Lawson type, but lighter in color, that should become a very popular commercial variety.

In addition to the above there were some handsome orchid flowers shown.

Various Items.

The second annual beefsteak dinner of the New York Florists' Club will be given Saturday evening, Feb. 8, in the club parlors. Elaborate cuisinic and vaudevilleic preparations are being made. The tickets are $3 and provision will be made for 100.

The guarantee list for the fall show of 1902 already approaches $3,000. The various committees are hard at work and the show will not fail of success through any lack of early preparation, efficient management and novelty.

Next Monday evening will be "prize" bowling night on the New York alleys, to which all florists are invited and in which every contributor of a prize worth $1 or more can participate.

Arthur Merritt, of J. H. Small & Sons, whose accident at the Waldorf-Astoria while engaged in arranging Christmas decorations has kept him on the shelf ever since, is now out on crutches, but it will be some time before his broken ankle will allow him to practice his usual agility.

Albert Wadley, of Wadley & Smythe, the Fifth avenue florists, is still in the hospital and will be for some time. His injuries in the awful accident in the N. Y. C. tunnel last week will fortunately not prove fatal, but his escape from death was a narrow one. Both legs were broken below the knee. Mr. Chas. See, of Siebrecht & Son, who was on the train, escaped with a few scratches and bruises. Other florists living at New Rochelle who usually take the train that was wrecked luckily all took earlier or later trains the morning of the disaster.

A rumor is in circulation to the effect that the venerable Thirty-fourth street cut flower market and the Twenty-third street "exchange" may soon be doing business under one roof, a consummation devoutly to be wished.

Tree planting in the streets of New York is being earnestly agitated by the different local societies.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions for Jan. 5–11.

Very quiet along the "Lordly Charles!" Everything is really short except nights and floral accounts. Cash receipts particularly so. Pinks and bulb goods come the nearest to being plentiful, but there are not enough of the former to supply anything like the traffic we ought to be having.

Prices have been quite stationary since New Year's. American Beauties run from six inches to three feet in length at from $8 to $75 per 100; other red roses average small, and to the best of my knowledge do not beat $16 per 100, with $4 as a starting point. Pink and white ones are coming very good and range from $3 to $25 per 100. Yellow ones and Morgans, small and reasonable in figure, the former very scarce. First-class carnations are not overabundant even for so slim a trade. Five dollars will probably reach almost anything now being cut and it does not wrench the buyers' conscience to offer less than $1 per 100 on poor colored ones. The use of short-stemmed white ones quite often saves that color from the rough usage given the colored ones.

Did you ever notice that whenever any especial line of goods is particularly cheap and plentiful buyers do not so much ask the price as they try to ascertain how large a quantity can be purchased for a certain number of dollars. So it is just now upon the narcissus and hyacinth question. The grower plaintively offers six dozen for $1. The buyer peremptorily demands seven or eight. A compromise at last is made gauged by the number of dollars' worth changing hands. It all reminds me of a friend in the fruit business who tells me he asks $5 per barrel for his best Baldwin apples and then "listens." Flower men have to do more or less "listening," too. Violets are good and fairly plentiful at about $1.

The second chapter of our account of Wm. Sim's Christmas cut of his single ones would relate that he pulled 35,000 of them in two days at that.

Lilies, stevia and valley, I think, completes the regular bill of fare. Single yellow jonquils, however, are usually to be found and a very few double ones, at 4 cents each, so far. Now and then sweet peas take a glance into the market. Other blossoms are very irregular indeed, but tulips will be coming in reliable quantities immediately; they are now going at 4 cents.

Bowling does not seem to cut much of a figure among us on the "stern and rock bound coast," but there is an awakening interest in the grand historic game of checkers. Nothing professional has yet been found among the hose wielders and blossom peddlers, but several have been found who can move very ingeniously and beat the other fellow unless he does something to prevent.

Arthur Deady, the South Boston florist, fell, in his store, a week ago, breaking an arm and sustaining such other injuries that he is not expected to fully recover until spring. J. S. Manter.

ST. LOUIS.

Club Meeting.

The first meeting in the new year of the St. Louis Florists' Club was fairly well attended, twenty members being present, with President Meinhardt in the chair. The main discussion was World's Fair matters which took up the greater part of the afternoon. The exhibition committee made a report of all money on hand and was ordered to pay all prizes in full. The World's Fair committee reported that very few of the members had paid their assessment. The final windup of the long discussion was that a committee of five was appointed to visit those who have not paid. Mr. C. C. Sanders will look after the West End; J. J. Beneke, downtown; E. Schray, South End; President Meinhardt, North End, and Henry Emundt, Belleville. Any member who has not paid his assessment should do so at once.

At the next meeting of the club it is proposed to hold our annual carnation meeting, and all growers of new carnations are requested to send a few blooms of their new ones and instructions as to how best to grow them. The date of this meeting will be Thursday afternoon, February 13. All carnations sent in care of our wholesale men will be taken care of, and the trustees will see that they are properly staged. Two splendid essays will be read on carnations at this meeting. Every florist in the city is invited to attend regardless of membership.

The Market.

The past week receipts of cut stuff of all kinds were heavy and, as the demand was light, dull trade was the general complaint throughout the city. At the wholesale houses they say that local as well as outside demand has been very slow and the fakir is again having a harvest as the weather is fine and warm.

Carnations which have been scarce all along are now coming in in 1,000 lots and those which only a week ago were bringing from $4 to $6 per 100 go begging at from $5 to $7.50 per 1,000. All stock coming in now is of good quality.

With roses it is a little different, for they do not seem to be a glut at present, though they probably will be by the end of the week if this fine weather continues. They are now bringing from $2 to $6 for Maids and Brides; Meteors, Gates and Perles bringing about the same; Beauties of the first grade are as yet in good demand, with shorts quite plentiful at the usual price for short stuff.

The violet market is also down, and fine Californias are selling from 50 to 75 cents per 100; double, 75 cents to $1, with plenty of them in the market.

Bulb stock is a big glut and lots of it is going to waste at this writing, especially Romans and paper whites which are selling very cheap; $1.50 to $2 is the price. Valley is also plentiful and sells at from $3 to 4 per 100. Callas sell at 15 cents. A few fine sweet peas are in the market and bring $1 per 100. All greens are at a standstill with plenty of them in the market at the usual prices.

Notes.

Chas. G. Connon, Jr., doing business at 4227 Olive street, made an assignment last Friday for the benefit of his creditors. Mr. R. F. Tesson was appointed trustee. This firm is in no way connected with Chas. Connon, Sr. & Son, of Webster Grove, Mo.

Mr. Thomas Carroll, who was at one time a leading carnation grower and who was stricken blind a few years ago, will leave for California soon, accompanied by his youngest son.

Mrs. Fillmore, mother of Frank Fillmore, is very ill at her home and, as she is 84 years of age, fears are entertained that she may not recover.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers made a fine decoration at the Nugent wedding last week which was reported as an elaborate affair.

Robert F. Tesson is now cutting a fine lot of bulb stuff.

Mr. Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., is sending a fine lot of carnations to this market. His Dorothy, Mary Wood and Norway are especially fine and find ready sale.

Adolph Fehr and Henry Emundt, of Belleville, and F. J. Ammann, of Edwardsville, were visitors last Thursday and attended the club meeting in the afternoon.

Fred Ammann reports that the cayenne pepper cure recommended by our Ribes, is doing good work, and that it is not only good for thrips, but other things as well, as he is free from such pests as greenfly and red spider.

Mr. J. D. Carmody, of Evansville, Ind., was in town last Thursday on his way home from Hot Springs, Ark. Mr. Carmody is much improved in health, and expects to see his friends at Indianapolis next month.

Bowling.

The St. Louis Florists' Bowling Club will on Monday night, Jan. 20, have a ladies' night. The fun will begin at 8 o'clock and all members are requested to bring their ladies. An elegant lunch will be spread and all who come will have a good time.

The florists' league team has now rolled 210 games in the league, and the following official record was made by them, which shows up quite well:

	No. Games.	Total.	Average.
A. Y. Ellison	42	7,368	175 18-42
Carl Beyer	21	3,517	167 10-21
John Sturtz	42	6,905	164 17-42
J. J. Beneke	42	6,886	163 40-42
C. A. Kuehn	42	6,747	160 27-42
Subs	21	3,201	152 9-21
	210	34,624	164 184-210

On last Thursday night the team captured all three games from Uncle Sam's representatives in the league. Ellison and Beyer rolled high, and Sturtz, Beneke and Kuehn followed. The scores loked like this:

Florists:	B.	E.	1	2	3	Total.	Ave.
J. J. Beneke	5	6	145	192	132	469	156 1-3
C. A. Kuehn	2	8	174	147	145	466	155 1-3

The Market.

The supply of roses has shortened up considerably, and prices of good roses are very firm. Some extra select Brides and Maids reach as high as $10, though the bulk of the stock sells at $5 and $6 and some at as low as $3 and $4. In carnations the case is decidedly different. The supply is abundant and prices have weakened considerably, especially on the poorer grades. Few bring better than $3, and the bulk of the sales seem to be made at from $1 to $2, and we hear of sales at as low as $8 per 1,000. White seems in best demand at present. There is a decided oversupply of violets and prices are weak.

Carnation Meeting.

The annual carnation meeting of the Florists' Club will be held on Wednesday, January 22, at 8 p. m. There will be the usual exhibition of new carnations, and the club's certificate or honorable mention will be awarded to exhibitors of deserving varieties. This meeting and exhibition is always one of the most interesting during the year and the most largely attended. Flowers for exhibition should be addressed to Mr. E. F. Winterson, 47 Wabash avenue, who will see that flowers sent from a distance are properly staged.

Death of Walter Heffron.

We deeply regret to have to record the death of Walter S. Heffron, which took place at 10 a. m. last Monday as the result of the attack of penumonia reported last week.

A week ago last Saturday he was apparently in perfect health. Monday he was too ill to come down town, but he was not considered in any danger. Tuesday the doctor pronounced it pneumonia, and on the following Monday he died. He was 35 years old and leaves a widow and three young children.

Mr. Heffron was a son of D. S. Heffron, prominent for over half a century in American horticulture, and he had been connected with the trade in various departments all his life. For the last year or more he has been manager of the cut flower department at McKellar & Winterson's.

He was very popular, and the report of his demise in the prime of his early manhood was received with the deepest sorrow by all.

The bowling club, of which he had been a member, naturally omitted the usual games last Tuesday evening, and instead the members and other florists to the number of twenty-two met at the usual time and then in a body took a train to Mr. Heffron's late home at Washington Heights, carrying with them numerous floral tributes, and there took a last look at their friend and comrade.

The design sent by the Florists' Club was a large crescent wreath on base, standing three feet high, and very richly made. The bowling club sent a 36-inch wreath of galax leaves, valley and violets, tied with white satin ribbon, upon which the name of the club was lettered. A large wreath of Marguerites was sent by Kennicott Bros. Co. Frank Garland sent a large open book on standard. One of the pages was of ivy leaves, with a garland of valley across it. From McKellar & Winterson came a broken fence, very richly made. It was made in accordance with a suggestion offered by Mr. Heffron some time ago when funeral designs were under discussion. C. A. Samuelson sent a large wreath of leucothoe and cattleyas, and the George Wittbold Co. a large bunch of cycas, cocos and croton leaves and other foliage. There were numerous other smaller designs, and other large ones were sent to the funeral, which took place Wednesday, and at which President Winterson, of the Florists' Club, acted as one of the pallbearers.

On Wednesday a very handsome crescent wreath was sent by the wholesale florists.

Though the funeral was private, President Winterson of the Florists' Club, was present on special invitation and at the conclusion of the minister's remarks was called upon to say something regarding Mr. Heffron's associations with his business acquaintances. This he did in a very feeling manner. Mr. Heffron's aged father was much affected by the sympathy and friendship shown by his son's business friends and brokenly expressed his grateful appreciation to them all.

Mr. Heffron carried life insurance amounting to $3,000, and his family will receive this amount.

Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago was held at 630 Rialto Building last Tuesday afternoon. The treasurer made his annual report, showing that the society came out about even on the last exhibition. It was suggested that the usual fall exhibition be omitted next November, and that a spring exhibition be given in its place the following March. It was thought by a number that this would be a desirable variation from the usual programme. There was also a suggestion as to holding the next exhibition in the Coliseum instead of in the Auditorium.

The annual election of officers was laid over till an adjourned meeting, to be held January 25, and a meeting of the Executive Committee was called for 2 p. m. next Saturday to discuss plans for reorganization on a more effective plan, their suggestions to be acted upon at the general meeting on January 25. The officers of the Florists' Club will be invited to be present.

Seven new members were added to the roll of the society.

Various Items.

Mr. O. P. Bassett starts this week for Palm Beach, Fla., where he will remain until March.

Andrew Peterson is sending finely grown stevia to McKellar & Winterson, and it sells readily at $2 per 100. He has a large house devoted to stevia, and finds it a very profitable crop when really well grown.

W. E. Lynch, manager of E. H. Hunt's cut flower department, is confined to his home with diphtheria.

The Gardener Seed Co., of this city, has been incorporated to deal in seeds, plants and bulbs. Capital stock, $2,500. Incorporators: A. A. Heyman, H. Hingham and F. V. Campe.

The annual bowling match between the Chicago and Milwaukee florists' bowling clubs will take place at Milwaukee the night of January 25. Quite a large party will go from here as participants and spectators.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

Banquet of Dutchess Co. Hort. Society.

'Twas a most memorable night—a night to be remembered with all that is happiest. It was the 8th of January, at the Nelson House, Poughkeepsie, and the occasion was the seventh annual banquet of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society. Not in the whole history of horticultural societies anywhere has such a gathering been equaled. Could another such an assemblage be got together to do honor to Queen Flora? All the ex-officers and the present officers of Poughkeepsie and Dutchess county were present, as were also all the most prominent business men in that locality.

This annual dinner has become famous; it is the great event to which all look forward to attending and it speaks volumes and volumes to the credit of the great workers, the gardeners and florists of that section that they have succeeded in building up such a powerful society for this brilliant assemblage we write of also belongs to the society and takes deep interest in the furtherance of all that is good in horticulture.

But, to the dinner. There were over 100 present and the menu would have done credit to a Shanley or a Delmonico. The mayor, Mr. Hines, presided and there were two toastmasters, Mr. Frank B. Lown and Mr. Hasbrouck, two of the leading lawyers in the county. The entire party was furnished with boutonnieres of violets by Mr. Bahret and others and the tables were prettily decorated with flowers donated by several florists and gardeners. Mr. W. G. Gomersall fixed up one table with Eucharis amazonica and Euphorbia jacquiniaeflora which attracted much attention, as such flowers are now too rarely seen during the evening.

Mr. Bahret presented Mayor Hines with a grand bunch of violets in token of regard for the interest that gentleman showed in the recent violet exhibition.

When the good things edible were disposed of and the cigars were in evidence, the toastmaster began drawing out the fun. The subjects selected were all of a humorous trend though the speakers oft wafted into the realms of seriousness. Mr. Derrick Brown responded to "The Ripest Fruit Falls First."

"Be they strangers, or be they kin

was responded to by the newly elected president of the society, Mr. E. Lyman Brown, who has brought ninety members into the society during the past year. "The Confessions of a Seedsman" was most ably responded to by Mr. P. O'Mara of New York City. He read a copy of the "bill" that should be passed by congress and kept the party in fine humor by the broadness of his "Confession." Richard E. Connell, editor of the Poughkeepsie News-Press, spoke most eloquently to the toast, "Music and Flowers," and we have never heard a finer oration. It was a grand triumph and those present showed their appreciation by extended applause. In the absence of Mr. C. W. Ward of the Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., J. I. Donlan of New York City, was called upon to speak to "How To Get Rich by Floriculture." Judge Samuel K. Phillips replied to "Justice if it Takes a Leg," and Mayor George M. Hines responded to "How it Feels to be 'It' in a City," and thus in wit and humor and everything that is powerful to cement strongly together goodfellowship passed the night away.

Among those present were: John Whyte and D. McFarlane, representing the Tarrytown Horticultural Society; Mr. Taylor, the Wappinger Falls Dahlia Society; W. C. Russell, the Millbrook Club; P. O'Mara, Leonard Barron and J. I. Donlan, of New York City; Stanton Rockefeller, of Rhinebeck, N. Y.; W. J. Saltford, Peter Devoy, Chas. Mitchell and W. G. Gomersall.

In the afternoon the society held its regular meeting and the following were elected to serve for this year: President, E. Lyman Brown; vice president, W. G. Saltford; secretary, Harold Cottam; treasurer, Chas. Mitchell. The society has over 200 members and is on the way to prosperity.

Owing to the wreck on the New York Central a magnificent lot of carnations, sent by C. W. Ward, of Queens, intended to deck the banquet tables, did not arrive till next morning. We had the pleasure of seeing them and the city officials greatly appreciated them.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The condition of this market during the first part of last week was anything but encouraging. It seemed as if the bottom had dropped out of things. The store men said they were doing next to nothing and consequently the wholesale men and growers were in the same boat. The weather was warm and bright and great quantities of stock that should have been cut for Christmas was forced open. As a rule it was first-class stock, too, but for some reason it had no keeping qualities. Roses were soft and carnations went to sleep almost on the day they were cut. This brought in a good many kicks, of course, so the little business that was doing had its drawbacks. For the first time this season really first-class roses and carnations went to the dump. Prices went down, too, and carnations were selling from 50 cents to $2 per 100, in all grades. A great many roses went at job lot prices, some as low as $10 per 1,000. Some of the best stock sold slowly at $4 per 100. Bulbous stock did not move at all, and good Romans and narcissus brought $1.50 to $2 per 100, when anybody wanted them.

There is no telling where this state of affairs would have ended, had it not been that there was a decided change in the weather. The thermometer dropped to about 20 degrees and dark, cloudy weather set in. The supply shortened almost instantly and the demand increased in proportion. By Saturday the glut seemed to be a thing of the past and stock was beginning to get scarce. The market, beginning this week, is on a good business basis. There is good demand, and the supply is just about equal to it. Prices are again back to the normal for this time of year.

Roses are selling at from 3 to 8 cents. Ordinary carnations from $1 to $2 per 100; fancies, 3 to 5 cents; violets, 50 cents to $1.50 per 100; Romans and narcissus, 2 to 3 cents; valley, 3 to 4 cents; callas, $1 to $1.50 per doz; smilax, $12.50 to $15.

One of the scarcest articles at present is Harrisii lilies. There is a very good demand for them, and they readily bring $15 per 100.

There is still a good demand for the Perle rose, and but few establishments grow it. When any come to the wholesale houses they meet ready sale, at present bringing from 4 to 5 cents for fair stock.

Another rose that sells on sight and is seldom seen is Sunrise. Although this rose is somewhat of a novelty, and perhaps if grown very extensively would not find a ready market.

Meeting of the Florists' Club.

A meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held in the club rooms in the Jahez Elliott flower market Saturday evening. Very little was done in the way of business, and the main topic of conversation was the fast approaching carnation meeting at Indianapolis. There was considerable enthusiasm shown and from present indications there will be some thirty of the Cincinnati boys who will go. Mr. E. G. Gillett informed the members that the Grand hotel, of Indianapolis, has been chosen official headquarters, and a rate of $2.50 and $3 per day, American plan, has been made.

An invitation was extended to all florists passing through the city to make their plans so that they can arrive here on the morning of the 17th. A committee will be ready to show them some of our great carnation establishments, including the plant of Mr. W. K. Partridge, at Bloomhurst, Lockland, O., and Mr. Dick Witterstaetter's. So don't fail to get here in time, as both of these places will be in fine shape and alone well worth the trip to see.

Notes.

Charlie Critchell left Monday night for Atlanta, Ga., to accept a position with Lambert & Co., of that city. It's mighty hard to beat an Ohio man, so Charlie will make business hum.

On Feb. 1 the Cincinnati Cut Flower Co. will remove from their present quarters to 437 Main street.

Mrs. H. A. Kresken is very sick with a partial paralytic stroke caused by hemorrhage of the brain. The sympathy of the craft is extended to her, with hopes of an early recovery.

Mr. John Evans was in town Saturday. He is full of carnation meeting talk, and if you could only hear him talk you would want to pack your grip and start right away so you would be sure not to miss anything.

C. J. Ohmer.

The annual convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society will be held at Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 19 and 20. Prepare now to attend and exhibit.

A Flood.

The severe floods that were prevalent just before Christmas did some damage to the florists' establishments of this city. The grounds around the Hoffman greenhouses were flooded and the water ran into one house, but was soon shut out. G. P. Rawson, being near the river, was on the anxious seat for some time, as the level of the flood rose up into his lower houses, but the waters finally subsided without reaching his fires and the only damage was the chill and set back to the Christmas crops from the ice water bath. It turned very cold that night, but the steam pipes worked all right and kept the frost out.

Carnation News.

Many of the newer carnations are being tried here with varying success.

Mr. John Rudy, at the Strathmont conservatories, is now cutting a splendid lot of Ethel Crocker and believes that much reviled variety is the best of all, if properly grown. His are large, on good stems and do not burst the calyx. His house is a very light one and the stock was planted early. In whites, Rudy has Lorna and Norway doing nicely, but neither can come up to Mary Wood as he grows it; it is full of fine, large blossoms all the time, is a very chaste and beautiful bloom, and if one can raise all he wants of that kind he need not look any further for a white variety. Rudy has a few seedlings that are interesting and among them a very promising, large, brilliant scarlet, on a good stiff stem. It has fine form and fragrance and may prove to be a winner. His roses and thousands of young bedding plants all show good care.

H. N. Hoffman's carnations are producing large quantities of flowers now. America and Estelle are his best reds and the latter is certainly fine. Mary Wood and White Cloud are both producing finely and small tests of Norway and Queen Louise are giving satisfactory returns. Looking over the benches of his Lawson house is like looking over a traditional wheat field, and it has been steadily at it since the middle of November. Genevieve Lord is doing finely here, the only criticism that can be offered is its lack of size to come up to the new standard. Morning Glory seems to be the best pale pink yet disseminated and Mr. H. will grow a lot of it next year. Ethel Crocker is doing much better than last year and Scott will be discarded. A small patch of seedlings contains a few interesting things that will be tried another year, and of course more seeds are being formed for further experiments.

The violet beds are loaded with fine flowers and without a spot of disease of any kind. Altogether the place shows the care and intelligence of the foreman, Richard King. The roses are his special pets and they always do well.

Notes.

J. E. Anthony has returned from Bradford, Pa., whither he went in November.

A new competitor in the business is Mr. T. J. Bardeen, who has rented some greenhouses that have been idle for some time. H.

THE BEST CARNATIONS.

I was much interested in the replies to the inquiry of Conn. Was somewhat surprised that Mr. Baur should name Joost in preference to Crocker. It is true that Joost is free but I consider Crocker the best carnation to date. We have been cutting a tremendous number of grand blooms from a limited space. All Mr. Herr says of it is true. He might have praised it at greater length and not have gone astray.

I agree with Mr. Baur as to the two whites, but taking it all in all I get better results from America than from Crane in red. Nixon H. Gano.

Helena, Mont.—C. O. Horn has just finished building a cut flower store to be used and fitted up exclusively for cut flowers and plants. He has also put in a cold storage room for the handling of cut flowers at wholesale. Mr. C. E. Franke, formerly of Memphis, Tenn., putting in his first winter here as manager of the greenhouse department of the Sixth avenue greenhouses, is well pleased with the favorable growing conditions for high quality stock in this state. Mr. Miller, is adding another greenhouse, 100x20, for the growing of spring stock, the house being almost finished. The State Nursery Co. are planning more new carnation houses, besides enlarging their nursery department.

CLEVELAND.

Club Meeting.

At the regular meeting of the Florists' Club last evening one new member was elected, bills covering the expense of the banquet were ordered paid and as no further business was presented the meeting was adjourned and the members proceeded to bowl. Some of the members are showing very great improvement in their delivery and by the time of the next convention there will be some surprises.

It was reported at the meeting last night that about six of our members will attend the carnation meeting next month.

One feature of our club meetings is not patronized as much as it should be, and that is the question box. It is by asking questions that we learn, and it is the discussion that is aroused by the question that makes an interesting meeting.

Various Items.

I am pleased to see the discussion that is going on in the columns of one of our contemporaries, brought out by its Cleveland correspondent, through the assertion that the talk about pickling carnations is most all humbug. For my part, as a grower and retailer, I am compelled to begin saving carnations at least ten days before Christmas and the same at Easter in order to supply the demand on those particular days. If it is done judiciously I believe no harm will come from it.

One of our honored members, Adam Graham, was elected president of one of our banking houses the past week.

Trade here the past week has been a little slow, but there has been no drug in any lines as yet. Daffodils and tulips are becoming more plentiful and carnations are showing up better, with roses about the same.

There has been some complaint about the Bride rose not doing so well in the matter of throwing blooming wood, some claiming that it is deteriorating in value, on that account, as a paying rose.

Our sick are reported as improving.

Mr. Brown, formerly of Mentor, has accepted a position with James Wilson.

TENEP.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA.—The roses, carnations and palms at the establishment of J. W. Dudley & Son are looking fine. G. A. Hiehle has sold his grocery store on Market street and is running his greenhouses on St. Mary's avenue himself.

SEDALIA, MO.—Gelven & Son have bought new ground and glass for the erection of an entirely new greenhouse plant, to be separate from their present establishment and to be devoted to the growing of roses for the wholesale trade. The new plant will have all latest improvements. They report a very satisfactory Christmas trade.

OMAHA.

Club Meeting.

The Omaha Florists' Club met in monthly session in the park commissioner's rooms, there being quite a good representation of the craft present and a great interest taken in the proceedings, as the talk of a banquet in the near future was one of the main topics.

John Bath read a very pointed and concise paper on the handling of cut flowers. This young man deserves credit for his paper, which was well received and showed careful thought.

As the State Horticultural Society holds its annual meeting in Lincoln, many of the Omaha florists will attend, being life members of this society and interested in the premium list for plants and cut flowers at the fall exhibit.

Trade.

The florists have gotten back to a steady business again after their holiday rush and trade is good.

Bowling.

It was decided to meet for bowling every Tuesday evening in the future. Below are the scores of this evening, the florists adjourning to Gate City alleys and hope in future to smoke cigars at J. J. Hess' expense:

Club Entertainment.

The Rhode Island Florists' and Gardeners' Club gave their annual supper, and about thirty-five members and friends were present. The committee arrangements were superb. The newly installed president, Mr. M. Sweeney, filled the chair to perfection and in a pleasing speech introduced the toastmaster, W. E. Chappell. Speeches were in order, and two and one-half hours being the limit, they were taken up with a vim. During the evening the retiring president, Mr. W. Hill, was presented with a silver-mounted gavel on behalf of the club which at once became priceless in his hands. He returned thanks in a manner in which only florists and gardeners can. The results of the evening were some six or eight new members. At a late hour overcoats were in order.

MILDEW ON PAINT.

Would like to know if any readers of the Review have been troubled with a fungus showing through paint of iron-constructed greenhouses, and remedy for same. Palmhouse.

What your correspondent refers to is doubtless mildew on the paint, a trouble quite common in greenhouses having a temperature of from 60 to 70 degrees and the usual high humidity. If the paint is light colored it will become discolored by the mildew and appear as though the origin of the trouble was on the inside. There is likely to be more of the mildew showing on the metal work than on the woodwork, the former being cooler and therefore condensing more of the moisture on its surface. A fungous growth might attach itself to the discolored paint, but we have not seen anything of this sort.

The only damage the metal work is likely to sustain in a greenhouse is corrosion caused by a lack of paint to protect it from the moisture. A greenhouse, particularly one kept at a high temperature, should be painted once in two years. When repainting metal work all corrosion should be carefully removed before the paint is applied, otherwise the painting will be of little benefit. Lord & Burnham Co.

GALVESTON, TEXAS.

At the recent funeral of a prominent citizen some very handsome floral designs were seen. Among them an enormous laurel wreath with crossed palm leaves, upon which were sprays of roses and carnations tied with ribbons. There were many other laurel wreaths, with various combinations of flowers, and many palm sprays with various flowers tied to same with ribbons. Also numerous crosses, pillows, wreaths and bunches of flowers, etc. Many of the arrangements were by Mrs. C. Eickholt, the florist.

CORRECTION.

In the adv. of F. R. Pierson Co., on page 226 of our last issue, the quotations on Japanese fern balls should have been per dozen and per 100 instead of per 100 and per 1,000, making a very decided difference in the prices.

Washington, D. C.—Nine hundred selected buds of Washington's new bridal rose Ivory (the white sport of Golden Gate) were used at the recent diplomatic dinner at the White House.

Champaign, Ill.—Material is being received for the new greenhouse to be erected here by the Illinois Central Railway. When completed the plant will be in charge of Thomas J. Leake of Chicago.

Warren, O.—E. C. Gething has been appointed receiver of the business of Hood & Cox., nurserymen and florists at Hubbard. The firm had five new greenhouses built and a suit started when they disagreed.

Marietta, Ohio.—Schramm Bros. have 10,000 feet of glass here and are getting ready to build three more short span houses to be devoted to roses. Their stock of roses, carnations, palms and pot stuff is in first-class condition and they are doing a good business.

MONROVIA CHRYSANTHEMUM!

THIS is the finest early Mum ever introduced, it is a money-maker for the florist who wants to be early in the market. It is early, it is large, it is fine in color, and stem and foliage as good as the best. This variety was selling for $4.00 per dozen last fall in Chicago when other early yellows went begging at $2.00. It was with me as early as yellow Fitzwygram, but far superior in color, size and everything else. It took Silver Medal or second prize in Buffalo at the Pan-American, for best 50 yellow, 22nd of October, but was ready to cut two weeks before. I have the largest stock of this sterling variety in Ameriea but will not have it long when its full merits are known, so speak quick if you want any. Strong rooted cuttings, $5.00 per 100. Fine strong plants, from 2½-inch pots, $8.00 per 100. I also have a few of Robert Halliday early yellow, which received Gold Medal or first prize at the Pan-American, for 50 yellow. R. C., $5.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $10.00 per 100.

Also, strong rooted cuttings of Timothy Eaton, $5.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $10.00 per 100. White Bonnaffon, Superba, F. B. Hayes, Goldmine, Golden Beauty, Nellie Pocket, $2.00 per 100. J. K. Shaw, Lavender Queen, Golden Wedding, Fee du Champsaur, $1.50 per 100. Major Bonnaffon, White and Pink Ivory, White and Pink Glory of Pacific, Lady Fitzwygram, Mrs. Murdock, T. L. Park, Evangeline, H. W. Rieman, Arab, Adula, Yanoma, Mrs. Pierce, Mme. Bergmann, Waleroo, Intensity, etc., $1.00 per 100.

Cash with order or C. O. D. If you buy now you can double and redouble your stock before planting time.

FLORISTS' PUBLISHING CO.....Caxton Building.....CHICAGO.

OCEAN CITY, N. J.

Mr. G. P. Moore built a new greenhouse the latter part of last summer and got it finished before the cold weather set in, and now has it full of geraniums in 3-inch pots, and they are fine. He built the house to raise geraniums for the wholesale trade and expects to have them in full bloom in time to sell for the Easter trade. Geraniums seem to do well here in this salt atmosphere and it is admitted by all visitors from inland states that the flowers grow more brilliant near the sea shore than further inland. He has to be particular to pot them in poor earth and finds that by using any fertilizer they grow too rank. He has plants now one year old that have leaves as large as a horse's hoof, seven inches across by measurement.

The holiday trade amounts to next to nothing here. The Easter trade is better. A great many people that have summer cottages come down and live here for a week at Easter time, and they want some flowers and plants to decorate with. It would seem very monotonous here in the winter to any person coming from a busy city.

The large four-masted bark "Sinda," laying on her side just a few hundred yards off the center the city, makes a little entertainment for the people. She is the largest vessel that ever came ashore on this beach. She is 360 feet long and 25 feet depth of hold and had a full cargo of general merchandise from Japan. There are nearly 100 men taking out her cargo and sending to New York in lighters. They have been at work on it for about three weeks and it is thought it will take two months longer if she does not break up. It is said her cargo was worth $500,000.

We think that when this place is built up and becomes a large city that the florist's business will be good, but the retail trade is very poor, except in the spring and summer. But it is building up fast, and we wait with hope. M.

DALLAS, TEXAS.

The store people all report a good New Year's trade.

The decorations at the Oriental hotel for the Idlewild ball New Year's were put in by Nitshe, and do him great credit.

Mrs. Holtkamp has been very busy with funeral work the past week. This lady is an expert in this line and does a good business.

The Texas Seed & Floral Co. are busy moving into their new location on Elm street.

The Haskell Ave. Floral Co. are cutting the finest lot of carnations ever seen in this part of the country. Their stock is all in the best of condition and gives Mr. Beach great credit for his skill as a grower. Their stock of mailing plants is in perfect shape and the houses are full to overflowing. Arrangements are now being made for the erection of six more large houses for another season. B.

Miami, Fla.—The firm of Dickerson & Belden has been dissolved and the business will be continued by Fred Dickerson.

Grove City, Pa.—Mr. J. E. Black, the florist, died last February and the business is now carried on by Mrs. Black.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

In regard to the fire at our greenhouses on the night of the 1st would say that our loss was not so great as reported, being about $500. We could assign no reason for the same until today, but we now think that some fresh lime placed in a barrel by one of the men, on which he had thrown some water, was the cause of the fire. We think there is no doubt but the barrel caught fire from the fresh lime, and while it had been placed on top of the boilers, away from the woodwork, a small piece must have reached it and set fire to the floor.

We were able soon after the fire was over to start our boilers and keep our place from freezing, but had these boilers been damaged we had two other boilers by which we could have kept the houses from freezing. We certainly would recommend having boiler houses away from the greenhouses, as in a fire such as we have had there is no danger from smoke or fire doing any damage to the plants. We would also recommend the building of the boiler house of brick or concrete so that in case of fire there would be but very little woodwork to burn and damage the pipes and stack.

The Mrs. E. A. Nelson

Bids fair to become the commercial standard pink carnation. It is a healthy grower, a free and continuous bloomer, and it is sure to thrive wherever grown.

The following letter from Mr. Wm. Scott (who, by the by, needs no introduction), speaks for itself:

BUFFALO, December 7th, 1901.

S. S. SKIDELSKY. Dear Sir:—Of the 25 plants of Mrs. Nelson Carnation which you sent me last spring 24 were put on the bench last August. It is in my opinion a splendid variety. A fine habit and most vigorous growth. A flower of large size, full and perfect form and its color most attractive. At first you would think it a much magnified Scott, but when compared it has none of the blue tint of the old favorite, but is a pure bright pink. It was quick to send up good stems and has every promise of being a free and continuous bloomer. If it suits every soil as it does this it is going to be a most desirable standard variety.

Very truly yours, WILLIAM SCOTT.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Geraniums.

A subscriber sends in the following and asks for an opinion. It is on the management of small geraniums during winter, and he adds that "one who has practical experience of this method claims to grow strong, sturdy, well branched plants with several trusses of flowers at selling time."

Here is the method: "Pot in the fall into 2½-inch pots, and when crowded for room cut off all the leaves at the ends of the stems, not close down, as it would injure the plant. When the stems turn yellow they can be removed. Pinch out the tips to make them branch and do not shift into 4-inch until crowded again."

There is nothing very original about this method. It is merely denuding the plants of leaves so that they can stand close together. They can't, however, get any closer together than the pots will allow. We frequently, when moving our plants in November, the first move after they are rooted, pull off a leaf or two that can be spared. I don't like the plan of cutting off the leaf and leaving the leaf stalk to turn yellow. The unsightliness of the bench would produce "irritation of the coco" with us, and we would much rather leave on a few leaves and let the plants occupy, say 25 per cent more bench room, and it would not exceed that.

Doubtless you can grow geraniums after that fashion, but I shall not try it. The writer does not say what time the experienced man shifted his geraniums into 4-inch pots; on that would depend a good deal the quality of plants at bedding time. If you are disseminating a new variety most anything will do for a plant, but if supplying plants for a flower bed where immediate effect is desired you must have a good plant. And if yours are not as good, and possibly a little better, than your friend Jones, the florist, you will not keep your customers.

Briefly, our plan is to propagate in September, shift into 3-inch middle of January, and into 4-inch early in April, taking off a cutting about February 1. This cutting makes a first-class bedding plant, but is not sold till our stock of 4-inch is exhausted. We shift the February struck plants from the 2 or 2½-inch pots in which they were rooted into 3½-inch in April, and they can be sold at 25 per cent less than the older plants and still be more profitable. I have never bought or received a geranium plant from any firm outside of this city that I would dare to send to a customer. Common, rough and ready, old fashioned, but beautiful plant that it is there are a whole lot of people growing it that know nothing at all of how it should be grown.

Propagating.

There is always a slight lull in the work from now on for the next six weeks. That is, there is no very heavy job, but now should be an active time with propagating. It is not in my province to speak of our two most important plants, roses and carnations, because they are taken care of by specialists, but now is the very best time to propagate them, and most everything else. The conditions most favorable for propagating exist now and for the next month. The temperature of the house can be kept at any desired point and so can the sand. The sand at 65 to 70 degrees and the atmosphere about 55 degrees at night will suit the great majority of plants. Without trespassing on the domain of Mr. Baur I would just like to mention some experience in rooting carnations.

About thirty years ago, when La Purite was our only colored variety we used to put in 1,000 cuttings, and when we potted them there was generally 1,013 rooted cuttings. Then we had an ideal propagating house and kept the house at 50 degrees and the sand at 65 degrees. We did not pretend to know as much then, and consequently what little we did know we carried out more religiously than we now do. Ten years ago I began to listen to beginners in the carnation line and for several years propagated them in a few inches of sand on a bench, under which there was no heat. That plan is all right, but it is too slow and some varieties will scarcely root at all if the sand is only 50 to 55 degrees.

Then last year I put several hot water pipes under the bench with a slate bottom and the sand kept steadily at 70 degrees. That was, I found, rather too warm, and by letting some of the heat escape into the house I have reduced the heat of the sand to 60 degrees, occasionally a few degrees higher. Now I find that 60 degrees for the sand and 50 to 52 or 53 degrees for the atmosphere is just about perfect, and I shall again expect to take out a few more cuttings than I put in.

You frequently have to propagate in a house where the temperature is 60 degrees, and for coleus and many other things it is just as well. The trouble with a warm house is that you are very likely to be troubled with the fungus that appears on the surface of the sand. The finer or denser the sand the more likely you are to be troubled with the fungus and although too late to tell you now what sand to use always use when possible a coarse texture. I don't mean by this pebbles the size of sweet pea seed, but about like Scotch oatmeal, but mind never as fine as a Scotch joke (which always redounds to the credit of the teller).

I was once told by Benjamin Dorrance, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., of a very simple little thing which you could buy at a druggist's which would kill this fungus, could be used freely and costs 10 cents. But I don't remember what it was. But you can write to this prince of good fellows, who grows the best or next to the best roses that go into New York and who is always too glad to help along a brother florist. In the absence of his receipt I will give you a formula that I have worked out and which answers the purpose not only for killing the fungus of the cutting bed but which we use constantly on carnations, not spraying them, but whenever we put in a batch of cuttings we dip them in before putting into the sand and again when taking them out to pot.

This is the mixture: One pound of sulphate of copper, two quarts of ammonia. Let the ammonia be diluted to what the druggist knows as the strength of 10 per cent. Dissolve the copper by the ammonia and then bottle it up for use. Half a pint of this in twenty gallons of water will kill all the fungus and do no harm to any plant. But there is seldom need of watering the bed when the cuttings are in. If you water the bed when vacant or just before you put in a new lot of cuttings you are not likely to be troubled.

There is a whole lot of cuttings that want to be propagated now. Very seldom do you get too early with your stock of soft-wooded plants, but what is of most importance just now I will tell you in my next. WILLIAM SCOTT.

ROSE NOTES.

Seasonable Hints.

As soon as the cuttings are ready they should be potted and not allowed to stand in the sand until some more convenient time, as every day the roots will be getting longer and the plants become weaker. Good rose soil, with not too much manure in it and passed through a half-inch screen is just what they like. The pots to be used should be 2-inch standards and thoroughly cleaned inside. No drainage need be used. If the pots are new and to be used for the first time it is better to steep them in water a few minutes previous to using; otherwise it is hard to get the soil wet without making it into mud, a condition which should always be avoided. Reject all poor and weakly looking plants, as the work, care and space occupied can be utilized more profitably in growing good stock.

Care should be taken not to pot too deep, three-fourths of an inch being quite sufficient. Make the soil firm but not too hard nor too full, leaving one-fourth of an inch for water. Water well as soon as potted.

Those who have no regular stock house can select some nice airy position in a house with a temperature of 56 or 58 degrees. Spread screened coal ashes on the bench to the depth of one inch; this makes good, clean drainage and prevents worms from working up into the pots. Set the pots close together and shade lightly from bright sun for the first three days. Root action will then be started, when they should get all the light and sunshine possible. During bright weather they will require watering and syringing twice a day, as they must never be allowed to become dry. Keep close watch for greenfly, red spider and mildew and check as soon as they appear. In three weeks they ought to be ready for a shift into 2½-inch pots.

RIBES.

THRIPS.

In answer to Mr. Kellogg's inquiry I would say that I have found a means of combating the thrips successfully. I have a house of five or six year old roses in solid beds that are invariably infested with thrips once or twice every season, but I lose very few blooms in consequence.

As soon as the presence of the pest is noted I put about one and one-half teaspoonfuls of pure paris green into a three-gallon can of water, stir up well and with this syringe the plants well with a common hand syringe, using the nozzle that makes the finest spray. Try to strike the buds as much as possible and syringe from both sides so as to make a thorough job of it.

I generally give them the first dose in the evening and repeat it early the next morning before the sun is high, so that the solution may remain on as long as possible. I often have to repeat this double dose two or three times before all the thrips are destroyed, but as they are on the move all the time, they will sooner or later come in contact with the paris green which has settled on the buds and that kills them.

If it is a sunny day after the first or second syringing, and especially if you want to use the cut flowers, give the plants an overhead syringing with clear water from the hose at the usual time, which will wash off the paris green, but repeat the dose two or three times, or until you get rid of the thrips, even if you have to wash it off again every day.

The older and harder the leaves and buds are the stronger you can make the solution, but if the house is full of young, tender growth it should be a little weaker, say but one teaspoonful of the paris green to three gallons of water. But I have used it as strong as two teaspoonfuls without injury to the roses. They can stand more paris green than any other plants I know of. I have at times seen an outer petal or two burned, but this amounts to nothing compared to the damage done by the thrips.

If Mr. Kellogg or others try this remedy I hope he or they will report results through the Review. I will cheerfully answer any inquiry regarding any point I may have failed to cover.

EEL WORMS.

Two years ago last December I planted a house with different varieties of roses to propagate from during the next summer, and in early spring noticed some signs of eel worm among some varieties. I began to carry out the affected plants with the soil that surrounded them, but it seemed to do very little good. So on a warm sunny morning I sprayed the surface of the soil on the bench thoroughly, but only enough to form a kind of a close mat over the surface of the soil, and after I had the ventilators opened a little I took a stick about three-fourths of an inch in diameter and made holes in the soil in every other row, reaching down to the bottom of the bench; then I poured a teaspoonful of carbon bisulphide in each hole, closing them up tight as fast as they were filled.

The spraying of the soil was done to prevent a too fast evaporation of the fumes into the air. My idea was to keep the fumes as long in the soil as possible. I only treated one bench in a day and repeated the same treatment on the same bench four days afterwards and then a week later I applied the liquid only in a few spots where I thought it was needed.

The result was I got rid of the eelworm, but have never since had a chance to experiment any further on eelworms and therefore do not feel perfectly satisfied that it is a safe and reliable cure. It did not hurt my roses in any way, but I only applied it on good bright mornings, when I could put on plenty of air and I kept a little crack of air on the house during the night after the first application. Carbon bisulphide is an explosive and should not be handled where there is fire, nor should the men handling it be smoking. I have often used it outdoors in seed beds of all sorts and have always found it a great remedy for various pests in the soil. V.

It is reported that the various companies comprising the window glass combination have disagreed and that as a result lower prices may be made on glass.

"BLOOMHURST."

Cincinnati's Model Floral Establishment.

No matter where you look, I do not believe you can find a more complete or better run establishment for the growing of cut flowers than that owned and managed by Mr. W. K. Partridge, and situated at Lockland, Ohio, about twelve miles from Cincinnati. Mr. Partridge has named his place "Bloomhurst," "Bloom" meaning, of course, a flower, and "hurst" means a planting. Thus "Bloomhurst" means a place where plants are raised for the flowers.

Bloomhurst consists of eighteen houses of best modern construction, and of about 75,000 feet of glass, two houses of very neat appearance for the help, a cold storage and packing house, and Mr. Partridge's residence. The grounds about the residence are laid out for extensive bedding, and this summer this place will be one of the most attractive for miles around. The houses for help are two-story frame, and make a very nice appearance.

The packing house is a model of its kind. It contains a large cold storage room that will hold some fifty tons of ice. Next to this are small rooms furnished with air shafts connected with the ice room. In these rooms the flowers will be kept. Another large room is fitted up for packing, and it contains many novelties to assist in handling cut flowers, and it will pay any one to take notice here and get a few pointers. A cement cellar under the building furnishes a place for flowers in winter, and being well protected the temperature never varies more than a couple of degrees.

The water supply is furnished by the city of Lockland. A large propagating house is fitted with slate bottom benches and the cuttings in the sand are looking fine.

The carnation is the specialty here, and most all of the new varieties can be seen growing and in the best possible shape. The Model carnation support is used, 25,000 of them, and Mr. Partridge likes them very much.

Speaking of some of the newer varieties, Mr. Partridge says that Lorna is his favorite white, and it certainly is in fine shape. A very vigorous grower, fine long, stiff stems and a good large well filled flower. Norway shows a prolific nature, with good stem and growth.

Dorothy appeared to be a wonder and the mass of buds looked like a wheat field. This carnation has come to stay without doubt. It is a money maker, and seems to do well everywhere. Ethel Crocker was in fine shape. At this place it bursts but little and comes with a brilliant dark color. Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson comes with short stems, is inclined to burst, and is a late bloomer. Still color and size are fine. Marquis contrary to many reports, is a good steady bloomer here, and is proving itself to be all right.

Strange to say, America, though it looked in the best of shape, has proved to be a disappointment as the blooms come semi-double, do not develop properly and it is off color. This is something hard to explain as the plants look to be doing fine and in the best of health, and all the carnations in the place receive the same treatment.

Mr. Partridge pronounces "Nelson" to be the best grown on his place, and from present appearances he thinks it to be a very good thing. Some plants of Prosperity were looking fine, but Mr. Partridge says the blooms ought to bring $1 apiece to pay. It is certainly a fine flower, with a very long, stiff stem. They come with very deep color, almost red in fact.

Some other varieties grown are Genevieve Lord, White Cloud, Joost, Flora Hill, Enquirer, Glacier, Pern, Crane and Estelle, of which Mr. Partridge is making all the cuttings he can. He says it is all right.

Besides carnations there are several houses devoted to Brides, Bridesmaids and Golden Gate. They are in fine condition. Mr. Partridge contemplates building some houses to grow Beauty and Meteor in the spring.

Don't fail to visit this place on the way to Indianapolis, and you will not regret it. Cincinnati has a great future in the carnation line, so just keep your eyes open and watch the Cincinnati boys.

CARNATIONS.

Varieties for Outdoor Blooming.

I wish to plant a good white and a good pink carnation outdoors for summer cut flowers, not expecting to lift the plants in the fall. Can you suggest two suitable varieties and tell where I can produce good stock at once?

New York. C. L. D.

The best varieties for summer blooming out of doors are Flora Hill for white and E. Crocker for pink, according to our experience. There may be other good varieties for that purpose among the newer varieties, which we have not tried yet for that purpose, but it would be hard to beat the above two varieties for summer blooming. They are also far and away ahead of the old Mrs. Fisher and William Scott, which were for many years the leaders and are grown in large quantities yet in some sections.

Cuttings potted now and pinched once before planting out will produce a good many blooms to the plant during late summer and fall clear up to hard freezing if they are not allowed to suffer for want of water. Of course, cuttings propagated in December and grown into bushy plants before planting out are the proper thing for summer blooming, but it is not too late now to have good success if you look right after them.

There are a number of good concerns advertising in the REVIEW who can supply you good stock for that purpose at moderate cost.

The Best Carnations.

I notice in last issue some criticism on the varieties I recommend as the best in their class, etc., in answer to "Conn," who sent in that inquiry. Our good friend Gano objects because I named Mrs. Joost in preference to E. Crocker. Now I do not want to be understood as saying that Mrs. Joost is in every way a better carnation than Crocker, but judging by the nature of the inquiry I took it for granted that Conn is a beginner and that what he wanted was a list of varieties that can be depended upon to give a fair return for fair treatment without any attempt at a fancy grade of bloom. A man who is capable of growing fancy stock is not likely to ask such a question, but will select his varieties for himself, and he will be likely to know the varieties well enough to do so.

That Mrs. Joost is easier to grow than Crocker is proven by the fact that it is doing well wherever it is grown, with but very few exceptions, while of Crocker we might easily say just the reverse. In fact, as I said in my answer to "Conn," wherever E. Crocker does well it is one of the most profitable varieties to be found and it is so on our place.

Mr. Osborn objects because I said that Mrs. Lawson requires skillful handling to make it pay. I admit that it takes skill to grow high grade blooms of any variety, but there are varieties that will produce a very fair grade of bloom with very ordinary treatment, and Mrs. Joost is one of these, while there is another class that produces the very highest grade of blooms if they are handled just right, but if the treatment is not just right the blooms are worthless, and Mrs. Lawson belongs to that class. Can you imagine a poorer sample of a carnation bloom than a badly bursted, short-stemmed Lawson? One grower remarked that it looked like a rag tied on a stick. The grower who does not thoroughly understand the carnation is likely to cut the latter class of blooms.

I may have been mistaken in my construction of the meaning of the inquiry and in that case I would certainly put E. Crocker at the head of the list and Mrs. Lawson a very close second.

PROPAGATING BAMBOOS.

When is the best time to put in root cuttings of the giant bamboo and which is the easiest way to root them?

E. K.

There are two or three ways of propagating bamboos apart from that of raising them from seeds, the latter method being usually out of the question in connection with the giant bamboo from the fact that this plant only seeds at long intervals, even when growing wild in India.

Division of the roots is the plan that is most common, and the easiest method for this operation is to wash out the soil from the roots with a hose and nozzle and then to separate the rhizomes with a strong knife or hatchet, and at the same time to cut down the stems to within a few inches of the ground. The divisions should then be potted into as small pots as they will go in conveniently and placed in a warm greenhouse to start anew.

The second method is that of cuttings of the culm or stem, and in that case the stem is also cut down to about a foot from the ground and is then cut off the rhizome at the bottom, or in other words a cutting is formed from the lower portion of each stem, the underground portion of these stems usually having several dormant buds near the base. These cuttings are then potted into small pots, placed in a warm house and kept moist, and may be expected to produce a fair percentage of plants.

In addition to this the rhizomes themselves may be cut into lengths of two or three joints and planted in sandy soil in flats or pans, and treated in the same manner as the other cuttings, but in this case only the rhizomes of the preceding season's growth should be used, as older rhizomes than these are likely to be blind and thus to refuse to grow. The best time to perform either of these operations is in the spring, April being a good month for the purpose.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

I have not seen or heard it stated if the above named begonia ever produces female flowers, and consequently seeds. I would like to hear from any one through the columns of the REVIEW if they have ever observed any female flowers amongst the many thousands produced by this handsome begonia.

I was tying a plant up to go out on January 2, when I discovered a fine female bloom. I put the plant back on the greenhouse bench, and on January 9 I found another on the same plant. I notice they are produced at the extreme end of the flowering chain, and consequently terminate the flowering of the chain, or spray, upon which they are produced. Both seed pods are produced upon one sub-lateral. The main growth of this is young, and rises directly from the soil in the pot.

I introduced foreign pollen at once, but I doubt if the flowers were not already sufficiently self-fertilized by the abundance of male flowers surrounding them. I shall watch with interest the result of the seedlings should I be fortunate enough to raise them. John Doughty.

ANTIRRHINUMS.

As a florist with limited room for growing cut flowers I have felt the need of something that would make a fairly good cut flower, that could be produced at small expense, that could be bloomed continuously during the season when cut flowers are in demand, and would give a reasonable quantity of flowers from a moderate amount of bench room. You will say this is asking a good deal from one plant, but you know the small grower needs a good deal in order to get along and make both ends meet.

I have found the antirrhinum very useful in meeting the requirements noted and feel sure it would be found so by others situated as I am. I have grown a few for the last three years and find my customers are generally very much pleased with the flowers. If you have never seen it grown under glass you will be surprised at the fine appearance of a vase of well grown blooms. You can cut stems from 18 to 36 inches long surmounted by fine heads of flowers from 4 to 6 or even 7 to 8 inches long, and if a good strain be selected the plants will bloom continuously during the winter and spring when flowers are in most demand.

So far I have found the white varieties the most useful. The flowers are truly fine in a bouquet, a vase, a casket bunch or any similar work.

I have also found them to be fine as pot plants, and though I have never grown any in pans I think some of the dwarfer varieties grown several in a pan would be very handsome. My experience in growing the plant has not been extensive, as my room is limited, but I make the suggestion for what it is worth and will be pleased to hear from those who have had more experience in handling this plant.

Nathan O. Caswell.

SINGLE-FLOWERED TUBEROSES.

I think it was in an article in your paper recently some one was deploring the scarcity of variety in flowers for funeral work, especially in the summer months after the carnations were all pulled up to make room for the new beds. Bride roses and white carnations, the staples, grow monotonous if used in many pieces all going to the same place.

It seems to me that the single orange flowered tuberose has every requisite for a good summer funeral flower, also good for all purposes, bridal and other bouquets. How many florists use them? We could scarcely do without them and every summer have a small field of tuberoses at our command. To have filled orders for fifteen or twenty pieces in one day without them would have been an impossibility, no large city being very near to draw supplies from.

In cutting from the field we select those that have opened most of their buds, and we cut the whole stem. They keep finely in water when so cut, even in very hot weather equally as well as carnations. For bunching with Asparagus Sprengeri as a background they are especially beautiful, they are so white, waxy and light looking, with none of the clumsy heaviness of the double tuberose. They are equally nice for all kinds of design work, using the short spray or the single flower.

By cutting off the crook at the bottom single tuberoses are fine for stringing the harp or lyre; coming at a time when hyacinths are an impossibility they take their place and are much more easily used. The flower should stand up and the tube run down into the one below.

They do not wilt perceptibly. Their fragrance is thrown off only at night, or very late in the afternoon; at other times it is not noticeable, another favorable trait. The only trouble in preparing to tie up is to thoroughly clean the stems of the old flower and seed pods by passing the fingers downward over the stem until all are removed.

By starting the bulbs in a warm greenhouse single tuberoses can be brought in bloom early in summer, as the bulbs throw out flower stalks much sooner than the double ones. Usually we plant right in the field. In this locality (Lawrence, Kan.) about the 10th of May is about right. Should not be planted out of doors anywhere until warm weather is assured. All the attention needful is hoeing and water if very dry. They love water. Our summers here are so dry and hot the double tuberose does not amount to anything, will not open and are very unsatisfactory. Not so with the single, they will open well no matter how hot and dry, but will not be so large nor fine as when rains are frequent.

Use all summer, then in the fall when frost is imminent, take up all the bulbs having flower buds started with as much soil as convenient, and transfer them to the greenhouse in any out of the way corner where they can have sufficient head room, give plenty of water and you will be delighted with beautiful sprays to use with your chrysanthemums.

One advantage in having a quantity of bulbs is their not maturing and blossoming at one time, but are continuous throughout the summer. I think if florists who raise flowers for a local trade once tried the single tuberose, they would never be without it again, as it can be used in such a variety of ways.

To succeed with any flower one must know the management and culture which is very simple in this case. Bulbs blossom more than once and must be stored in a warm place for the winter. Shelves in the potting shed or near the heaters make a good place, as there it is warm and dry all the time. S. E. L.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Old King Sol has dealt kindly by us in this cold month of January, his golden rays yielding golden crops to many hard working florists. Never mind if his warm face is hidden when these lines appear, that is to be expected in mid-winter. The good done by these bright sunny days is far reaching; blooms come in and buyers come out.

Roses are more plentiful and they are wanted. Special Beauties bring special prices, $6 to $8 per doz.; medium grades, from $2 to $5; Brides and Maids, $10 to $12 per 100, a few $15; the lower grades $4 to $8. Brides are being eagerly sought. Rather unusual at midwinter. The scarcity in roses greatly helps carnations, which are now selling much better; $2 to $3 per 100 is the price for good stock; extras, $4; ordinary grades, $1.50. Violets have fallen a little, the doubles bringing 75 cents to $1 per 100; singles 40 to 60 cents per 100. They are selling very much better at these figures than at the higher prices last quoted. Mignonette is selling well. Freesia is becoming more plentiful; it is in demand at $3, $4 and $6 per 100.

Bench of Carnation Dorothy, at the Establishment of Mr. W. K. Partridge, Lockland, Ohio.

There are several novelties to be seen. Edward Reid is receiving fine white lilacs. He anticipates a steady supply. Calendula blooms are also to be seen. Tulips are improving. Some pretty pink and white flowers have been added to the colors before noted. Daffodils are fairly plentiful. The single Von Sions are excellent, but the French grown doubles are poor, being partly green; $4 per 100 is the market price for good bulbous stock, with $5 asked for something really choice.

Julius Koehler & Son are cutting good Harrisii lilies, which bring $1.50 per dozen.

Samuel S. Pennock is receiving Cattleya Trianae, which brings $6 per dozen.

The varieties of carnations are reinforced by many seedlings. E. Bernheimer is receiving two which especially please him. One resembles an improved America, very large and full; the other is a white with deep pink markings.

White carnations have been in better demand than colored ones of late, Norway, White Cloud and Flora Hill being special favorites. In pink Joost is considered superior to Ethel Crocker at this season, the latter not proving wholly satisfactory to the buyers.

Flowering plants are becoming more plentiful; azaleas and primulas being leaders. Asparagus and small ferns suitable for ferneries are scarce and in demand.

Notes.

It is rumored that Meyers & Samtman, of Wyndmoor, Pa., will add one-third more glass to their plant, the whole to be devoted to their specialty, American Beauties.

An informal contest was arranged for last Monday between Weiss, of Hatboro, and Knorr, of Fox Chase, for the best 25 Bridesmaid roses. Both make this rose a specialty. The modesty of the winner prevents announcement of the result.

The Henry A. Dreer Co. consider Grus An Teplitz the greatest of outdoor roses. It is described as being free as Hermosa and of a rich red color, beside which Agrippina would pale.

The Florists' Bowling Club journeyed to Wissahickon last week and won three straight games from the Pencoyd team, each man making an average of over 170 pins a game. A great performance. This match sent Pencoyd from first to third place in the struggle for the pennant. PHIL.

NEW YORK.

The weather has been ideal during the past week, clear, crisp, just cool enough for comfort—the kind of weather retailers like, and they have been busy. Receptions, balls, grand opera, all have tended to keep the Bon Ton florists in good humor while the general trade has been very encouraging.

Cut flowers, especially roses and carnations, command excellent prices from the growers' standpoint. Saturday a rose of any kind was worth 4 cents; good stock brought 10 and 15 cents easily and fancy Brides and Maids were absorbed at 25 cents as rapidly as they reached the commission houses. Beauties and Liberties are not plentiful enough for the demand. Carnations hold their own and the fancy varieties easily command $10 per 100; Prosperity, Mrs. Lawson and Mrs. Roosevelt are the queens in this respect (and, by the by, a good many of them come from Queens, L. I.). Mrs. Roosevelt was the observed of all observers in Thorley's window Saturday evening and was the attraction for a never decreasing crowd for hours. These massed in the center window with beautiful branches of acacia at the side made a most charming picture.

From Twenty-third to Thirtieth street on Broadway are many of the greatest flower stores in the world. Between these extremes at all times and especially on Saturday afternoons and far into the night the crowd is constant and enormous. No wonder the florists manifest some of their skill and originality there. No such opportunity for legitimate advertising is found elsewhere in this country. Fleishmann's window had its perennial crowd. The novelty this week was a dainty parasol effect, white silk parachutes decorated with ribbons and natural flowers forming an unique attraction for feminine eyes. Up at Small's a blaze of light from innumerable electrics fell upon banks of handsome palms and blooming azaleas and vases of the new carnations; while at Warendorff's new store, with its wonderful mirror effects, the proprietor was deftly constructing, in full view of the crowd, a "wheel" of galax leaves and violets that Sir Thomas Lipton would have been proud to accept had he "lifted the cup."

As an illustration of the enormous number of violets used in the metropolis and, near it, one of the wholesale houses showed me an order for 75,000 to be used by one retail florist this week in connection with the Yale festivities.

Thorley has the branch microbe actively working. To his stores on Broadway and Fifth avenue he will soon add another on Columbus avenue up in the select section of the west side. The "branch business" is under consideration by others. Looks as though the "trust" idea was working.

Brooklyn has had its share of balls lately. The "Emerald," as usual, fell into the hands of Jas. Mallon's Sons, who bring much sentiment into their decoration for this event yearly, having "emerald blood" in their veins. They did themselves proud and I have no doubt their great-grandchildren will be decorating for the "Emeralds" long after they have retired.

The Jewish ball was another floral cataclysm that James Weir's Sons attended to with the skill and prodigality that the name suggests.

All his friends will be glad to hear of Mr. Wadley's improvement and almost certain recovery from his accident in the New York Central wreck. It looked at one time as though he would have to be content with half the usual number of legs, but that danger is passed and he will soon be "on his feet" again.

The beefsteak dinner Saturday evening, February 8, promises to be "a bird," though no birds will be used. We shall draw on your town for the steak and on Kalamazoo for the celery, but the "old musty ale" and the "vaudevillians" are our own. And I'll tell you what happened later. Julius Lang is the "chief cook" of this affair and it isn't his first effort, but he says it will be his best.

The New York Florists' Club is already active in its preparations for an eventful year. The beefsteak dinner, the summer outing, now are assured facts and the great flower show this fall succeeding the convention at Asheville, which many will attend, make up a programme that involves constant effort and interest by all its active members. It looks, as Mr. O'Mara says: "As though the New York Florists' Club will be able to point with pride to its record." The great floral exhibition in Madison Square Garden this fall will eclipse anything ever attempted in America.

I noticed in a department store window, over a mound of fern balls well dried and shrunk in the air and sun, "29 cents each." No wonder the fern ball industry languishes! I made inquiries and found a syndicate had purchased several thousand of these balls from a Japanese importing house at a price as low as that quoted to the legitimate florist jobbing houses and not having been posted on the subject of "keeping moist" and fearful of the balls shrinking out of sight altogether, they put a retail price on them lower than the wholesale florist can afford to sell them to the trade, and so make this beautiful novelty a laughing stock and a byword.

Still the seedsmen and the florists manage to dispose of their well-groomed stock at 75 cents and the developed product commands $1 each at wholesale.

Bowling.

The prize bowling contest last Monday evening attracted a large crowd of enthusiasts and twenty stalwarts participated. Never since the cyclone at the convention has more human thunder rolled out of the alleys. The third game was used to decide the winners' and as a result a remarkable lot of bottled goods, cigars, etc., were distributed. Following are the scores:

AUSTIN.

BOSTON.

Trade Conditions for Jan. 13-18.

Business was not what it should have been. Flowers in general were not particularly plentiful, and as one wholesaler expressed it, a few good fair orders would sweep every ice-chest in the city. But those ice-chests were not swept and could be found well supplied at nearly any time during the week.

Good carnations got low for a day or two during the first part of the week. Roses gradually got more and more plentiful and I think there was a drop in prices upon the best grade for Saturday. They are now running to larger sizes and small grades may become scarce.

Various Items.

Far reaching plans are under way to preserve the entirety of the working force at Peirce's. Allen plans for his two-year-old son to take his place "when he is old and gray," and he installed a bookkeeper and typewriter a week ago. She is now, therefore, about a week old, but will be ready to click the machine just about the time their growing business demands such services.

There was always an incongruity (Mr. Cartwright has a new $16 dictionary) in Boston methods of grading roses. Most growers call their best grade "No. 1," irrespective of condition of the crop, so that there is not only always very likely to be a big difference in No. 1 roses from different growers, but a big difference in the same man's goods at different times of the year. I do not know that any serious difficulty ever arose because of this little eccentricity or not. Too, the situation is increased by the fact that some growers call their best grade "extra" when they may not be better than some other man's No. 1, or even No. 2! And small retail dealers call the best grade they carry in stock No. 1, no matter what the grower styles them. But what I am trying to get at is the fact that these terms are not used so much as formerly. Probably the chief reason is that as competition deepens, more grades of roses are sorted out, sometimes seven different sizes being carried by the wholesale salesman on Brides and Maids, and, of course, he can not admit the authorship of a No. 6 or No. 7 rose. But his customers demand roses at a certain price, which he will not vary, making this condition of affairs necessary, and how can it be improved?

Jerome Butterfield.

Mr. Butterfield, well known as the salesman of James Tulis' carnation crop, died at his home in South Sudbury early Monday morning, January 21. He had been a sufferer from a bad rupture for years, which assumed such a condition upon Saturday, the 19th, that a surgical operation was deemed imperative, from the effects of which he could not recover. He was a man that will be sadly missed from the circles in which he moved, as he combined rare intelligence, good nature and strictest integrity. Much sincere sorrow is expressed by his many Boston friends. J. S. MANTER.

BALTIMORE.

Trade and Personal Items.

The flower trade is so intimately connected with and dependent upon the state of the weather that it may be worth the space to put on record that here for the past ten days (we are writing January 20) we have had ideal winter weather, clear, crisp and bright days, without clouds or even a haze in the atmosphere, and cold, but not too cold, nights, the thermometer going as low as 15 degrees, but seldom lower.

There has been since Christmas an unusual dearth of nearly all kinds of flowers. Several of our largest growers have said to your correspondent that they have never had everything off crop so simultaneously as this season.

Trade continues very good. With numerous balls, weddings, receptions, and the usual funeral requisitions, it has been difficult to meet all demands. Roses are still very short of supply. Carnations are somewhat more plentiful and are improving in quality, but all that come in are taken up promptly and at prices that are unusually good for the time of year. Violets are not in much demand, they seeming to be, at least, temporarily, out of favor; nor are they either abundant or of fine quality. Callas are short, and with other white flowers much in request. Greens are not in excess of calls, except perhaps smilax. Asparagus Sprengeri grows in popular estimation.

The Florists' Exchange (the commission house for growers and retailers) held its annual stockholders' meeting last week. The year's operations were substantially about the same as last year, and the institution is on a safe and solid basis, affording accommodations and facilities to both buyers and sellers. Its bar to further usefulness is its uncertainty of regular supplies of cut flowers, and applications from out-of-town buyers, from territory which ought to be tributary to this city, are frequently turned down. Mr. Alex Scott continues the manager, and no one more capable and painstaking could be found. There was no change in the officers or directors, save that Fredk. C. Bauer was chosen in place of Charles E. Feast, as one of the board. Isaac H. Moss, a practical and successful business man, continues as president.

The chrysanthemum show held last November, and which was at first thought to have been unsuccessful, financially, panned out so as to give a profit of over $100, much to the jubilation of the hard-working committee who were in charge.

There seems to be a disposition among some of the trade to make business changes, several places, whether stores or greenhouses, does not appear, having been offered by "blind" advertisements in the daily papers. One store has changed hands three times within a few months.

Joseph Hogarth, employed for a number of years at Patterson Park, has been selected to take charge of the public grounds and squares of the city of Savannah, Ga. R.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The cut flower business the past week was a little better, with stock not quite so plentiful. Although the transient trade was not so good, the West End florists say there was a decided improvement in the demand for decorative work. The wholesale men claim that there was a scarcity in all kinds of roses last week, with carnations fairly plentiful and of good quality. Shipping trade has improved considerably and demand in this line is now active. The weather is all one could wish, bright and warm. The fakirs were not quite so active last week, owing to the scarcity of stock.

Stock in some lines is rather scarce at present and particularly in roses of the first quality. Good Beauties average $4 to $6 per dozen and from that down to $1 per dozen; Brides, Maids, Meteors, Gates and Perles have been selling from $3 to $6 per 100. Owing to a few large funerals last week there was an increased demand for light-colored roses. Meteor, however, holds its own and good, first-class stock is always in demand at top price. It seems that many of our growers are off crop at present.

Carnations are not in over-supply though quite plentiful; the demand is extra good, all kinds and colors selling well. Common varieties bring from $1.50 to $2 per 100, while fancy, such as Lawson, Dorothy, Norway and others, bring $3 and $4 per 100. Violets were in good demand last week and hardly enough are coming in to supply demands. Californias at 60 and 75 cents per 100 and doubles from 50 cents to $1 were the selling prices.

Bulb stuff, as a rule, is moving very slowly and has been overloading the market all week. Romans and paper whites are in abundance and sell all the way from $2 to $3 per 100. The demand for valley is not altogether satisfactory at $3 and $4; callas go at 15 cents each; a few Harrisiis came in and brought 18 cents. Von Sion and Dutch hyacinths have not made their appearance as yet. There was quite a demand for wild smilax last week and all other greens sold well.

Notes.

Mr. Ralph M. Ward, representing Hagemann & Meyer, of New York, was a visitor. Mr. Ward is meeting with good success on his first trip west.

Mrs. Emma Fillmore, wife of Francis Fillmore and mother of Frank J. Fillmore, aged 85, died last Thursday, January 16, at 9 a. m. The husband and son are well known to the trade; the former is at present with James Gurney in Tower Grove Park, and the latter is a florist in South St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Fillmore were married over fifty years ago. The funeral was held Sunday from the residence, 3869 Arsenal street. A large number of florists were present to show their respect. The floral designs were numerous and beautiful. We extend our deepest sympathy to the family.

Some of the St. Louis florists have received Bailey's Cyclopedia through J. Austin Shaw, and are very much pleased with it.

John Burke, who has a place on Grand and Finney avenues, bought out Chas. Schoenelle on Compton and Washington avenues. He reports trade as being good at both places.

The Beyer Bros. on Grand and Gravois avenues have been very busy of late with several very large funeral orders.

The committee sent out by the club to hunt up delinquent members is doing some good work. The next meeting of the club promises to be a very interesting one, with lots of important business on hand, as well as an exhibit of new carnations.

It is with much regret that we read in the last issue of the REVIEW of the sudden death of Walter S. Heffron, who was well known to St. Louis florists. All join in extending heartfelt sympathy to the family.

Mr. J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., left this morning, Tuesday, for Chicago, on an inspection trip, to see the latest improvement in greenhouses. Fred is going to build three new houses this spring and they must be of the best. He will spend a week in Chicago, and the Chicago boys will find him a first-class fellow.

Bowling.

On last Monday night, January 13, the Florists met the Bankers for the second time. This time the boys took all their money by winning two games out of the three played. The top men this time were Kuehn and Beneke, followed by Ellison, Beyer and Sturtz in order named. We are now third in the league race.

No league games will be played this week owing to the fact that a great many of the local bowlers have gone to Buffalo to bowl in the National tournament. The best men were selected to represent the St. Louis Tenpin League.

Here are the scores of the last games:

Florists.	B.	E.	1	2	3	Total.	Ave.
J. J. Beneke...	2	6	168	190	183	541	180 1-3
C. A. Kuehn...	1	5	166	187	195	548	182 2-3
Carl Beyer.....	1	8	157	163	159	479	159 2-3
John Sturtz.....	3	9	155	173	136	464	154 2-3
A. Y. Ellison...	2	5	167	147	195	509	169 2-3

Bankers 12		22	862	780	844	2486	165 11-15

The Florists' Bowling Club entertained the ladies Monday night. We had a great time. Owing to the snow storm those living some distance out did not come in. Two teams were made up, with Kuehn and Young as captains. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weber, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kunz, Mr. and Mrs. Will Adles, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beneke, Miss Dora Weber, Oscar Beneke, Miss Gusoskie, C. C. Sanders, John Young and C. A. Kuehn. After an elegant lunch the party broke up and everybody enjoyed a pleasant evening. J. J. B.

ST. PAUL.

Trade Conditions.

The dullness which follows a holiday trade is now passed and business has resumed its normal volume. New Year's trade was up to the average, but showed no particular increase over previous years. Cut flowers were in good demand at somewhat lower prices than at Christmas. Quite a good demand for plants helped to dispose of some Christmas surplus.

We have had more than three weeks of fine weather, which was conducive to the best blooms, so that stock has been fairly plentiful notwithstanding the enormous holiday crop. The largest demand has been for funeral flowers, though several weddings and a number of social functions have assisted in keeping every one busy. Retail prices have dropped nearly 50 per cent since Christmas, Brides, Maids and Gates now selling at $1.50 and $2 per doz.; Liberty, at $2 to $3; Beauties at $5 to $10; Carnations at 75c and $1. There is an abundance of bulbous stock now on the market, which retails at 50c per dozen.

Roses and Carnations.

L. L. May & Co.'s houses on Como avenue are in fine shape and just now, a scene of activity, preparing for the Easter rush and spring plant trade. While most of their houses are old style, the stock grown in them is strictly up-to-date in every particular.

In roses they are growing Liberty, Golden Gate, Bridesmaids, Bride and a few Lady Dorothea. It is all grafted stock with the exception of a few Liberty, which were grown on their own roots. Owing to the prevalence of club root a year or two since they lost a great many rose plants. Not only is the grafted stock cleaner and healthier, but it is much more vigorous in growth and repays in increased production several times over the increased cost of propagation.

One house of Brides and Maids was carried over from last year in solid beds. This house produces about the same quantity as the replanted ones in benches, the advantage of the solid beds being the cost of stock and replanting and the cost of benches. Golden Gate is the most profitable sort grown, as it sells readily at good prices and is never out of crop.

In carnations, they are now cutting some of the finest ever seen in this city. A house of Lawson is a most beautiful sight at present, it being in full crop with blooms averaging 4 inches in diameter borne on long stiff stems. This house was planted about August 1, but the plants were small and weak at the time.

Other varieties grown here are White Cloud (the best white to date), Flora Hill, Melba (an elegant pink, a good flower and a prolific bloomer), Marquis (the largest of its color), Triumph, Crane (the most profitable red), Maceo (rather small but very prolific and profitable), Bradt and Chicago, Armazindy (which is an excellent and profitable variety), Genevieve Lord (which is disappointing), Ethel Crocker (also a disappointment), Morning Glory (not as profitable as Daybreak), Mrs. Joost, (a most beautiful color and a prolific bloomer), America (a fine flower, but a shy winter bloomer).

Their carnations were all late coming into crop, but are now making up and are a perfect mass of buds, very clean and healthy. Rust has disappeared from all varieties except America, which seems to thrive though covered with it.

Other Stock.

For Easter they have a fine stock of azaleas, hydrangeas, hybrid roses, spireas lilies, cinerarias, etc., all in fine condition and making good headway for the greatest event in their lives.

They also have the largest stock of Bostons in all sizes in the northwest, and a house of A. cuneatum. A fine lot of seedling ferns for ferneries was being potted off at the time of my visit, about 12,000 having been grown from spores planted in September. In addition to these good things they have over 20,000 bedding geraniums in 2-inch pots ready for a shift and have just potted off 12,000 carnation cuttings from the bench.

Large quantities of valley are forced each year for their retail trade as well as 75,000 Romans and Paper Whites and a great many tulips and hyacinths. Two houses are devoted to stock for the catalogue mail trade. Their range of glass consists of less than 50,000 square feet, but their output is double that of some places of the same size.

Frank Gustafson is foreman of the place, having been with the firm for eight or nine years, the last ten months in his present position. He is considered one of the best all around growers in the state. X. Y. Z.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

The executive committee of the Society of American Florists will meet at the Swannanoa Hotel, Asheville, N. C., Tuesday, March 4, to make arrangements for the convention of 1902 and transact such other business as may come before the committee for the welfare of the organization. Members of the society are invited to send to the secretary's office any suggestions that they feel disposed to offer regarding the society's general work or that will make for success in the approaching convention.

Plant Registration.

The American Rose Co., Washington, D. C., register new rose "Miss Alice Roosevelt," a sport from Mme. Abel Chatenay. Mme. Abel Chatenay originated with Pernet-Ducher, of Lyons, France, in 1894, the result of Dr. Grill x Victor Verdier, and is somewhat of the form and color of La France. It is a constant bloomer and good forcer; hardy in all sections of the United States. The sport which is now registered as Miss Alice Roosevelt originated with the American Rose Co. in 1898. The color of the flower is described as an intense dark pink without any trace of carmine. WM. J. STEWART, Secretary.

CANDYTUFT.

Mr. William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., says that since the publication in the REVIEW of the picture of his house of candytuft and the accompanying notes he has received a great many letters inquiring the price of seed, method of forcing, etc. He requests us to state that he has no seed of this strain for sale this year, but will possibly put it on the market next year.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Roses continue very scarce and prices have stiffened further. Very ordinary stock will bring $4 to $6 and good stuff will sell at $8 to $10, with some extra fancy reaching as high as $12. Beauties are as scarce as the teas and the price for the long-stemmed stock ranges from $4 to $6 per dozen. The scarcity of roses has increased the call for carnations and prices are stronger in consequence. Good stock sells at $2 to $3, with some specially fancy reaching $4 and poor Scotts selling down to $1.

Violets are a glut, the great quantity of poor quality Lady Campbells causing most of the trouble. Good colored Marie Louise go all right, but there are Campbells to burn. One dealer says that Campbell is all right to help out early in the season, but that after the holidays they should be cleaned out and the space devoted to something else, as no one wants Campbell when good Marie Louise are to be had, and the presence of great quantities of the former simply glut the market and pull down prices for all.

Bulb stuff is also in excess of demand. This applies to valley as well as Romans and narcissus. Tulips are making their appearance, but no one seems to be specially hungry for them yet.

Conditions generally are, however, good for the season. Prices on all stock are averaging well above those of last year, with the exception of violets.

Carnation Exhibition.

The annual carnation exhibition of the Florists' Club was held Wednesday afternoon and evening this week in a large room in the Atlas Block, corner Wabash avenue and Randolph street.

Two large vases of the splendid scarlet carnation Adonis were shown by E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., and they attracted much attention. Hill & Co. also had on display two vases of the fine new pink variety Cressbrook, two vases of their new variegated sort Gaiety and a large vase of fine blooms of the white Lorna.

Henry Weber & Sons, Oakland, Md., showed a vase of Norway, a fine white, and Dailledouze Bros., Flatbush, N. Y., sent a vase of their pink variety Floriana, while E. T. Grave, Richmond, Ind., exhibited a vase of fine blooms of Dorothy. R. Witterstaeter sent a vase of his fine pink Enquirer. J. B. Goetz sent a few blooms of his new pink carnation Oriole, which were very inferior to existing varieties. Boehringer Bros., Bay City, Mich., sent some blooms of "Daybreak Perfection" that were worthy the name.

The largest display was made by the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill. They put up a superb lot of blooms and many vases of them. Of their new varieties they showed Mrs. Potter Palmer, a splendid scarlet; Mrs. Higinbotham, a fine Daybreak pink; Harlowarden, a grand crimson; Marshall Field, a fine variegated, a cross between Bradt and Pingree; and Chicot, lightly variegated. Also unnamed white that made a very favorable impression. A vase of their Bon Homme Richard, white, contained a fine lot of blooms with stems over 30 inches long. They also showed vases of Roosevelt, Norway, Lawson, Marquis and Nydia.

Peter Reinberg showed vases of fine blooms of Prosperity, Guardian Angel, Marquis, Lawson and Genevieve Lord. The Guardian Angel Orphan Asylum showed vases of Guardian Angel, White Cloud and Armazindy. M. Becker, Rose Hill, showed a vase of a white seedling that seemed very promising, also a vase of mixed seedlings. J. T. Anthony had on exhibition a vase of a good pink seedling, a cross between Red Bradt and Tidal Wave, and vases of White Cloud and Lord.

C. Schweigert, Niles Center, showed a vase of Marquis that were very well done, also a vase of fine giant mignonette. F. Bahr, Highland Park, displayed a huge bunch of Princess of Wales violets that were extra fine.

Various Items.

Those who expect to attend the coming convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society at Indianapolis should report to Mr. E. F. Winterson, 45 Wabash avenue, so they may be provided with berths in the special car that is being arranged for.

Benthey & Co. will in the spring add to their plant at Newcastle, Ind., two new houses, each 28x300. The Garland iron gutters will be used and the style of construction will be uniform with that of the existing range.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting some splendid blooms of Prosperity carnation which sell at $8 to $10 per 100. They grow it cool and allow the blooms to develop slowly.

When the eight Chicago bowling teams started for Buffalo to participate in the great tournament there the Florists' Bowling Club decorated their special cars most elaborately with flowers. This courtesy was acknowledged in a most hearty way by the bowlers on the train.

Recent visitors: J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; J. M. Smely, Aurora, Ill.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.

W. E. Lynch has rapidly recovered from the attack of diphtheria noted last week, but now his wife is down with the same disease. The two children have so far escaped.

An adjourned meeting of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, for the election of officers and other business, will be held at room 630 Rialto Building, next Saturday, January 25, at 2 p. m.

Mr. E. F. Winterson is enjoying a visit from his brother, J. J. Winterson, and his wife, of Tacoma, Wash. This is the brother who was in a bad railway accident some time ago. He is pretty lively for a man who has passed through such an awful experience and is apparently much enjoying his visit here. He brought Ed a little present in the way of a gold watch, of which the latter is naturally very proud.

At a meeting after the games arrangements were made for the Milwaukee trip and it was decided to go by the C. M. & St. P. on the train leaving at 6:30 p. m. next Saturday. The fare will be $3.40 for the round trip. There promises to be a large party and a jolly time. Those not at the meeting and who intend to go should notify P. J. Hauswirth, 13 Congress street, so proper dining car arrangements may be made in advance. The officers of the bowling club will be at the station ahead of train time and will have a supply of the special rate tickets there.

THE BOGUS CHECK MAN.

A subscriber in Evansville, Ind., writes that a bogus check man recently victimized him in an especially smooth manner, and his familiarity with the florist business leads him to believe he may make a specialty of passing bogus checks on florists. He warns others to be on the lookout.

The subscriber's place of business is near a cemetery and the "customer" ordered a $5 wreath to be ready to use at the funeral of his sister who had died in St. Louis, and whose body would arrive from that city in the morning. He stated that he was a cousin of a well known citizen whom he called familiarly by his first name, and finally tendered in payment for the wreath a check for $10, signed by the name of the well known citizen. It seemed to be all right and the $5 change was given him. The whole thing was so smoothly done that our subscriber had not the least suspicion of anything being wrong.

The fellow was a medium sized, well dressed man, a decided brunette with heavy dark moustache, and had a queer, high pitched voice. Other florists had better be on the lookout for him.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is scarce save Romans, narcissus and valley. The demand for these flowers is on the increase, and the past week showed much larger sales and well up to quoted prices. Romans are now selling at from 2 to 3 cents; narcissus, 3 cents; valley, 3 to 4 cents. The demand for Harrisii lilies is especially active and there are not nearly enough to fill all orders. They bring $15 per 100. Callas, too, are selling well and bring $1 to $1.50 per dozen.

There are scarcely any Beauties to be had in this market, and those obtainable are not of very good quality. Brides, Maids and Meteors are all in short supply, with price at from 4 to 8 cents. Some extra stock reaches 10 cents. Good Liberties bring as high as 12½ cents, with shorts at 4 to 5 cents.

Carnations are also short of the demand, but there are more of them in proportion than there are roses. White is the scarcest color, with red a close second. Ordinary grades bring $1.50 to $2 per 100 and fancies $3 to $4 per 100.

Violets are about equal to the demand and there is a fair supply of them. Doubles bring 50 cents to $1 per 100; singles, Princess of Wales, 75 cents to $1.50 per 100.

Shipping trade is very lively and it is this factor that helps to make flowers so scarce.

There is considerable funeral work being done by the retail stores and consequently white flowers are in best demand.

The weather is very moderate and all kinds of stock in greenhouses is doing well. With the thermometer at about 40 degrees at noon every day and the sun shining brightly there ought to be an increase in the supply of stock coming in. In all the houses of carnations I have seen lately there have been thousands of buds in sight and they must open sometime and this weather is certainly the kind that will turn the trick. With roses it is different, as there were but few buds to be seen, so I believe it will be some time before there is another over supply of roses in this market.

Business was rather quiet in the flower market last Saturday. Quite a number of the stand holders were present, as the weather was mild, but the hoped for business failed to materialize.

Mr. W. C. Nolan, who is now with Mr. Yarrington, Lexington, Ky., was in this city last week to attend the funeral of his sister.

Mr. J. M. Gasser of Cleveland was a caller here last Saturday. He was on his way to Florida for his health.

DETROIT.

Club Meeting.

At the last meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, held on January 15, a most interesting paper on the "Duties of a Trade Paper's Correspondent" was read by E. A. Scribner, who made some good points, one especially, being the advertising of something cheap by some unreliable party and thus doing the party up who bought on the strength of the ad in the trade paper, Mr. S. claiming that all ads should pass through the hands of the correspondent or be reported upon by him as to their responsibility, thus securing the purchaser in some measure from being done up. A very animated discussion was held on the question "Why do carnations go to sleep?" But after it was closed no one was the wiser.

A Visit to Mt. Clemens.

The writer took a trip to Mt. Clemens lately and visited all the growers and found Taylor's Lawsons the best he had seen in a long time. Klagge was just finishing the 13,000 violets to close out one picking in one house, and they were beauties. The florists of the Bath City have been having a strange experience with the new water furnished by the city, which is procured from wells from 25 to 40 feet deep, and contains something that seems deleterious to roses, those in Breitmeyer's new plant seeming to be very badly affected, but improving now, as this firm is now pumping its own water from the Clinton river. They have also bought glass for another new house, 35x300 feet, and bought cheap, too, at $3.30 per box, 16x16 D. S. A. glass.

A delegation of fifteen or sixteen will attend the carnation meeting in February, if all is well.

Rag.

Youngstown, O.—E. C. Gething, receiver of the firm of Hood & Cox, of Hubbard, says the appraisement of the partnership property amounted to $2,508.36.

OMAHA.

State Hort. Meeting.

The Nebraska State Horticultural Society met in annual session at Lincoln, Neb., last week. There were many valuable papers read, the following being of particular interest: "How Trees Came to Nebraska," by Dr. Charles E. Bessey, which was treated in a masterly style; "Some Advanced Thoughts on Plum Culture," by Theo. Williams, Benson, Neb., was a general surprise to all present and the society voted him its thanks for his talk on plum hybridization and its effects for the middle west. Truly Mr. Williams is the Burbank of the middle west states. "The Origin of Arbor Day and Its Results," by Hon. J. Sterling Morton,, the sage of Arbor Lodge, Neb., was a genuine pleasure to all present. Professor Sheldon, in his talk on the diseases of carnations, also treated on the fungi of the cutting-bed and seed-flats, which he claims is identical, the writer, himself, seeing the fungi in seed-flats on imported seeds.

J. J. Hess, of Omaha, was elected second vice president, and W. J. Hesser, of Plattsmouth, member of the board. These are the florists on the board of directors. Below is a list of members elected:

L. M. Russell, Lincoln, president; G. J. Christy, Johnson, first vice-president; J. J. Hess, Omaha, second vice-president; C. H. Barnard, Table Rock, secretary; Peter Youngers, Geneva, treasurer; G. A. Marshall, Arlington; E. F. Stephens, Crete; W. J. Hesser, Plattsmouth; directors.

Toledo, Ohio.—Mrs. E. Suder recently added several new houses, each 23x100. The Garland iron gutter construction was used and she says it has so far been very satisfactory.

Hutchinson, Kans.—Mr. John Stamm is making arrangements for extensive improvements in his establishment the coming spring.

West Mentor, O.—Carl Hagenburger will build seven new houses the coming spring, all to be devoted to carnations.

The mail that brings the Review is always looked out for.—James Hockey, Pawtucket, R. I.

Petoskey, Mich.—Mr. Frank A. Goeeke, of the Petoskey Floral Co., reports business as very satisfactory. He is growing some very fine carnations, extra large blooms with fine long stems. Bellefontaine, O.—Poole & Purllant are well pleased with their business during the past year and anticipate that the coming year will eclipse the last.
